

WINSLOW DISABLED.

Five of Her Crew Killed in an Unequal Conflict.

ATTACKED BY A MASKED BATTERY.

The vessel became uncontrollable, but continued the fight until towed out of range—Great Punishment inflicted upon the Enemy.

KEY WEST, Fla., May 13.—America's first dead fell Wednesday in a fierce and bloody combat off Cardenas on the north coast of Cuba. Five men were blown to pieces and five were wounded on the torpedo boat Winslow. The dead are:

Worth Bagley, ensign.
John Varvers, oiler.
John Daniels and John Meek, both first-class firemen.

Josiah Tunnell (colored), cabin cook The wounded are:

R. E. Cox, gunners' mate.
D. McKeon, quartermaster.
J. Patterson, fireman.
F. Gray.
Lieut. J. B. Bernardon.

The battle lasted 45 minutes. It was between the torpedo boat Winslow, the auxiliary tug Hudson, and the gunboat Wilmington on one side, and the Cardenas batteries and four Spanish gunboats on the other. The Winslow was the main target of the enemy and was put out of service. The other American vessels were not damaged, except that the Hudson's two ventilators were slightly scratched by flying shrapnel.

The enemy's loss is largely conjectural. One of their gunboats caught fire and the crew of the Hudson think it sank. The flames spread to the barracks and swept away several small warehouses and for a time the whole water front seemed to be ablaze. The Hudson's crew also believe that two Spanish torpedo-boat destroyers were disabled, but they admit that their estimate of the damage is largely guesswork as the action was too sharp for outside observations to be made.

The Winslow was within 2,500 yards of the shore when the shells struck her. How she came to be so close was told by her commander, Lieut. John Bernardon. He said:

"We were making observations when the enemy opened fire on us. The Wilmington ordered us to go in and under full steam, and there's the result." He was on the Hudson when he said this, and with the final words he pointed to a huddle of American flags on the deck near by. Under the Stars and Stripes were outlined five rigid forms.

The story of the fight, as told by the Hudson's men, is as follows:

"The Winslow, the Hudson, the Machias and the Wilmington were among the ships off Cardenas on the blockade, the Machias lay about 12 miles out, the Wilmington 500 yards and the Winslow and Hudson, being small boats, were stationed close in, on what is called the inside line.

At 8:45 o'clock yesterday morning the Hudson, under Capt. Newton, was taking soundings in Diana Caybars and Pomeroy bay, just outside Cardenas, so close to shore, that she grounded, but floated off easily into the shallow water.

At half past 10 o'clock the Wilmington spoke the Hudson and the Winslow and assigned them to duty, the Winslow to start to the eastern shore off Cardenas bay and the Hudson to the western shore, while the Wilmington took her station in midchannel. This work occupied two hours. Nothing was discovered on either shore, and the boats were approaching each other on their return when a puff of smoke was observed on shore at Cardenas, and a shell whistled over them. The Winslow was on the inside, nearer the shore. The Hudson and the Winslow reported to the Wilmington and orders came promptly to go in and open fire, but the Spaniards had not waited for a reply to their first shot. The Cardenas harbor shore had already become one dense cloud of smoke, shot with flashes of fire, and an avalanche of shells was bursting toward the little Winslow. This was 2:05 o'clock, and for 20 minutes the firing continued from the shore without cessation, but none of the shots had at that time found their mark, though they were striking dangerously near.

Meanwhile the Hudson's two six-pounders were banging away at a terrific rate. How many of the torpedo boat's shots took effect is not known. The first two of the Hudson's shells fell short, but after these two every one floated straight into the smoke-clouded shore. The Spaniards' aim in the meantime was improving, and it was presently seen that two empty barks had been anchored off shore as ranges. It was 25 minutes before three o'clock when a four-inch shell struck the Winslow on the starboard beam, knocking her forward boiler and starboard engine and crippling her steering gear, but no one was injured.

Lieut. Bernardon was standing watching the battle with calm interest and directing his men as coolly as if they were at target practice. By six one-pounder amidships stood Ensign Bagley, the oiler, the two firemen and the cook. The little boat gasped and throbbed and rolled helplessly from side to side. Lieut. Bernardon did not stop for an examination. He knew his boat was uncontrollable. The Hudson was a short distance away still pounding away with her guns. She was hailed and asked to take the Winslow in tow. It was a vital moment. Guns roared from shore and sea. Lieut. Scott, in charge of the Hudson's aft gun, sat on a box and smoked a cigarette as he directed the fire. Capt. Newton stood near Lieut. Meek at the forward gun and watched its workings with unimpaired interest. Chief Engineer Catechin never missed his bell. A group of sailors was making ready to heave a line to the Winslow, and Ensign Bagley and his four men stood on the port side of the latter vessel waiting to receive. A vicious fire was singing about them. The Spaniards seemed to have found the exact range.

There was a momentary delay in heaving the tow line and Ensign Bagley suggested that the Hudson's men hurry.

"Heave her," he called, "Let her come! It's getting pretty warm here."

The line was thrown and grabbed by the Winslow's men. Grimy with sweat and powder, they tugged at it and drew nearer foot by foot to the Hudson.

Almost at the same instant another four-inch shell struck through the smoke that burst directly under them. Five bodies went waiving through the air. Two of the group were dead when they fell—Ensign Bagley and Fireman Daniels. The young ensign was literally disemboweled and the entire lower portion of the fireman's body was torn away. The other three died within a few minutes.

A flying piece of shrapnel struck Lieut. Bernardon in the thigh and cut an ugly gash, but he did not know it then. With the explosion of the shell the hawser parted and the Winslow's helm went hard to the starboard, and with her steering gear smashed the torpedo boat floundered in the water at the mercy of the enemy's fire, which never relaxed.

The fire of the Americans was of the usual persistent character and the nerve of the men was marvelous. Even after the Winslow's starboard engine and her steering gear were wrecked the little boat continued to pour shot into the Spaniards on shore until she was totally disabled.

SPANISH VERSION OF FIGHT.

Claim a Victory at Cienfuegos, but Admit Loss of a Fort by Capture at Cardenas.

MADRID, May 13.—The following dispatch has been received from Havana:

"Early Wednesday morning four American war ships fired repeated cannon shots at Cienfuegos. In the meantime several steamboats, towing eight large boats loaded with arms and ammunition for the rebels, approached the shore.

Several battalions of infantry drawn up on the seashore, fired upon the boats, which speedily retreated. At the same time the batteries of the fort and others along the coast fired upon the Americans who retreated, but again attempted to make a landing on the banks of the River Tremao. The Spaniards again repulsed them by hot volleys inflicting heavy losses. Fourteen Spaniards were wounded.

A second dispatch from Havana says: "At eight o'clock Wednesday morning three large and three small American ships appeared off Cardenas. A small boat was detached with some marines, who landed near the fort and seized it. They also seized the semaphore station, taking the coast guards prisoners."

BOMBARDMENT OF SAN JUAN.

Morro Fort Silenced and Reduced to a Heap of Ruins An Early Morning Engagement.

[Copyright, 1898, by the Associated Press.] PORT-AU-PRINCE, Hayti, May 12.—Sampson, with nine war ships, arrived before San Juan this morning before sunrise. The battleship Iowa fired the first shot, which took effect. Morro fort responded feebly, but was silenced almost immediately and reduced to a heap of ruins. The Spanish steamer Rita was captured by the Yale. Thousands of the population, with foreign consuls, sought refuge in the interior.

Resolutions of Respects.

Hall of St. Mark's Lodge, No. 93, A. F. & A. M., April 25, 1898.

To the Worshipful Master, Wardens and Brethren of St. Mark's Lodge No. 93.

Your committee appointed to draft resolutions on the death of our late Brother, Henry W. Hickman, who was killed by a falling tree near his home beg leave to report the following:

WHEREAS, On the day of April, Brother Henry W. Hickman was stricken by the angel of death.

His was a ripe old age, until his death, he was quick and alert in action and movement, of intellect unimpaired, a hale, hearty, cheerful man, serenely content, and at peace with all the world and with himself.

His God has called him home, leaving his memory fragrant with the odor of good deeds. For such men, it is but a little way from earth to heaven. Therefore be it RESOLVED, That in the death of Brother Henry W. Hickman this Lodge has lost a worthy brother, the community an honest and upright citizen and his family a loving husband and father.

RESOLVED, That our sympathy goes out to the bereaved ones, in this time of sorrow when all the world seems dark. But with confidence, we command them to that God in whom our brother put his trust, and bid them look beyond this world of trouble to a happy reunion in the Great Hereafter, where God is forever and forever.

RESOLVED, That in token of respect for our brother, who has gone before, our charter and jewels be draped in mourning for thirty days, a page of our records dedicated to his memory, these resolutions inscribed thereon, and a copy delivered to the family; also to the Cape Girardeau, Bloomfield and Puxico papers for publication.

Fraternally,
E. A. KIMMEL,
J. H. BEERY, } Com.
