The editors of the Mirror have been very busy this week nursing a grand-son, which was born to their daughter, and husband, Mr. and Mrs. Claud A. Edwards, last Wednesday morning, September 28th. The Edwards' home is in Burkburnett, Texas, but they have been here for a short time. If you meet an old man, with a cane and a bald head, limping along—that's grandpa Davis, the editor. Grandma Davis has not been to the office since—she is still at home "ausin" the baby. In about 29 years you will no doubt see the young Edwards in the editorial chair of the New York World.

Receipt For Home Brew.

A Cedar gentleman touring Colorado, sends us a receipt for making home brew. As congress is now considering a measure to legalize the making of home brew, in Colorado, at Ft. Morgan the following receipt is freely used and works fine:

Receipt—"Chase a wild bull-frog three miles and gather up the hops. To the hops add the following: Ten gallons tan bark; one-half pint of Schellac, one bar home made soap, boil mixture 36 hours, then strain thru an I. W. W. sock to keep it from working, then add one grasshopper to each pint to give it the kick."

poses for which the genuine article is employed.

To give some idea of the extent to which this new business has grown, in less than four years since it started, let me quote some figures taken from a congressional committee's report. In 1917 the United States imported 72,223,366 pounds of coconut oil. In 1919, only two years later, the import was 324,270,306 pounds, or nearly four and a half times as much! The figures for 1920 are not yet available, but is asserted that they show almost as great a ratio of increase as the previous. Only a small proportion of this immense amount of oil is used for any other purpose than as "filled" for skimmed milk, and every pound so used means one pound less of dairy products to be taken by the market.

If the consumer profited by this transaction, there would be some little excuse for it, but as a matter of fact that stuff is sold over tens of thousands of retail counters as "just as good", and at almost the price of the genuine article, and the lying dealer pockets a four fold profit in the deal. It is not to be wondered at that one of the manufacturers of this sham milk, and to the congressional committee, that "If you will leave us alone we will build up one of the greatest things in the United States," and we asked if the great business would not be built up at the expense of the great dairy interest of the country, he replied, "of course, that goes without saying!"

I am glad to say that the dairyman of the country have at last caught on to the business which is stealthily undermining the industry. A bill has been introduced into congress prohibiting the manufacture and sale of "filled milk" in the United States. This bill has been a favorable reported in the house of representatives, and will come up for passage soon after congress convenes on September 21st.

This bill is known as the "Voight Bill, H. R. 6215" and it has been fought hard by the interests who profit by selling the adulterated stuff. And these interests will redouble their efforts, and will spare no pains or money to defeat it, when it really comes before the house.

To counteract these influences, every person having the upbuilding and prosperity of this region at heart, whether actually engaged in dairying or not, should write to our congressman and senators, urging that they vote for and fight for the passage of this bill, and against that which threatens not only the dairy interest in the Ozarks, but throughout the entire United States. This is a matter of supreme importance, and none of us should fail to do all in our power, for it is nothing short of a matter of life and death to the dairying interests.

Personally I have written four Missouri congressmen with whom I am acquainted, and Senator Spencer. I am sure that these gentlemen want to serve the interests of their constituents, and it is up to the constituents to make their interests known.

A Menace To Ozark Dairy Interests.

The Ozark constitute the best natural dairy country in America, and our own people, as well as the rest of the world, have at last waken to that fact. The last decade has seen greater progress in that line of farming in the Ozarks, than in all the preceding history of the region since it was first settled nearly a century ago.

Given fair treatment in the marketing of dairy products, there is no reason why the thirty counties, comprising the Ozarks, should not come up to the estimate made by one dairy expert, who is well acquainted with the region, of marketing such products to the tune of fifty four million a year.

But to prosper the Ozark dairymen must be sure of a fair price for his product, a price for above that obtained during the past year, when hardly a pound of butter fat has been sold around here that did not mean a net loss to the dairyman, and it behooves all interests in the future prosperity of the Ozarks to seek the causes of these low prices.

We know that there are many millions of pounds of butter thrown onto the American market from foreign countries, and that is one great cause of the slump in our prices. But that will be partially remedied by the Fordney tariff, if our slow moving congress ever gets up steam enough to pass it! But there is another, far more dangerous menace to dairying than the importation of butter; a menace native to this country of the United States, and against which the tariff offers no protection.

That menace is the manufacture and sale in competition with all pure dairy products, of the so called "filled milk". This is simply milk from which the cream has been taken, and its place supplied by a "filler" of coconut oil. This mixture is being used for almost all pur-
