

THE DEMOCRAT

EVERY SATURDAY MORNING, BEN H. ADAMS, SUBSCRIPTION RATES: One copy one year...

ADVERTISING RATES: One inch one week... One inch one month...

LEAD PENCIL JOTTINGS. Memorandums Made in the Reporter's Wanderings.

Local Splinters.

MONDAY.

Everything is now favorable and the outlook is that we will have the best Fair this year we ever had.

Bids from three bands were received for furnishing music for the Fair. The contract was awarded to the Eureka Band of this city.

Barnum & Bailey's big show will exhibit at Cairo on the 12th of September.

English Spain Liniment removes all Hard, Soft or Calloused Lumps and Blemishes from horses.

Mr. William C. Leech, of Paducah, Ky., is in the city visiting his uncle, Mr. W. V. Leech.

Scott county melon growers are selling water melons at one dollar per wagon load in the field.

From the files of the Western Eagle, published in this city in 1848, we see that there was a regular packet running between this city and Cairo, Illinois.

At Jackson they are paying eighty-five cents per bushel for wheat, while down here on the bank of the great river, the farmer gets ninety cents for his wheat.

There are now no vacant residence houses in the city and there is no one looking for such.

The case against Judge Fox brought on change of venue from Perry county to this county was continued last Monday to the next term of the Circuit Court.

Robert G. Ranney is operating a big saw mill plant on the line of the railroad about two miles from the Rock Levee.

Megrimine cures any headache in 30 minutes. Sample free. The Dr. Whitehall Megrimine Co., South Bend, Ind. Sold by Druggists.

Normal students are coming in from every direction and the enrollment this year promises to be larger than ever before.

The College and the Convent will open next week, and we are informed that both these old and popular educational institutions will have more students than usual this year.

Two young horses were knocked off the railroad track near the Blue Hole the other day and killed.

The first day of the Fair this year promises to be a big day. The ladies are working hard to have a big crowd of people on the grounds and they are satisfied they will succeed.

Our job department has been rushed with work for the last two months and still there is no "let up," but we are not grumbling on that account.

If you want sheet music or anything in the music line call at the store of T. E. Clark and he will order it for you cheaper than you can buy it in St. Louis.

If you wish your piano tuned, or organ fixed, call on T. E. Clark. He has two of the best piano tuners in Southeast Missouri in his employ.

Henry Kopper, agent for Mrs. Francis Meyer of St. Louis is putting Mrs. Meyer's property in this city in first-class repair and the house will be for rent in a few days.

Megrimine is the only guaranteed permanent cure for headache and neuralgia. Relieves in 20 to 30 minutes.

The Siberia refrigerator for sale by EDWARD S. LINDLEY.

Don't fail to read the new advertisement of Bohnsack & Stratman.

The Normal opened this morning with a very good attendance.

The St. Vincent's Young Ladies' Academy will open next Monday.

The decoration of the interior of Bohnsack & Stratman's store is as neat a job as we have ever seen.

We see that Clark Bros' wagon show was at Brownwood Saturday and are coming this way.

The city is putting in a culvert at the upper end of Main street, near Harmony street.

Go to Morrison's for drills and all farming implements.

It is only a few more weeks until our Fair will open and our merchants are looking forward to the time anxiously.

Merchants who permanently advertise create the impression of strength and of soundness.

Bohnsack & Stratman request their many friends to call and examine their new and elegant stock of dry goods and clothing.

When, by argument or influence, a retail druggist sells to a patron his own prescription in place of the one asked for, he simply robs the firm who puts up the original medicine.

A prominent merchant says: "I have sold Megrimine for over a year and guaranteed it to cure any headache without had after effects."

G. W. Ballard will be tried at the present term of the Circuit Court.

Morrison is selling out his stock of flooring and ceiling cheap.

The public school has an attendance of three hundred and thirty scholars and they are still coming in.

James McGowan is being green apples. He makes a shipment to St. Louis every few days.

The excursion from Maysboro to this city was postponed because those who were supposed to sell tickets enough to pay the railroad charges.

Our merchants should take an interest in our Fair this year and have something on exhibition in the Floral Hall.

This pistol was (knew) used by Gen. Geo. Washington in the revolutionary war.

Persons afflicted with diseases of the eyes are coming from far and near to consult Dr. Peters.

The Democrats at the county seat are already figuring on the next campaign, and long before the frost is out of the ground next spring a full slate of candidates will be named.

Mrs. Wheeler is putting her property on Spanish street in thorough repair and that nice store room will not remain vacant long.

The average sales of the Jackson saloon foot up about one hundred dollars per day.

Married in the German Methodist church in this city Wednesday September 2d, 1891, by Rev. Frieschle, Mr. Ferdinand Braice and Miss Bertha Hanman.

Judge O'Bryan announced to the bar Tuesday morning that all the cases must be disposed of by trial or continuance by noon Saturday.

Met our old friend Theo. Sachs, of Appleton, while at Jackson yesterday and he handed us the cash for another year's worth of the DEMOCRAT.

Called on Frank McGuire of the Civil-Book while in Jackson yesterday. We found the gritty temperamental editor hard at work but he took time to glance out at the saloon just across the block every now and then.

Called on Frank McGuire of the Civil-Book while in Jackson yesterday. We found the gritty temperamental editor hard at work but he took time to glance out at the saloon just across the block every now and then.

Megrimine is the only guaranteed permanent cure for headache and neuralgia. Relieves in 20 to 30 minutes.

Called on Frank McGuire of the Civil-Book while in Jackson yesterday. We found the gritty temperamental editor hard at work but he took time to glance out at the saloon just across the block every now and then.

Four dollars and sixty-five cents will take a man to St. Louis, take him to the Exposition and return him home.

Dr. Kohnke, of Jackson, who was recently appointed a member of the Board of Pension Examiners of this city, has declined to accept, and there is still a vacancy in the Board.

A Chicago dentist says too much kissing causes the teeth of Americans to decay.

The facts briefly stated are about these: Mrs. Kendall, wife of the deceased, received money from her father's estate, and other small legacies of a like nature, which her husband, Henry C. Kendall, during coverture, converted to his own use.

At his death he willed all his real and personal property to his wife for her sole use and benefit.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

The case of E. W. Young, et al., vs. Wm. Byrd, Adm'r. of Henry C. Kendall estate, late of this city, that has awakened so much interest in the public mind, came up for re-hearing in the Circuit Court, on appeal from Probate Judge Koehler.

The large sum of money involved, and the peculiar wording of the will, made the case interesting.

The facts briefly stated are about these: Mrs. Kendall, wife of the deceased, received money from her father's estate, and other small legacies of a like nature, which her husband, Henry C. Kendall, during coverture, converted to his own use.

At his death he willed all his real and personal property to his wife for her sole use and benefit.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

Absence from the city deprived us of witnessing the "Blessing of the Bells" at the Grand Avenue German Catholic Church, which we have every reason to believe was well worth a column in the RELIGIOUS WEEKLY.

The Sunday School under the superintendency of Prof. McGhee, was in session when we entered, and it was pleasant to see so many in attendance.

The facts briefly stated are about these: Mrs. Kendall, wife of the deceased, received money from her father's estate, and other small legacies of a like nature, which her husband, Henry C. Kendall, during coverture, converted to his own use.

At his death he willed all his real and personal property to his wife for her sole use and benefit.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

A representative of the DEMOCRAT, to redeem a promise made to Mr. Sheppard when he arrived with his strange looking sweet-box, and after considerable risk we gatted the "officer" and worming our way through a crowd of noisy young men, found ourselves in the midst of the strangest gathering of people we ever mingled with.

The Sunday School under the superintendency of Prof. McGhee, was in session when we entered, and it was pleasant to see so many in attendance.

The facts briefly stated are about these: Mrs. Kendall, wife of the deceased, received money from her father's estate, and other small legacies of a like nature, which her husband, Henry C. Kendall, during coverture, converted to his own use.

At his death he willed all his real and personal property to his wife for her sole use and benefit.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

The case that attracted the greatest attention in the Circuit Court this week and the case that was expected to occupy three or four days in its trial was given to the jury at a late hour Wednesday night, and when court was called this (Thursday) morning the jury walked into the court room and had handed up a verdict of not guilty.

The facts briefly stated are about these: Mrs. Kendall, wife of the deceased, received money from her father's estate, and other small legacies of a like nature, which her husband, Henry C. Kendall, during coverture, converted to his own use.

At his death he willed all his real and personal property to his wife for her sole use and benefit.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

It has been reported around the neighborhood that my son Michael Scherrer drove me off from his house and even forced me to go to strangers to have my things moved away, and the parties who circulated the story go on and say that I have more claim to the land on which my son lives than he has, all of which is untrue.

The facts briefly stated are about these: Mrs. Kendall, wife of the deceased, received money from her father's estate, and other small legacies of a like nature, which her husband, Henry C. Kendall, during coverture, converted to his own use.

At his death he willed all his real and personal property to his wife for her sole use and benefit.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At her death, her administrator inventoried these notes and the cash on hand as her individual property.

At