

FOUND DEAD.—Recently the dead body of an Irish laborer named Daniel Haggerty, was found on the eighteenth section of the Pacific Railroad. From the evidence adduced before Justice Berry, who held an inquest on the body, the jury were led to conclude that the deceased came to his death from intemperance and disease.—St. Louis Intelligencer, 13th.

From the St. Louis Republican.
Survey of the Routes to the Pacific.

The Government is moving with much alacrity as the nature of the case will permit, in ordering the survey of routes to the Pacific. It will be seen by some extracts which we make from our Northern exchanges that Gov. SPRAGUE, recently appointed to that post in the new territory of Washington, has been commissioned to make an examination of the Northern route, and he has already commenced making the preliminary arrangements for the trip.

Another expedition is to be fitted out, under the charge of Lieutenant BEALE, Superintendent of Indian Affairs in California, who has been for some months past in Washington, and it may be presumed has the confidence of the Administration in this matter. He is to leave Washington to-day for this city, and will fit out his expedition here. The public know, of course, that Lieut. BEALE has been engaged in similar expeditions, having accompanied Col. FREMONT in his explorations, and been otherwise familiar with the country and the routes over which this road must pass. His course is indicated in a correspondence between Col. BENTON and Lieut. BEALE, who sign a joint letter in that behalf, and Col. DAVIS, from which we make the following extract:

1. Mr. Beale to be permitted to enter upon the duty immediately, to be overtaken by Mr. Fremont, if he returns for the purpose. Mr. Beale choosing to return to California overland, and to execute at the same time a part of his duties, if approved by the President, in selecting Indian reservations in New Mexico and Utah. The route or rather section of the route, they propose to examine, is from the mouth of the Huerfano river, on the Upper Arkansas, to Las Vegas de Santa Clara, about twelve degrees of longitude (103 1-2 to 115 1-2)—both ends of that route having been explored by Fremont, and most of it travelled over by Mr. Beale, and reported by Mr. Fremont to be not only practicable but easy, and presenting singular facilities for making and preserving the road.

2. That as the government wishes to send troops to California, a detachment of them, say thirty men with a sergeant and a corporal, be placed under his command, thus saving the expense of hiring men, and conducting the detachment to its destination.

3. If not deemed advisable to give this detachment, then Mr. Beale would ask for a military escort to attend him on the same line in examining for reservations in New Mexico and Utah for the Indians.

4. If neither of these is deemed advisable, then they ask for a fraction of the appropriation, say the one-tenth part, to defray the expenses of the proposed exploration by them.

Mr. Beale being in the service of the United States as Superintendent of Indian Affairs in California, will receive no compensation for his personal services.

We take it for granted, that the survey of a more Southern route will also be ordered, and that the design will be to have all the information necessary for the formation of a deliberate judgment upon the question in time for the action of the next Congress.
