HEREDITARY POLITICS.

The call of the Republican National Committee for a convention at St. Louis, on the 16th of next June, for the purpose of nominating candidates for President and Vice-President of the United States, contains one sentence deserving of careful consideration. It is this: "The Republican electors in the several States and Territories, and voters without regard to past political affiliations who believe in Republican principles and endorse the Republican policy are cordially invited to unite under the call in the formation of a national ticket." There is nothing new or circumscribed in this invitation. It states the conditions of Republican membership in a manner that opens the doors to all who now believe that the country can and will do more for the country than it is possible to expect from the followers of Cleveland. Dissatisfied Republicans are cordially invited to become converts to the principles and policies of the Republican party and to help the American people to cast their votes in accordance with their consciences instead of their prejudices. It is believed that Republicanism has never been better times than it is taken for granted that it dictates to him to vote for the general well-being of the leaders of the Republic. The illustrious principles never conscious notion of organization bears to a hereditary party must be returned to the ranks or else they will be at the polls. In the present Republican Democrats carried the Republicans returned to power with the momentum of a mighty army, but in 1892 the United States once more lapsed into Democracy. It does not require a profoundly mathematical mind to grasp the full significance of the invitation we have quoted from the recent call of the Republican national committee. In the interplay of political forces the votes of those who secede from the enemy count two, one off and one on.

Iron-bound, copper bottomed, rock-ribbed Democracy is no longer found outside of Georgia and Mississippi and the Republican party acts on the theory that minds that are open to conviction can be approached by a declaration making the basis of union with the party as liberal as is consistent with sound politics. The Republican party has never advanced the idea that Republicans are born Republicans, and not made at any period subsequent to birth, or baptism. That is the doctrine of caste and may be illustrated by the old English dictum, "once a British subject, always a British subject." England, however, had to abandon that theory when it came into conflict with the naturalization laws of the United States. Hereditary Democrats are becoming rare since Mr. Cleveland's second dispensation of political grace and national gloom established headquarters at Washington. The present administration and the last congress loom up as disappointments too huge to be easily reconciled with the belief that a man's first duty is to vote as his father and grandfather did. A suspicion that perhaps the old gentlemen were wrong begins to steal into the most conservative minds.

The formation of a national ticket is the prime object of the Republican convention and all men who find themselves in accord with the well known policy and time-tested principles of the party will be welcomed into its ranks. Southern Democrats and Populists, in Missouri particularly, can become members in good standing by voting the Republican ticket next November. That many of them will do so can not be doubted when it is remembered that whether Democracy and hard times stand together in the relation of cause and effect it is at all events only too true that they travel together like the once famous Siamese twins. That constitutional objection to protracted poverty which attends the average American in all the walks of life will make it easy for disgusted Democrats to vote for the various Republican candidates. On the other hand, Republicans who strayed from the fold in 1892 will surely return to the only party that possesses the secret of coaxing prosperity back among the busy haunts of men. The country has now had nearly "three years more of Grover" and is fully satisfied that the remaining year will not improve the record. It is therefore in order for old Republicans and new Republicans to begin to organize for the complete overthrow of that system of politics which has given the nation such deplorable fruits as the result of its efforts to conduct the government. The call for the Republican national convention indicates the spirit in which the task must be undertaken.

NOT TRUE.

A correspondent of the Ozark Herald who signs himself "Gim Santaclaus," and writes from Reno, made the following charges in the Herald of the 12th inst: "We learn from good authority that the notorious Beardens, murderers of Ike Lewis, are running at large over our country again and the officers of Taney county are so no account they are not trying to catch them. We are sorry to say that we live in a country that the officers can't do their duty without being paid a big salary and then have to have a big reward from the state if they turn their hands to do anything and let outlaws run at large over the country."

When Sheriff Weatherman was shown the foregoing statements he emphatically denied their truth as far as they relate to him or his office. If "Gim Santaclaus" knows where the Beardens are, he will confer a great favor on the sheriff of Taney county by notifying him of their whereabouts and Mr. Weatherman will gladly reimburse him for all the postage he expends in conveying the desired information. This correspondent proposes to receive his own information upon "good authority" and perhaps he does not charge, of his own knowledge, that "the officers of Taney county are so no account they are not trying to catch them." It often turns out that what is called good authority is nothing more than idle rumor, based on spite or spleen. As a matter of fact our sheriff will take in the Beardens with great pleasure just as soon as he can get an opportunity to arrest them. "Gim Santaclaus" is unduly disturbed about our county officers and their ideas of official duty, but he can do them a great service by furnishing a reliable "pointer" as to where the Beardens may be found "running at large."

Special Washington Correspondence.

Cleveland has returned from his duck hunt, loaded with game, and the affairs of Government can now proceed. Carlisle sent in his annual report, and says that by strict economy there will only be a deficit of some $17,000,000 at the end of the fiscal year and a probable surplus of $7,000,000 in two years. By cutting down the pensions and curtailing appropriations a new issue of bonds may be prevented, but the Republicans can be relied on to supply sufficient revenue and satisfactorily solve all these problems of finance, just as they always have in all great emergencies where good judgment and business methods will take the place of the pea-hut statesmanship that we have seen so remarkably exemplified during this tariff for deficiency administration.

The visiting statesmen who came on here with the expectation of getting positions were offered a few subordinate places at a nominal salary and that was not up to the standard of their qualifications, and many of them are going back to run for congress themselves and assist in putting in a crop, hilling up their potatoes and resting under the shade of their own oak trees; free, independent men, who do not have to depend upon official recognition for their daily bread.

Washington is truly the city of magnificent distances, the most beautiful city in the world.

The new Congressional Library building is about ready for occupancy. It is a finer building than the capitol dome is gilded with pure gold leaf that cost $50,000. The interior decorations are pure white marble with quaint and artistic carvings. It cost $7,000,000.

The Washington monument that rears its white shaft of marble over 500 feet is the finest and tallest in the world. It takes half an hour to go to the top by elevator, where a grand panorama unfolds itself to the enraptured view. The Potomac to the west, where it breaks through the Appalachian mountains, a mere silver thread fifty miles away, until it swells to a mighty river at your feet, the Virginia hills with the Blue Ridge in the dim distance taking in its vast sweep of vision, Arlington, the old home of Robert E. Lee, where sleep the brave defenders of our country, Manassas Junction, the first great battle of the war, Harper's Ferry, Georgetown, Mt. Vernon, where sleeps the Father of his Country, with many other places of historic interest, make up the picture.

Congress has not done much as they have been waiting for the President to return from duck hunting. Mr. Reed has not yet announced his committee. It is doubtful if Missouri will get a single chairmanship. The Presidential campaign is getting red hot with the chances in favor of Reed though McKinley and Allison have a large following. Harrison is not in it. The big guns are organizing victory, but combinations do not always combine. In any event we will have a good man that the party can all support "and we will have a change in business all around." A. S. P.
