FLU EPIDEMIC AGAIN MENACING

This influenza epidemic isn't going to mean a prolonged vacation from school if the advice of the Division of Child Hygiene of the Missouri State Board of Health is followed. Instead the schools are to be kept open, the children are going to be taught how to protect themselves from the disease and to help prevent its spread in the community.

Superintendent and teachers of schools are asked to conduct a morning inspection of all children and to exclude from schools any child who is suffering from running eyes, nose, temperature and other signs of impending diseases until his case can be passed upon by the family physician. In this way any child who may be spreading influenza will be isolated. It is not necessary to impose a rigid quarantine on their families provided the person suffering from influenza is isolated, and proper precautions are taken to prevent the rest of the family from contracting or spreading the infection.

A committee of experts from the U. S. Public Health Service, the Bureau of Education and other national authorities recently conducted an investigation into the subject of the control of epidemic of diseases among school children and advise that the schools should not be closed during epidemics. This committee reports that the successful control of diseases among school children requires that the schools be kept open, except perhaps in the sparsely settled rural districts where supervision by physicians is impossible.

They recommend that during an epidemic, all school children should be carefully inspected each morning and provision made for the exclusion of all cases of the disease and suspects. The suspects should be excluded until the clinical data warrants their return to school. This method is preferable to the fixed period of exclusion. Children who are ill should be regularly visited by a school nurse, physician or other health visitor employed by the school board. The disinfection of the school room and the sick room should be accomplished by soap and water cleansing and fresh air and sunshine, rather than by chemical disinfectants.

The same rule for preventing a number of diseases which are prevalent this time of year apply to influenza. Diseases of this sort are spread by persons who carelessly cough, spit or sneeze in the vicinity

"I understand you have hired a discharged soldier as a farmhand?" "Yes," replied Mr. Cobble. "He was in the tank corps." "What sort of service is he giving?" "The best ever. I told him just to consider my little old tractor a tank, and the way he gets over a field is a caution."

of other persons. They are contracted also by putting dirty fingers and other unclean objects into the mouth, as for example a spoon or cup which has been used by another person and which has not been sterilized by putting in boiling water.

Knowing how these diseases are spread it is easy to avoid by observing a few simple precautions. School teachers are requested to copy these rules on the school room blackboard and thoroughly instruct their charges in their meaning and application.

To Avoid Influenza.

1. Stay away from the fellow who coughs, sneezes or spits promiscuously.
2. Don't kiss anybody in the mouth.
3. Don't put fingers in your mouth or anything else which is not clean.
4. Don't use public drinking cup.

Do.

1. Wash your hands before eating, or before handling food which another person must eat.
2. Pour boiling water on all dishes or eating utensils in the home.
3. Open the windows of the school room and the home, especially the sleeping room.
4. Keep the feet warm and dry, and avoid undue exposure to cold, fatigue.
5. Live simply.

Niagara Falls is not the greatest cataract in the world. The greatest cataract is said to be on the Ignazu river, which partly separates Brazil and Argentina. The precipice over which the river plunges is 210 feet high, that of Niagara being 167 feet. The cataract is 13,123 feet wide, or about two and a half times as wide as Niagara. It is estimated that 100,000,000 tons of water pass over Niagara in one hour. A like estimate gives the falls of Ignazu 140,000,000 tons.

AMERICANS IN SIBERIA SEIZED BY REDS

A report from Irkutsk, Siberia, states that the Bolsheviks at Kiuchinskaya have captured Colonel Blunt and seven American engineers, also several members of the American Red Cross and a large number of Poles, evidently former prisoners captured by the Russians early in the war.

Kiuchinskaya is located on the trans-Siberian Railroad one hundred miles west of Nizhni-Unisk.
