Appendicitis.
The idea that cherry stones, grape seeds and the like are the cause of appendicitis does not seem to be borne out by experience. They are sometimes found in the vermiform appendix, but there is no good reason for believing that they really cause appendicitis.
Tall Corn in Missouri.
Corn is growing rapidly in Missouri. They are telling of a Jasper county man who saw a stalk shooting out of the ground so fast that he thought it was oil spouting from the earth and he forthwith organized an oil company and began to sell stock.—Kansas City Star.
