One of the candidates for United States Senator, who does not seem willing to rest his candidacy on merit, has been flooding the state with the duplicate of a telegram which he received from Frank H. Hitchcock, thanking him for what he did to help nominate Mr. Hughes at Chicago. This is the same sort of a telegram Hitchcock sent to many other Missouri Republicans, most of whom had a good deal more to do with living up to the Missouri delegation for Hughes than this senatorial candidate had. In fact, the latter didn't have anything to do with getting the Missouri delegation for the winning candidate, for the reason that it wasn't composed of his political friends. His attempt to hitch himself up exclusively to the Hughes boom in an appeal for the support of the pie-counter crowd which doesn't favorably impress Republicans whose first object is to put up the strongest state ticket possible. The Missouri delegation was chosen without reference to candidates and with the purpose of conferring and consulting with other Republicans at Chicago and doing what seemed best for the party at the time and under the conditions present. That was precisely what was done.

Heard at the National Capital

The Hon. James R. Mann caused much amusement among the members of Congress and throughout the capitol by the neat manner in which he tripped the Hon. Champ Clark of Missouri, Speaker of the House. As soon as Justice Hughes was nominated, Champ rushed into print with a signed article, in which he criticized the Republican party for "raiding the courts" for a candidate. Mann took occasion to point out the fact that Clark was the presiding officer of the Democratic Convention that nominated Jude Alton B. Parker of New York in 1904, and also Chairman of the Committee on notification. Champ with great earnestness at that time pointed out the fact that Judge Parker was a great jurist and that his official duties along this line admirably fitted him for the responsible duties of President. Republican leader Mann so cleverly turned the tables on the Speaker that even the latter had to smile when it was done.

Congressmen Cyrus Adams Salloway of the first New Hampshire district has recently returned from the Granite State. Speaking of the political outlook in that section of the country, he said: "New England is enthusiastic for Hughes and Fairbanks. The nomination of Justice Hughes was especially pleasing to our people. It means a reunited party and as far as our group of six states is concerned, the only thing to be considered is the size of the majority. Republicans everywhere are enthusiastic and have a right to be."

Never was disappointment more plainly shown or more keenly felt about the capitol than has been displayed by the Democratic Congressman and Senators at the recent Republican National Convention at Chicago. The discomfiture of the members of that party over the nomination of Hughes was so much in evidence that it was very amusing to Republicans. The Democrats had banked and staked all their hopes on a big party row at Chicago and when such a splendid outcome resulted, the shock came all the greater. These are very anxious days for many Democratic statesmen, and from every indication they will continue to grow more so.

The Bureau of labor statistics of the U. S. Department of Labor has prepared two tables showing changes in number employed in ten manufacturing industries between April 1915 and April 1916, and the size of the payroll for the same months. The administration statisticians were careful not to make a comparison with April 1914, before the European war broke out, when the laboring man sat on the park bench, sporting the Democratic emblem, a patch on the bosom of his dungarees, and fortified his inner man at the soup-cart and in the bread line.

Through letters and news dispatches that reach Washington from all parts of the country, it is evident that practically all former members of the Progressive party are now back in the Republican ranks. Even before the Chicago Convention, it was apparent from registration of voters in the several states, and from elections, that nearly all the rank and file of the Progressives had returned to their former party affiliation. A few of the former Progressive leaders were still holding out, but since the nomination of Hughes, even these have given up hope of a future for the Bull Moose party, and have united with their old time political associates in the effort to drive an incompetent administration out of power.

Unprotected Industries

"No price for property, no sales except those of the Sheriff and Marshal, no purchaser at the execution sales except the creditor or some hoarder of money; no employment for industry; no demand for labor; no sales for the products of the farm; no sound of the hammer except that of the auctioneer knocking down property," is the description Thomas Benton, a Democrat, gives of the situation in this country at the close of the Napoleonic wars when Europe deluged our markets with her goods.

If a Republican authority is preferred, here is what Horace Greely said on the subject: "Great Britain poured her fabrics, far below cost, upon our markets in a perfect deluge. Our manufacturers went down like grass before the mower; agriculture and wages for labor speedily followed. Financial prostration was general and the presence of debt was universal."

Even President Wilson, in his history, takes cognizance of the situation at that time and says, (see volume three) "It was manifestly injurious to every young industry that a flood of English imports should continue to pour into the country at the open ports. The remedy was a protective tariff, such as Mr. Hamilton had wished to see at first, and the young Republican leaders of Congress did not hesitate to advocate and establish it."

"Whatever President Wilson knows as a student of history, the Democratic Party does not believe in Protection. The present Democratic tariff law affords no Protection to the industries of the country. Today they are protected only by the war now in progress on the other side of the Atlantic. If that war ends with the present tariff law still in operation, American industries must expect to fight for their very existence.—Yonkers N. Y. Statesman.

This is going to be a republican year, providing of course that the right sort of candidates are nominated for the various offices. The office of Congressman from this district is a most important one, and the voters should be sure they have a man who not only can defeat the democratic candidate, but who after he is elected will be able to give to the republicans of the Fourteenth district that service to which they are entitled, and from which they have been barred for several years.

There is no question but what the next president will be a republican. That is conceded by all who have given the matter serious consideration at all. Now what would a democratic congressman be able to do for his people back home with a republican president? Nothing absolutely nothing. All he could possibly do would be to draw his salary, for which he would give no return. In David W. Hill of Poplar Bluff, the people have a champion who not only can be elected this fall, but he is of the caliber that will get something for the people of his districts. While of course the meeting is not out until the singing is over, yet from indications over the district Mr. Hill seems to have the best of the situation to such an extent that his nomination is assured, and if he is nominated as is thought by a great many leaders in various parts of the district he will be elected. There are so many good things, things that have meant a great deal to the whole state of Missouri that he did when speaker of the Missouri legislature, that to enumerate them would take a large book. He is built of the right kind of material that will stand the acid test. Those who know him, and there are a great many over the district that do believe in him, and believe that he will give the taxpayers of the Fourteenth something like results for the money that they pay to maintain the government.—Poplar Bluff Republican

It is remarkable that the Democratic platform of 1916 omits the declaration made in 1912 that "our pledges are made to be kept when in office as well as to be relied upon during the campaign." What a shout of laughter would have arisen all over the country if that assurance had been repeated in 1916.
