"WE ARE GONE FOREVER"
Class poem by Miss ALMA SMITH of Farmington, 1904, recited at the Wood Seminary

We come from towns of every name,
To make the brilliant epics,
To sparkle out our full of fame,
While all the ages pass.

From seven hours we come this year,
To end our education,
To make our precious learning clear,
And feel our own elation.

Full graduates now, at last we are,
And think ourselves quite clever,
Now, get home a wife and girl—may go,
But we are gone forever.

There's Nellie, we call pretty,
And teaching literature, in the class,
And there, too, for a girl, sings a ditty,
Over the grades she did pass.

And there's Mattie, not rather bright,
And there's Alma, with her art,
There's Edith, in this great dilemma,
Tears, Alma, giving her part.

And oh! we love each other so,
But now these boys are here,
And girl may come and girl may go,
But we are gone forever.

We've graduated now, so we shall go,
In little ways and trouble,
We've come through our education,
And between our parents' hubbub.

With many a thought and many a tear,
By steady, slow application,
By steady, slow application,
By steady, slow application.

But Gertrude, Lillie, now we know,
Students of the same name,
How glad we are to see you go,
We're so glad to see you go.

We'll always love you, Alma,
And all the girls of this name,
To pass the next, brightening day,
To pass the next, brightening day.

We'll stand, as if some one were
With us, and we'll stand,
With us, and we'll stand,
With us, and we'll stand.

THE HIGHER LIFE.
"A LITTLE WHILE."

A little while to work, to play,
To enter eagerly with the throng,
To dream that we are more than clay,
To float of fate and nature's throng.

A little while to rest, to roam,
To go to the woods and to the stream,
A little while to go and to come,
A little while to go and to come.

A little while to go and to come,
To go to the woods and to the stream,
A little while to go and to come,
To go to the woods and to the stream.

A little while to go and to come,
To go to the woods and to the stream,
A little while to go and to come,
To go to the woods and to the stream.

A little while to go and to come,
To go to the woods and to the stream,
A little while to go and to come,
To go to the woods and to the stream.

A little while to go and to come,
To go to the woods and to the stream,
A little while to go and to come,
To go to the woods and to the stream.

A little while to go and to come,
To go to the woods and to the stream,
A little while to go and to come,
To go to the woods and to the stream.

A little while to go and to come,
To go to the woods and to the stream,
A little while to go and to come,
To go to the woods and to the stream.

A little while to go and to come,
To go to the woods and to the stream,
A little while to go and to come,
To go to the woods and to the stream.

A little while to go and to come,
To go to the woods and to the stream,
A little while to go and to come,
To go to the woods and to the stream.

A little while to go and to come,
To go to the woods and to the stream,
A little while to go and to come,
To go to the woods and to the stream.

A little while to go and to come,
To go to the woods and to the stream,
A little while to go and to come,
To go to the woods and to the stream.

A little while to go and to come,
To go to the woods and to the stream,
A little while to go and to come,
To go to the woods and to the stream.

A little while to go and to come,
To go to the woods and to the stream,
A little while to go and to come,
To go to the woods and to the stream.

A little while to go and to come,
To go to the woods and to the stream,
A little while to go and to come,
To go to the woods and to the stream.

ed their God-given right to think for themselves. Humanity is slowly unwrapping its gray clothes. Out of the slavery of centuries men are making slow progress toward freedom, but never again will an earthly tribunal, judicial and ecclesiastical, bind the conscience or forbid the announcement of a discovered truth. This principle is not new. We are but learning the wisdom of Christ as he came to reveal the will of the Father. The apostolic age understood it. When Cornelius would have croneled at the feet of the Apostle Peter, the latter, conscious of the relation of a soul to its God, said: "Rise to thy feet; I too, am but a man." Paul would have died for his brethren, yet in the matter of individual interpretation he says of Peter, "I withheld him to the face." Possibly the world has swung to an opposite extreme, but more and more clearly is the Holy Spirit making himself known as the guide of men, and some day we shall all walk in the way of God.—Dr. William, Third Baptist Church, St. Louis.

Fig's And Thistles
A man's ability must be measured by his utility.

People who get green with envy also get blue with regret.

Antennae's limbs are taken because of Spring's prairie.

It is easier to stay out of the sun than it is to struggle out.

Fortunateness with the wrong is not the same as its forgiveness.

The rebellions motivate the medicine they should swallow whole.

The stone without cutting is without place in the building.

It takes less labor to analyze God than to obey Him.

Money may buy new gloves, but it cannot make clean hands.

Gold is more likely to break the back than to bless the heart.

People who need need advice usually have most to give away.

The church that brags of its record life may lose its saving power.

Some men who water their milk every day cannot understand why the prayer meeting seems so faint.

The greatness of a man is not evidenced by his limiting faults, but by him fixing them.

A man who feels like apologizing for his religion needs to apologize for what he has.

It is easy to preach coolness when you have nothing to do but to sit on a refrigerator.

The devil may steal the setting, but the jewel of life you cannot lose unless you give it away.

The impure thought is easily crushed before it is spoken, but who enters it's contagion after words?

It makes all the difference whether you're religion is the servant of your business or your business is the servant of your religion.—Rams' Horn.

Value of Friendship
All right long the disciples had toiled and had taken nothing. In the moment of their discouragement their dear friend and teacher came to them, saying: "Try again and this time do not be afraid, launch out into the deep." Encouraged by his friendly presence they obeyed his injunction and gained a great multitude of fishes. What value there is in a true and true friend.

We may say what we will of human independence and the residual powers in human nature by which each man is capable of fighting his own battles, but the actual fact is that we must "bear each other's burdens" in this world or we make little progress. Our human life is a network of relations. No man can live to himself alone. We are helped all along the way of life by the friendships we form, and happy are we in our struggle if there appears to us such a friend as the great Master encouraging and helping his humble friends and examples.

We need friendship in the outward practical affairs of life. Many a man who has nobly used his opportunities and gained great success, gladly acknowledges his indebtedness to some kind friend who in his youth and poverty came to him with a helping hand and used his great influence at the right moment.—Our Young Folks.

The Light of Truth
Our age is revealing most clearly the purposes of deities. The light of truth is flooding the world. The ends which Christ came to accomplish are slowly but surely being reached. One needs but to compare this age with any other to see the marvelous outworking of the eternal purposes of God. Think of the victories in the realm of the mind. In the fierce bigotry of the past men were burned because they dared to think, but today we are recognizing the right of the individual conscience. The Declaration of Independence, the Magna Charta of individual rights, was possible only in a civilized land, an enlightened Christian land, one in which men had enjoy-

HAS SOLVED THE PROBLEM
Man Lives Six Weeks and Three Days On Fresh Air.

Austin Shaw, of Brooklyn, Can Save Money By Working Every Day and Not Eating.

New York, June 4.—Austin Shaw, of Brooklyn, has broken all records for self-starvation, having gone 45 days without an ounce of solid food, cooked or uncooked, passing his lips. During the fast, it is claimed, he lost 150 pounds, but never once did he swoon from his starvation resolve.

"How do you account for the fact that you are sound and strong after so long a fast?" Shaw was asked.

"Fresh air is the secret," he said. "You may say I lived during the last six weeks on air. I gave up coffee at breakfast and meat three years ago. I never take anything but a glass of water before noon. I never drink with my meals. As to my fast, I began with five days' abstinence at a time with six weeks between fasts. Gradually I lengthened the time of going without food to ten days, until recently I found I could go forty-five days without eating, without the least discomfort."

Admiral Enquete's flagship immediately sailed to the White House by Secretary Martin, where it was discussed by the president and Secretary Taft.

By a Slight Touch On a Key of Gold President Starts Lewis and Clark Exposition.

IN IMMENSE THRONG WITNESSED THE EXERCISES.

Vice-President Fairbanks Represented the President—The Opening Exercises Were Brief But Impressive, and Partook in Now Realization of the Front of the Labor.

Portland, Ore., June 2.—By a slight touch of a key of gold, President Roosevelt, from the far eastern part of the United States, Thursday night set in motion the machinery of the Lewis and Clark exposition, which will be held in the city of Portland, Ore., from June 1 to June 30.

The opening exercises were brief though impressive. Departing from precedent, the gates to the exposition were opened early, so that the crowd could assemble before the ceremony. The first demonstration was a parade of the grounds in which military, civic and special features predominated.

The formal exercises were held on the shores of the Willamette river, where the steps of the ground, raised and embellished with seats, formed a natural amphitheater for many thousands.

Two distinct throngs were led over the Willamette river. The first was a throng of thousands of people, who were welcomed by the city authorities. The second throng was a throng of thousands of people, who were welcomed by the city authorities.

MISSOURI STATE NEWS.

Four Drowned in James River. The drowning of a small rowing party in the James river, six miles south of Richmond, caused the drowning of four young ladies, Miss Lulu Rhodes and Miss Maggie Yates, and two young men, Frank C. Gray and Fred Lee. Two other occupants of the boat swam to the bank and were saved. The bodies of all four were recovered. The drowned persons were members of a picnic party. After luncheon had been eaten, someone suggested that the young men row the girls across the river. The six persons completely filled the small boat and made rowing impossible. The young men pulled into the stream, but when about half way across a whirlpool was encountered. The boat spun rapidly around, shipping much water, and finally capsized. Gray and Lee, who were both good swimmers, turned to save the two girls, who had disappeared under the water. They succeeded in reaching them when they came to the surface, but in the rapid current were unable to make any headway. The whirlpool dragged all four under it, and none of them came to the surface again.
