Southeast Notes.

The next meeting of the Southeast Medical Association will be held at Jackson.

During the recent term of court at Poplar Bluff, Judge Fort sentenced Zeb Crite, colored, and Steve Clark, both convicted of murder in the first degree, to hang December 20.

Will Gatlin, colored, was also convicted of murder in the first degree but has not been sentenced. Attorneys for defence have appealed to Supreme court.

Piedmont was visited by a disastrous fire the night of October 26, the second within a year. All the buildings north of the Iron Mountain depot, were in its wake.

We sympathize with Editor Wilson of the Review, who lost his entire plant. The wonder is that a greater number of towns have not suffered a like fate during this dry season.

Special Dispatch to the Globe-Democrat.

POPLAR BLUFF, Mo., November 2.—The fiercest forest fire since 1885 are raging on the range a few miles south of this city. The woods have been in flames for three days, and thousands of head of cattle and horses are in danger.

Farmers and stockmen have turned out en masse to-day to fight the flames, but they have made very little progress. The fire will cause a famine for feed for cattle this winter, on account of the drought this summer, cutting crops short.

One of the oldest engineers on the road is D. J. McDermott, whose record covers a period of thirty-six years. In all that time Mr. McDermott has never been responsible for a single serious wreck. He is proud of the fact that he has never, in all that time, "hit a caboose."

Mr. McDermott says that 13 is his lucky number. His 13th birthday year of service on the road will expire on November 13. His oldest child was born on the 13th of the month and he quit smoking on the 13th. Mr. McDermott thinks, too, that he has the promise of additional good luck in the number of four. He has been finding for the past two weeks.

Caruthersville Democrat.

The man who is busy is the man who will succeed in anything that he occupies himself with in trying to operate. No man succeeds sitting around complaining that the world is moving too fast for him. He will get left in the busy shuffle and the world will move on while he is sitting and waiting. The man who sits at the gate of the cow pasture with his pal between his knees, waiting for the old cow to come and back up to him to be milked, is there yet and the cow is dead. The man who hustled after the old cow, drove her up to be milked, and that early, is still milking and he has a whole herd of cows.

An interesting development is the reclamation of the low lands of this county is witnessed on Mr. J. E. Franklin's plantation at Eagle Lake in the lower part of the county. Five thousand acres of land that was once entirely covered with water is now entirely dry and is being rapidly put to shape for cultivation. A large ditch, four feet deep runs through the whole tract and is joined by lateral ditches through each forty acres. Another illustration of the practical utility of drainage is found at Tenner's Lake, near Hayti, which, a few years ago, was noted as a fishing resort and which for the past two or three years has produced immense crops of corn.

Fredericktown Democrat-News.

Two young men by the name of Perry Starkey and Bennett, who live near Yount, got on the excursion train at Marquand on last Saturday and got very rumbunctious. Conductor McGuire went to them two or three times and asked them to behave themselves as there were women and children on the train and their conduct was such as to disturb them. At last one of the young men pulled out his pistol and shot it off into the window. When the train arrived here the conductor asked Marshal Casey to arrest them which he and Sheriff Helstrand did. Each one had a gun on his person and they were arraigned before Justice Alumbaugh who gave them each thirty days in jail. This was afterwards changed to a fine of $25 and costs which the men paid.

Writing and Drawing in the Public Schools.

The parts of the circle,—circumference, diameter, and radius,—should be taught. Use the horizontal and vertical diameters to represent the equator and a meridian upon the earth. Continue the whole-arm movement exercise, using concentric circles of one, two, and three inches respectively, and the corresponding diameters. For shading lessons or color lessons, divide the circle into quarters and shade the opposite sectors one color, leaving the others unshaded. If color is not used, shade with soft pencil. Use parallel lines in shading, holding the pencil low so as to make a broad, smooth line.

Draw a circle and draw the two diameters from a pole near the center of the circle. Run the meridian lines at an angle of forty-five degrees from the horizontal, carrying them as they would appear if one were looking at the top of a school globe. Shade two opposite sectors. Locate the pole at different points in the circle so as to represent the globe as seen from different points of view. Thus, represent the globe, or ball, above the eye, below the eye, at the right of the eye, at the left of the eye. The aim is to teach children that a proper grouping of curved lines represent spherical bodies.

For another representation, draw the circumference and the horizontal diameter. This will represent the globe with the equator directly in front of the eye. Small circles above or below the equator as the tropic and the poles circles will appear slightly curved, with the concave side toward the equator; the latter curved more than the former. If the globe is held so that the eye is in line with a perpendicular to the axis through the north pole, all the circles mentioned will appear as curves, concave towards the north pole; and those the farthest from the pole will be curved the most.

The globe can be represented in this position, above, below, and on a level with the eye. If a globe is in the building it should be used, and the teacher should have a large drawing on the board. After the children have mastered the drawings, they may reproduce them from memory. F. J. HENDERSON.

burned prison October 29, and the character of man required to commit the crime for which he was executed, we clip the following plain statement of facts from the Atlanta Constitution:

The last act in the life of the miserable man whose life will be forfeit will take place to-day.

In the columns that have been written in regard to the culprit and his crime, the case has not been so well expressed as in one paragraph in the Savannah News. "He was an idle fellow, and consorted with dissolute company. His father could not make him work, nor would he work of his own volition." How he spent his time in complaining about the ill of the poor and the arrogance of the rich is dwelt upon:

He fancied himself badly used because he also was not rich, notwithstanding he made no effort to improve his condition. The harangues of the Goldman woman finally induced in him the belief that government was wrong and that all heads of governments should be "removed." The underlying idea in it all, of course, was that in a possible upheaval brought about by the death of the head of government there might something accrue to the advantage of the non-workers, they having all to gain and nothing to lose. Caligula was morbid, but not insane. Before shooting the president he understood very well the nature of the crime he contemplated and what the consequences of it would be, but his morbidity and the hope of becoming a hero in the eyes of Emma Goldman and others of her class was sufficient to carry him through it was a case of a weak, idle young ne'er-do well pursuing his folly to the last extremity.

The lesson should be a warning to the idle. The shiftless man with nothing to do, and always refusing to work; is a constant menace. He is not only a drone upon those who do work, but spends his time plotting evil against others. Caligula became prominent because of the high mark at which he shot, but the country is full of men like him, doing equally as bad within their narrow circle.

A locking up of the idlers would be the best way in which to reach all real anarchists.

Game and Fish Laws of Missouri.

As hunting is now in season, we presume our readers may be interested in knowing something of the laws of our state relating to fish and game, so we clip the following from the Jefferson Democrat:

Deer.—Unlawful to kill any deer of any age between the 1st day of January and 1st day of October.

Birds.—Unlawful to kill wild turkey, pheasant, prairie chicken or quail between the 1st day of January and 1st day of November. Unlawful to kill any song or insectivorous bird at any time, or to rob or destroy the nest. Unlawful to kill any woodcock, dove, meadow lark or plover between the 1st day of January and 1st day of August. Unlawful to kill any wild duck between the 1st day of April and 1st day of October. Unlawful at any time to catch by means of nets, traps, pens, or any device, and kind of game. Use of explosives in snares or traps in the taking of wild goose or turkey, unlawful. Night shooting of goose or turkey, unlawful. Quail may be netted by owner of land between October 15 and February 1.

Non-residents.—Prohibited from killing game in this state.

Buying or Selling Game.—Unlawful to buy or sell, or to offer to buy or sell, any quail, grouse, prairie chicken, wild deer or wild turkey in this state for a period of five years, from March 23, 1901; not to apply to game shipped in from other states. Unlawful to sell, or to offer to sell, for purpose of shipping out, game of county where killed, game as above mentioned.

Shipping.—Unlawful for railroad or express company to receive for shipment, or convey from one county to another, game as above mentioned; not to apply to game shipped into the state from other states.

Seining, netting or trapping fish prohibited, except by owner of pond and on streams bordering on private property. Nets may be used to catch minnows; nets not to exceed fifteen feet in length; and except that nets may be used by bona fide residents in back water from the Mississippi river.

Prosecutions.—Violations of game and fish laws may be prosecuted before any court having jurisdiction of misdemeanors. Sheriff, constables, marshals, market-masters police officers duty to arrest persons violating game and fish laws.
