Coffee Demonstration.

Lee Spencer's Store was a scene of much interest last Saturday, having on hand C. L. Curtis of a St. Louis concern who are placing on the market the Nectar brands of coffee, teas and other products.

Mr. Curtis arrived early Saturday morning and he at once began to get things in readiness for a day of pleasantness and good feeling for the store. Mrs. M. Z. Elliston was to preside at the coffee and cake counter and serve the many visitors and customers with hot coffee and cake. The cake was composed of five different kinds and weighed 20 pounds, and was a fine specimen of cooking, but just the only kind made by Peter Streiff of the Streiff's Steam Bakery.

The management of the store informs the Herald that the demonstration was a complete success and that something a little better than a hundred dollars worth of coffees and teas were sold that day, and that he is looking for an immense trade to follow.

Senator Mayes for Hunters.

The Herald in just in receipt of a letter from Senator Von Mayes in which he states that he has just introduced a bill in the Senate to permit the selling of game lawfully killed, to the residents of the county in which it is killed.

As the law now is a man cannot sell any of the game he kills and unless a resident of the county hunts and kills game himself he is denied the right to eat game unless somebody gives it to him. If this bill becomes a law the hunter who kills more game than he needs himself to eat can sell the surplus to the residents of the county.

As stated in previous issues of the Herald, Senator Mayes will make a credible showing for his district, and his bill as stated above is only one of several important bills to be introduced.

We are this week enrolling the name of P. S. Payne of Coeter, on the Herald list of subscribers. Mr. Payne was one of the most active members of the Democratic Central Committee during the recent campaign, and it would seem to us that he would be in line for some of the political pie. He's a good man, and is deserving of something.

F. M. Perkins left Tuesday night to attend the Mississippi Valley Retail Implement and Vehicle Dealers' Association and the Missouri Retail Hardware Association, both associations of which Mr. Perkins is a member. He says he gains much information for the attendance of these meetings.

INDIANS HOLDING THEIR OWN

Remarkable Change Effected in Race Within the Memory of Men Who Are Not Old.

Not such a great while ago, people who lived on the far side of the Missouri river read the works of Cooper as humor. He gave the Indian an air of dignity, a high standing for honor, even an aspect of industry. Trans-Missouri settlers knew Indians. They came in contact with them. Cooper's concept seemed so different from reality that, with no effort at all, the reader could make himself believe he was reading satire.

Now of all the changes which time has wrought in the plains and mountain country none is more marvelous than the alteration of opinion on the subject of Indians. The aborigines have actually come into a new world as regards the white men's attitude toward them. It is no longer considered a worthy simile to speak of the town loafer as being "as lazy as an Injun." It is no longer the right and proper thing, to be encouraged by the best citizens, to skin Indians at barter, to reduce them to a nakedness by trickery. Today, it is a crime to kill an Indian. There are men who have not yet reached the stage of grandparentage who remember when the slaughter of Indians was a virtue.

This great transformation has been brought about by the Indians themselves. They have bettered their living conditions. They have acquired education. Thirty per cent of all the Indians in the country talk the English language. Even more of them wear the white man's clothes. As property owners, they are to be envied. As workers in the field, railroad laborers, storekeepers, officeholders, lawyers and capitalists, they hold their own.—Toledo Blade.

Glad to Have Him.

G. C. Glass, a farmer of the north part of the county, and who has been farming in that vicinity for the past 14 years, was in town Monday and was a pleasant visitor at the Herald office. He recently moved near this city, and will this year make a crop on the DeLisle place, southwest of town.

In our conversation with him we are pleased to note that he is one of the farmers in this county who is wide-awake, and believes in pushing ahead. He is much interested in the development of the farming interests in Pemiscot county. While in our office he gave us a nice order for some stationery, and also subscribed for the Herald for a year.

Defining the Heart.

The human heart, always a mystery, has become the subject of further speculation, since a Supreme court justice decided that "nobody can plumb its depths." It has been described as broad and hollow, and the jurist says, in effect, that it is bottomless. One is almost driven to the conclusion that, as was the world before the first heart began to beat, it is "without form and void."

Function of Manners.

Manners must adorn knowledge and smooth its way through the world.—Chesterfield.

To Keep Plants Fresh.

There is a simple way to water ferns and flowers which will be of interest to one who must leave them for a time without care. Take a washing tub and place three or four bricks in it and put about two inches of water in the tub. Place the flowers on these bricks and place the tub where they can get the morning sunshine.

STEEL AT ITS BEST.

The great strength given to steel by small amounts of titanium is not due to any direct or alloying effect. W. Jensen assures the American Foundryman's association. Though so much is said of the harmful effects of phosphorus and sulphur, the defects of steel castings result largely from occluded gases and oxides, and in eliminating these, ferro-titanium, one of the most powerful deoxidizers and denitrogenizers known, is much more effective than the ordinary deoxidizers, such as ferro-manganese and ferro-silicon. In making good steel better, it can be used to advantage to lessen the consumption of high-priced ferro-manganese.

WOLVES INFEST ALASKAN CITY

Enormous Numbers of the Pests Have Been Causing Great Annoyance to the Residents.

The town of Katalla, noted as Alaska's chief oil center and prospective shipping port for the Bering river coal fields, is reported to be much troubled with wolves this season. The brutes are said to be much more venturesome and daring than is common with these pests. A large pack has been making itself at home, not on the outskirts of the town, but right on the streets in broad daylight. The animals visit the garbage cans of residents and help themselves to whatever is lying about. In several instances they have been observed in yards frisking with domestic dogs, and in some cases have enticed the canine pets to the woods back of town and there devoured them.

Mrs. Charles Naughton, going to her woodshed, found a big black wolf investigating the surroundings. She chased him out with a board, but after running off a short distance he sat down to watch her. When she started to return to her house the wolf began to sneak up toward her with a view to attacking her, as Mrs. Naughton believes. Her cry for help brought several men to her assistance, when the wolf made off. As yet no one has been actually attacked, but at the recent funeral of a young native woman it was a strange sight to see the coffin on the dog-sled ahead, the mourners walking behind all armed with guns, and a large pack of wolves following on either side, just out of gunshot. At night the weird howling of the wolves keeps up for hours.

HE TOOK THE WRONG DOG.

A story is being told on Jim Allen, road superintendent living in Greencastle, that shows him to be a poor judge of good dogs. A friend in a city had a bird dog and a bull pup. Mr. Allen wished to borrow the bird dog for a day's hunt. He went to his friend's home when he was away and helped himself to the dog which he thought was the bird dog. He hunted all day, but found no birds. The dog refused to leave his heels and when he returned the friend was greatly relieved, because he thought someone had stolen his prize bulldog pup. But it proved, however, that Allen only made a mistake and took the wrong dog.—Indianapolis News.

Auto Catches Antelope.

Slim Buttes, S. D.—No antelope is able to keep ahead of one of those little automobiles that keep running right along. This demonstration by John Raney, farmer, is on record. Raney was driving on a road through a woods. An antelope crossed his path. He speeded ahead. The antelope kept down the middle of the road. After an eight-mile chase, at breakneck speed, the antelope fell, exhausted. The animal was captured and penned.
