Correct Living is the title of a new book just issued by Van R. Wilcox, the Trans-Continental Tramp. He narrates a few of the exciting and amusing incidents of his long tramp from Atlantic to Pacific Ocean, starting from N. Y. City and walking the entire distance to Santa Monica, Cal., 3687 miles. He explains how, he built himself up, from a physical wreck to a strong vigorous man. It contains several chapters on subjects of interest to all, such as "The Science of Eating," "What shall I Eat?" "The No-Breakfast Plan," "Tramps and Tramping," "Hidden Forces," &c. While the first edition of 5000 copies lasts it sells for 50 cents.

Since the above notice, Mr. Wilcox passed through the San Francisco Earthquake and Fire, from which experience he adds four thousand words, making a book about 5x7 inches, in cloth binding. Price one dollar. Address orders for either style (paper cover, without San Francisco, fifty cents) to Van R. Wilcox, Harrisburg, Pa. 8-23

CHURNS ARE STILL USED.

Even in This Day of Creameries, Butter Is Made in the Old-Fashioned Way.

"The chances are ten to one or better," said a woodenware man, "that the butter you buy at the grocery store now was made in a creamery, for the great bulk of the butter consumed in this country is now made in milk establishments. But there is still some butter made by hand, and we still sell churns right along.

"The greater number of these now sold are of the cylinder type, operated by a crank, turning within the churn a wheel with paddles, sometimes like the paddlewheel of a steamboat; but we still sell, as well, churns of the old-fashioned dasher type, such as our grandfathers used, and such as their grandfathers used before them. I might add that the old-fashioned dasher churn is still, as it has always been, painted blue.

"Who still buys these old style hand churns in the day of machine made butter? Why, so to speak, the oldest people, and the most modern.

"They are bought by small farmers keeping only one or a few cows, who naturally continue to make their own butter, and who make it, of course, with a hand churn. Some of these farmers might make more butter than they would require for their own use; and the surplus they would sell, as they would their surplus eggs, to the country store.

"And you would find larger farmers, too, farmers perhaps keeping many cows and selling the bulk of their milk to a creamery, still continuing to make the butter that they needed for themselves and making it, as they have always done, in a hand churn.

"And such churns are sold to people living in suburban or country homes and keeping cows, who make their own butter because they prefer to, anyway, and they are bought by various people, everywhere, who want sweet, or unsalted, butter, and make it for themselves in hand churns.

"We export churns to the West Indies and South America and to New Zealand and Australia and to dairying countries in various other parts of the world."

WOMAN'S DAMAGING VANITY

Love of Fine Appearance Sometimes Leads to Painful Self-Sacrifice.

When the Leicester woman was missing some time ago, her relative published a detailed description of her. It contained this sentence: "Small toe of each foot missing." As it was very unlikely that both toes had been amputated by accident, some one asked the woman's mother to account for the lost toes. After a gallant effort to evade the question, the old lady reluctantly confessed that her daughter had the toes severed to enable her to wear very small shoes!

It is well known that hundreds of women suffer torture every week by having their cheeks tinted with electric needles, or having almost invisible hairs plucked from their fair faces. In most lonely districts—such as the coasts of the Irish and Scottish coasts—the women have a weakness for gaudy colors. A parson in little St. Kilda tells of a servant-maid of his—a native of the island—who asked his permission to take a brightly-colored Persian hearthrug to church to use as a shawl. Thinking the request was merely a crude joke, he laughingly assented. To his astonishment, he held her, a little later, walking jauntily down the aisle of the church with the rainbow-colored rug about her shoulders, admired and envied by the feminine portion of the congregation at least.

Diving for a Wife.

In many of the Greek islands diving for sponges forms a considerable part of the occupation of the inhabitants. The natives make it a trade to gather these, and their income from this source is far from contemptible. In one of the islands a girl is not permitted to marry until she has brought up a certain number of sponges, and given proof of her skill by taking them from a certain depth. But in some of the islands this custom is reversed. The father of a marriageable daughter bestows her on the best diver among her suitors. He who can stay longest in the water and bring up the biggest cargo of sponges marries the maid.

Quaint Island.

Jethou Island, off which the steamer Courier foundered, is by far the smallest of the Channel Islands, and boasts the distinction of being the smallest inhabited island in Europe, having, indeed, only one dwelling house upon it. It has a population of about seven souls. It has no road or pathway or post. At the last census more than half the population of the island was absent, having gone into Guernsey market with the butter and cream from the Jethou cows. The weather became bad, and the visitors had perforce to remain at Guernsey during the census time.

Cow-Milking Record.

In a paper read before a meeting of sanitary inspectors at Sheffield, Mr. J. S. Lloyd, F. R. C. V. S., advocated the milking of cows by machinery. He described one or two types of apparatus in use, and mentioned that by one of them a quart of 17, in Glasgow, milked 34 cows in an hour and a quarter, with the assistance of a boy to carry the milk pails away.

Man Past Sixty in Danger.

More than half of mankind over sixty years of age suffers from kidney and bladder disorders, usually enlargement of prostate glands. This is both painful and dangerous, and Foley's Kidney Cure should be taken at the first sign of danger, as it corrects irregularities and has cured many old men of this disease. Mr. Rodney Burnett, Rockport, Mo., writes: "I suffered with enlarged prostate gland and kidney trouble for years and after taking two bottles of Foley's Kidney Cure I feel better than I have for twenty years, although I am now 91 years old." The Opening of Schools.

Teachers and school officers should get everything in readiness for school at least a week before school opens. Clean house, cut weeds, see that good water may be had, burn trash, make premises sanitary and avoid malaria and other diseases due to uncleanly surroundings.

The teacher should become acquainted in the district before the opening day of school and have the classification of school well in hand. Get ready. Don't waste first week of school getting ready. See that blackboards, library and other supplies are ready for use. A good start means a good school.

Parents should get everything in readiness to start every child on the first day. Few children are bright enough to lose several weeks at opening and then keep up with the work. Much of the dislike of school is due to getting a poor start. As a rule those who start late can least afford to miss a day. Self interest should prompt parents to make some sacrifice to give the children the most favorable opportunities. For those who have not such interest the law comes in to compel attendance.

The compulsory attendance law should be strictly complied with. If the law is a necessary one every good citizen should see that it is enforced. If it is unnecessary it should be repealed. All children between 8 and 14 years must attend some school for half term. No one can be excused for half term until he has already attended. The compulsory law increased the enrollment and attendance last year.

All districts have had time now to prepare for it and it is expected that a better showing will be made this year.

The law compels school boards to publish a synopsis of the "Attendance Law" in newspapers or to post notices. If boards do not promptly attend to it editors should call attention of board to the law. The State Superintendent of Public Schools distributed 75,000 notices to the County Commissioners and Superintendents last Spring to be used now.

A failure to publish or post notices does not excuse any parent for non-compliance with the law. There are several matters of minor importance that call for careful attention. If text books are changed at all do it at opening of school. Good judgement will decide to make no changes now. Wait until after meeting of next Legislature. The State Superintendent's supply of School Laws and State Courses of Study is exhausted. Forty thousand of each have been distributed in last three years. It is well to leave a revision of these until after next Legislature and to the new State Superintendent to be elected in November.

Respectfully, W. T. CARRINGTON, State Superintendent Public Schools.
