

New Autumn Hats Are Here!

The first breath of Autumn has wafted in the advance designs in Millinery. The new shapes, the new colors, the new trimmings—they're all here.

To appreciate thoroughly the full extent of Fashion's advancement, you must see our first fall showing this week. You'll find chic, elegant models in profusion—a wide selection from which to choose the hat most becoming to your individual style.

The first designs are always most distinctive so we advise you to make an early selection from our wide variety of authentic styles.

A SURPRISE

Several of the boys of W. Horace Fullington's class in the Baptist Sunday school gathered at his home Monday evening and treated him to a surprise, as Sunday was his last day as teacher of the class, he having resigned on account of leaving this week for Boliver to attend college.

Those present were Ralph Brazeal, Robert Tate, Earl Canble, Ellison Gaines, Edgar Brazeal, Herbert Brentlinger and Sammy Draper.

Mrs. L. B. Latimer will take Mr. Fullington's place as teacher.

Wanted

I want 12 gourds suitable for drinking cups. Either this year's or last year's gourds will do. Please bring them in as soon as possible and I will pay a reasonable price for the same. DR. F. H. RILEY, Adv. Mansfield, Mo.

Mountain Grove now has a glove and overall factory.

GREEN MOUNTAIN ITEMS

(Special Correspondence.)

Very warm and dry
The farmers have been quite busy cutting corn. The crop is not very good, but we are thankful it is as good as it is.

Health is not very good here
Lewia Rayborn has been quite low with typhoid fever, but is some better at present.

Sunday school at Green Mountain is progressing nicely

Mr. Chancy and wife visited home folks in Texas county last week

Miss Lucy Brill called on Misses Lucy and Bertha Shaw Saturday night and Sunday.

J. H. Klingensmith was in Mountain Grove Friday.

The Dewey school began Monday with Chas. Pruitt as teacher.

W. W. Daggett of Astoria left Friday for Naylor to spend a few days.

A series of meetings is now in progress at Dutchtown. We hope they will have great success and that many souls will be saved.

Several went to Will Worsham's Sunday where funeral services were conducted. The death angel had visited their home and called their darling little babe away. The dear little one took sick Saturday evening, and died at 8. It is flying around the throne of God. The spirit has gone to God who gave it

H. E. Klingensmith attended court at Hartville.

Miss Lucy Shaw visited Mrs. J. H. Klingensmith last week.

Closing Year's Work

Rev. Joseph Davis of the Cumberland Presbyterian church closes up another year's work this month and will attend the presbytery next month at Mountain Dale, 3 miles north of Seymour. Sunday completed his first year's work at Seymour. This month will also complete his sixth year at Mount Comfort, his fourth at Pleasant Grove and his tenth at Mansfield. He has been preaching about 43 years.

The catalogues for Mansfield's Second Annual Agricultural and Stock Show are now ready for distribution. Call and get copies for yourselves and your friends. We printed 3,000 copies—enough for everybody. Come and get 'em—they're free for the asking. Send them to your friends at a distance. And while you're at it—hand us 25c to send the Mirror to some friend for 3 months. Try it once, anyway.

Mrs. O. H. Black and daughter, Miss Mary, who have been visiting the Mirror family, left Friday—the former for her home in Cameron and the latter for Kansas City, where she will visit a few days before returning to Grand Forks, N. D., to resume her work as instructor in English in the Model high school of the State University.

240 acres, 7 miles southeast of Protection, Kas. A good new 4-room house and a 2-room house; in good wheat country; 160 acres in cultivation, 80 acres in pasture; price $26 per acre; incumbrance $1,900, 5 1/2 years at 5 1/2 %; want Missouri or North Arkansas land C. T. BLACK, Protection, Kas.—Adv

We understand that some boys have been disturbing the L. T. L. meetings Sunday afternoons—and refuse to behave when so requested. Perhaps the boys may not know that the law provides a severe punishment for such actions. A word to the wise is sufficient. Be wise.

Elmer Ungles and H. D. Norcross have rented the store building vacated by W. T. Norcross, and an addition is being added in the rear. We understand they will put in a short order restaurant and notion store, and also do picture enlarging and photo work.

Save those good products of the soil and of the hand for exhibition at Mansfield's second annual agricultural and stock show Sept. 24—27, 1913.

Saturday night news came over the wire of the death of the 15 month-old child of Will Worsham and wife, which occurred very suddenly. The child was seized with a bad convulsion, which resulted in death an hour later. A doctor was called at once but the child had been dead some time before he arrived, rendering him unable to establish any conclusion as to the cause of death. The little one was laid to rest in the Boatman cemetery, 1 1/2 miles from Dawson. The bereaved family has the heartfelt sympathy of the writer.

Where Live Stock Thrives

The Ozark region has much grazing land, land available for the growing of all varieties of live stock. It could not be better situated, so far as climate and location are concerned, for the development of the highest types of domesticated animals. Between the severe rigors of the northern climate and the warm suns of the semi-tropical regions, the Ozarks possess in a marked degree conditions favorable for the economic production of all classes of animals. Far enough north to escape the blistering suns of the southern lowlands, the Ozarks escape many of the various diseases common to those regions. The grazing lands are still far enough south that animals may be maintained exclusively on them for ten months of the entire year.

The Ozarks have thus a wonderful advantage over those sections of the country where the animals must be wholly supported for six months in the year on crops grown expressly for their winter sustenance. The Ozark summers are never so hot or the Ozark winters so cold that expensive shelters are required for protection. Seventy-five per cent of all the cattle in Southern Missouri are fattened practically without shelter.

The stock farm represents the stable element in all agriculture. A tenant farmer is invariably a grain farmer. The live stock farmer owns his farm. He builds and owns his own home. He lives upon his own farm. His success and his growth mean rural development, good rural schools and healthy rural conditions. Four-fifths of the stock farms in the Ozarks are owned by the men who till them. Cattle, hogs, sheep, mules, horses, all classes of live stock are bred in the Ozarks.

The business of breeding and feeding sheep is rapidly growing in the Ozarks. The climate, soil, and good water render this section particularly adapted to the production of high-class sheep. Much interest has been shown in the breeding of goats. In grazing possibilities for general and live stock productions the Ozarks rank foremost.

Her Fruits Lead All

It has been called, and rightly, "the Land of the Big Red Apple." Not merely the apple is grown successfully, but from the very center of the Ozarks come yearly an un-failing supply of the Elberta peaches and other varieties of that fascinating fruit. Here is the center of the strawberry region of the world, and here grapes and plums and pears flourish.

Of the twenty-five counties in the United States leading in vegetables and producing about one-tenth of all the vegetables grown in the United States, two are in this region.

The Ozark farm has blue sky and beauty of scenery as well as cultivable soil and freedom.

Southeast Missouri ships immense quantities of melons. Tomatoes are largely grown for shipping and for canning in the Ozarks. This is an important auxiliary to peach growing, the tomato often being grown between young peach trees, where it pays for the cultivation of the orchard until it comes into bearing.

While horticulture is only one of the leading industries of the Ozarks, as in dairying, the limit of the possibilities in that direction has not as yet been even approached.

Grape growing has developed to an important degree along the river hills and in many sections of the Ozark regions. The vegetable-growing industry is of importance, especially in the vicinity of the large cities and in special localities.

A car of lumber ran off the Frisco house track Tuesday afternoon, but the car was brought back to the rails after considerable persuasion and puffing by an engine.
