HOMESICK HE TRAVELS 78 MILES TO HIS WORK.

Illinois Legislator at Capital Before Others Are Awake.

Backward cakes and country measure at home in Edwardsville at 5 a. m., legislative duties in Springfield from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. and back to steaming hot muffins and fried chicken at home at 8 p. m.—such is the itinerary of State Representative William Dickman of Illinois in his daily round trip between home and statehouse, with which he staves of no fatigue.

An hour or two before dawn Dickman arises, and after getting the day's work on his farm started he sets down to a toothsome meal of home grown ham and eggs, cakes, sausage and milk, all of a frothiness that is a stranger to the lunch counters and dining halls of Springfield.

He takes a trolley car at his farm gate just as the sun comes up and speeds off on his run of seventy-eight miles, reaching Springfield before the call boys at the hotels start to rouse his colleagues from their slumbers.

An hour before Speaker Adkins mounts the deck of the ship of state Dickman is in his seat. He spends the day in legislative activities and at nightfall is off again on his return trip of seventy-eight miles—no homesickness for him so long as some is with-in three hours' reach.

"I believe in enjoying all the comforts of home so long as my public business does not suffer," says Dickman. "I'm strong for the fresh eggs, the fresh milk and the rest of it. I admit one can get good food in Springfield, but it's worth a seventy-eight mile ride to sit down with one's family, isn't it?"

KNOW YOUR CITY CAMPAIGN.

Trenton, N. J., Starts Municipal Advertising at Home.

To teach Trenton (N. J.) people exactly what their city possesses in the way of municipal advantages, to show them what its municipal disadvantages are and to convince them of its municipal needs Trenton has planned a "know your city" week.

The celebration will be in the nature of the inauguration of a campaign of municipal education based on the theory that thousands of persons are content to live all their lives in a city without inquiring what kind of city it is in which they live.

Nor is it proposed to end the matter with the six days' celebration, for those who have arranged it have planned to continue the educational work until all the things that are needed to make Trenton a greater and better city shall have been accomplished.

The chamber of commerce was prompt to lend its support to the project. The Civics association, the Contemporary, the Young Men's Christian association, the charity organizations, churches—in fact, all associations devoted to uplifting—pledged to the support of the plan.

The scope of "know your city" discussions will not be limited. Some who attend the meetings may be committed to work for better methods of distributing charity among the poor of the city. These will be given the chance to tell of their work and to suggest plans for increasing its efficiency. Some may have for their object the boosting of the city as a residence and commercial center, others to proclaiming its advantages as an industrial city.

BOY SCOUT PROVED MERIT.

Helped Policeman Stop Runaway and Prevented Water Damage.

The practical value of the boy scout movement has been made clear to a Providence (R. I.) policeman by two acts of helpfulness in which a boy of fifteen, a member of the local organization, recently figured.

The patrolman had just managed to stop a runaway team when, glancing around, he saw a boy hanging to the other bridle. "Hold the horse, sir, until the owner comes up," said the boy, and he did.

The same boy a few days later happened to hear water running inside a house and, finding it impossible to arouse any one, took a long, cold walk to the city hall and notified the water department. Inquiry showed that a pipe had frozen and burst and that serious loss would have resulted had the deluge continued.

MONTENEGRINS BIG FEEDERS.

Legislator Presents Ox to Fellows and Adjournment Follows.

It is reported from Cetinje that the members of the skupstina were still feasting on the third day of the orthodox Christmas on the remains of the well fed or presented by Mirdelo J. Jitch, a patriotic peasant, to the Montenegrin house of representatives. The arrival of the animal in Cetinje caused a sensation in the capital.

Mirdelo led it himself in front of the skupstina, and the legislators hurried out to view it and discuss the place and manner of roasting, with all other details so that it could be partaken of in accordance with the donor's intent comfortably and fraternally by all the members. With the disappearance of the last shred of beef the house will resume its labors, and a vote of thanks will be passed to Mirdelo.

Imports Show Big Increase.
A complete report from the New York custom house for 1910 will show an increase of $250,000,000 in the value of imports above the figures of the previous year.

PIGS NO BURDEN TO CITY FATHERS

So New York May Amend Its Ancient Code.

FENCES NO LONGER CARES.

Neither Are Possible Invasions of Property by "Cattle, Sheep, Hogs or Other Animals," So Aldermen Are Not Called Upon to Decide Trespass Damages on Broadway.

The New York aldermen at present have on their hands the task of bringing up to date the code of ordinances for the city. Mayor Gaynor requested a revision of the code last year and, dissatisfied with the result, has asked the city fathers to do some more codifying.

The mayor's objection to the code as it stands is that it is not up to date. There are many sections which have grown obsolete, he says, and which ought to be cut out along with other sections which are in conflict with state laws which take precedence.

As an illustration of how far behind the times are some of the code's provisions Chief Francis V. E. Oliver of the bureau of licenses thinks that the following paragraphs, which he ran across the other day, are about the worst:

"All outside and boundary fences and all fences erected on the line of any public road, street, lane or avenue in the borough of Manhattan shall be at least five feet high and shall be built of good and substantial materials, sufficient in all respects to keep out and prevent the encroachments of cattle, sheep, hogs and other animals, and shall be kept in good repair and of the height above mentioned."

Up to the Tenants.

The owner or owners, lessees or lessee, tenant or tenants, of any lot, piece of ground or premises upon which any fence of the height and kind that shall not be erected in the manner and maintained at the height mentioned in the preceding section or who, having erected the same, shall not keep the same in good repair shall not recover for any damage he, they or she may sustain from cattle, sheep, hogs or other animals doing damage upon his, their or her premises, nor shall any cattle, sheep or other animal be placed in pound for doing damage unless such fence be erected and kept of the height and in the manner mentioned in the last preceding section.

"In case of any dispute between the parties concerning any fence embraced within this article or the sufficiency thereof the matter shall be determined by the alderman for the time being of the district in which such fence may be situated."

Police in Doubt.

Just how long it has been since any ordinance of this sort has had any application in Manhattan no one seems able to figure out offhand. The aldermen don't know. The only thing they are certain about is that none of them has been called on recently to estimate the value of Jane Doe's pansies destroyed by Dick Roe's live stock.

The members of the police force are supposed to keep posted on everything, and accordingly an inquiry was made of a young Colossus at leisure for the moment from directing streams of traffic at a Broadway crossing.

"Is there any place in Manhattan," he was asked, "where you need laws to keep cattle or other animals from running loose on the streets?"

"Say, friend," replied the traffic man after a minute's close inspection of the inquirer, "what did you see? Was it a pink elephant or a green graffe?"

Investigation elsewhere was equally fruitless further than to elicit the information that this law of the animal world is one of the ones that Mayor Gaynor wants chopped out.

RHEAS FOR HIS DAUGHTERS.

Man Back From Argentina Tells of the Capture.

R. D. Andrew of Chicago, who sells harvesting machinery to the farmers of Argentina, has arrived home from Buenos Aires with two young ostriches. The birds are each two months old and about the size of full grown turkeys.

The young ostriches, which are called rheas, are of no particular value in Argentina. They run wild in the suburbs of Buenos Aires and may be had by any one who has the energy to chase them on horseback with bolas.

"I have been making yearly trips to Argentina for nine years," said Mr. Andrew, "and have never come back without souvenirs for my two daughters. They begged me to bring back a pair of ostriches this time, so on the day before leaving Buenos Aires I chased a flock and caught two. The birds will give a horse a run for his money, but by throwing the bolas one can easily get them. I killed three birds in capturing the two I have with me."

The ostriches during the voyage of twenty-seven days grew just twice the size they were when caught, and their crates had to be made twice as large to give them room.

Glass Bricks Popular.

German architects are making more and more use of glass bricks in cases where walls instead of windows are essential, while light must be provided.

KAISER WILHELM.
Illness of German Emperor More Serious Than at First Reported.

The present indisposition of Emperor William of Germany apparently is more serious than has been indicated in the official announcements, though it is insisted that no anxiety concerning the outcome is felt. The first bulletin described the Kaiser as suffering from a cold, but with the absence of any fever. Subsequently it was admitted an attack of feverish influenza had been experienced.

CRIMES AND CASUALTIES.

Blackhanders at Brookville, Pa., broke into the home of Charles Volsted, a well-to-do baker, tied him to the posts of his bed and after vainly searching for money kindled a fire in the bakery directly under the room in which Volsted was bound. It was not until flames had burned through the flooring and had communicated to the bed that Volsted was able to get free. Half an hour after this Samuel Manning, agent for a brewing company, was attacked near a spot where he had been ordered to leave a sum of money and knifed in such a manner that twenty-four stitches were required to close his wounds. He was left for dead in the roadway and was found unconscious by some men who were returning home after the fire at Volsted's. Manning is in a serious condition, and likely to die.

At Newcastle, Pa., two children were cremated, the mother seriously burned, and three other children slightly hurt by being dropped from a second-story window when fire destroyed the home of Peter Eckland. The dead children are Arthur, aged four, and Margaret, aged three months. The children dropped from the window by the mother are Helen, aged eleven, Albert, nine, and Joseph, seven. Mrs. Eckland sustained burns on the body and was injured when she leaped from the window.

Arthur Knowles, a bartender of Denver was killed by a bullet which penetrated his brain after having passed through the head of William McCrary, once a wealthy saloonkeeper, who shot and killed himself in a saloon owned by his brother, John McCrary.

The explosion of blasting powder at the E. I. Du Pont mill at Pompton, N. J., cost the lives of two men, Charles Howard and John De Marsis. They were the only workmen in the building at the time of the accident.

SPORTING AFFAIRS.

At Sydney, New South Wales, John Thompson, the American pugilist, received the decision on points over Billy Burke, the middleweight fighter of Illinois in a twenty-round bout. This defeat is the second since Papke's invasion of Australia last fall. His first defeat came when he lost on a foul to Dave Smith in ten rounds. When Thompson, who is known as the Steamroller Cyclone, left the states, he was a lightweight, but he has taken on weight so rapidly that he has been forced to fight in the middleweight and welterweight classes.

Knockout Brown and Ad Wolgast met before Jack O'Brien's club in Philadelphia in a six round bout and the general opinion of sporting editors who witnessed the fight was that Brown had much the best of the argument at the end. It was the first fight Wolgast had engaged in over a year and his work was slow and not up to the usual standard. The contest was a grueling one from start to finish and Brown now wants to meet the lightweight champion for the title in a longer fight.

John C. Kling, the cub catcher, is not going to be a holdout this spring, and expects to report and do his best for the team again. But he does not expect to train at New Orleans. Instead he says he will join the Cubs around April 5 at some place where they will be playing exhibition games.
