BROTHERHOOD BANQUETED.

A very pleasant event took place Monday evening, when the members of the Ladies' Aid, so vividly remembering the excellent feast served there by the Brotherhood last year, banqueted the men of the congregation. The viands were served from tables, artistically decorated with a cherry tree as a center piece, hand-painted hatchets as place cards and two very realistic marshmallow forts from which floated the stars and stripes.

The Washington dinner was served by the ladies dressed in Colonial Costume. To say that each waiter was grace herself and looked exceedingly nice in her quaint costume is putting it mildly.

After the men adjourned to the lecture-room where more dainty decorations transformed the apartment, the ladies sat down to enjoy their supper. Latter they were invited to join the gentlemen and listen to a very unique program given entirely by the men.

The "choir" sang an opening number. None had ever realized the possibilities of such voices as Messrs. Heidel or Chaffee. Probably the dainty gowns in which they were robed and the picture hats from beneath which their lyric soprano tones flooded, made the harmony more beautiful.

But the number that almost melted the audience to tears was "There Were Three Kittens," sung by the male quartette. A very scientific and logical dissection on the earth being flat, and positive proof that the sun moves was given by Dr. Finney. He was a most earnest and convincing speaker.

A mock meeting of the Ladies' Aid was held at which time these gentlemen with their crocheting and tatting conducted themselves very properly. The climax to the evening's program was reached when Dr. Acher, borne upon a stretcher and writhing in pain, consented to an operation, for his feelings had been hurt. 'Twas found by the attending surgeon, that Acher was suffering from almost every known malady, from carbuncles and corns, to water on the brain and a surplus of gall. When the patient's temperature was registered on a large house thermometer, 'twas found to be 117 degrees, so an operation was imperative and 'ere the patient arose from his bed of suffering he had lost almost everything he possessed,
