

To The $100 Acre Club Boosters

C. J. LEE HAS A TIMELY WORD ON EVILS OF DEALING IN FUTURES OF FOOD STUFFS.

To the officers and members of the $100 Acre Club:

I desire to say to you that we should at this time begin to revive our club for active work for the coming season. We have many subjects of interest to look into that are to our benefit outside of making the soil produce larger yields, the production is of course a very essential matter which I believe at this time is being well cared for by competent field men through the Better Farming Association and the Agricultural College.

This is the man that deals in futures on grain and other food products, there is now a bill pending in congress to forbid gambling in futures on food products that will be up for hearing the 16th of Dec., and the Chicago Board of Trade and other boards of trade have appointed delegates to appear before the committee and prevent the passage of such legislation or modify same to suit their taste. What are we farmers and business men doing for the passage of this important measure?

This subject of elimination of dealing in futures on food products will mean more to our state and the consumer than anything we can do, therefore I ask the vice president of our association to call a meeting in the first week of January, 1913, as our president is away from here. I believe we should get together again and boost for our county and state as we have done in the past.

C. J. LEE, Director $100 Acre Club.

Transients Convicted On Larceny Charge

PAIR OF CONVICTED ON MINOR CHARGE LEFT TOWN HURRIEDLY—GIVEN FOUR MINUTES TO FLEE.

The two transients taken in charge Wednesday by Chief of Police Swanson on a robbery charge were arraigned for trial before Judge Moe Friday afternoon and were found guilty as charged. The judge gave them four days in jail but wished to temper justice with mercy and so gave them a choice of using four minutes in getting out of town or serving the four days as they liked. The four minutes minute route was chosen and the last seen of the pair one was going south and the other east and both were traveling at a rate that might subject them to the speed law and they been traveling in a vehicle. Paroling prisoners by the courts is now common practice in the state and is a commendable law and practice but it remained for Judge Moe to banish bad actors by the four minute method.

Head Hunters of the Philippines. Curiously enough, the head hunting peoples of the Philippines are apparently limited to northern Luzon. None of the warlike hill tribes inhabiting other parts of the archipelago are known to take the heads of their victims. The explanation of their head hunting customs which is given by the Negritos of northeastern Luzon is very simple. They believe that each family must take at least one head a year or suffer misfortune in the form of sickness, wounds, starvation or death. Their victims are always beheaded with bolos. Heads are buried in the ground under the "houses" of the men who take them. Plates or ollas are placed over the spots where the heads are buried and possibly contain offerings to evil spirits. The "houses" under which heads are buried are then abandoned and their supposedly fortunate owners look forward to a period free from death, sickness or injury and to success in their hunting and fishing.

A Genial Young Man. Late one night young Jinks sat in a crowded trolley car, and when a girl he knew got aboard and stood directly in front of him he made no sign. His face hidden by his newspaper, he pretended that he didn't know the girl would like to have his seat. After awhile she spoke. "Good evening, Mr. Jinks!" "Oh, good evening!" "I've been to the Primrose Social dance." Then after a pause she added, "It's a wonder, Mr. Jinks, you wouldn't offer me your seat?" Jinks then got up, but he was very angry. He said as he hooked himself to a strap, "I thought you wouldn't want it, for as you said you'd been to a dance I knew you must have been sitting all the evening."—New York Press.

An eminent German scientist who recently visited this country with a number of his colleagues was dining at an American house and telling how much he had enjoyed various phases of his visit. "How did you like our railroad trains?" his host asked him. "Ach, they are wonderful," the German gentleman replied, "so swift, so safe—generally—and such luxury in all the furnishings and appointments. All is excellent except one thing—our wives do not like the upper berths."—Harper's Weekly.

Relics of the Capet Family. The descendants of Edouard Laane, who was housekeeper of the Temple prison when the Capet family were there, gave to the Carnavalet museum, in Paris, some of the things which Louis XVI. and Marie Antoinette left in their rooms when they were taken to the scaffold. There are two chemises of fine linen belonging to Marie Antoinette. The crown which was embroidered on them has been picked out, and only the initial "M." remains. There is a black silk blouse, very much worn and mended in several places, which Marie Antoinette made with her own hands in prison and which was worn by the princess royal after her father's execution. There are also two pairs of the king's silk stockings (darned rather badly), a pair of "Mme. Royale's" little slippers, a crystal bottle which has a few drops of Marie Antoinette's favorite scent remaining in it and Louis XVI.'s shaving dish. But perhaps the most pathetic of the relics of the monarchy which went to pieces on the scaffold is a game of bricks with which the little dauphin, whose fate has always been and always will be a mystery, used to amuse himself in prison.
