Thanksgiving Proclamation

The President of the United States, in accordance with appropriate custom that has come down to us from the beginning of our national life, has designated Thursday, November 24, as a day of thanksgiving and prayer.

I feel that the people of Missouri appropriately can join in the observance of this occasion. In the last year Nature has brought to us a bountiful return from farm and field; labor generally has been employed at fair wages business has been active and prosperous. We have enjoyed a freedom from lawlessness and public disorder; our laws generally have been observed satisfactorily and enforced impartially. Our public service has been conducted efficiently and free from scandals and abuses; the public health has been safeguarded and improved; our public schools have furnished adequate opportunity for education, while the conditions of life have furnished an equal opportunity for success and achievement.

I therefore request that the people of Missouri cease their usual avocations and on Thursday, November 24, return thanks to Almighty God for the blessings that they have enjoyed.

HERBERT S. HADLEY, Governor.
