Sociability Tour Will Take 50 Cars Through Valley City

With preliminary details for staging the sociability automobile tour to Yellowstone park in July settled, new interest has been injected into the movement by the news that the National Highways association will be a fostering spirit. That body hopes, by this method, to induce greatest interest in road betterment work throughout the northwest.

With sanction applied for to the American Automobile association, the interests of automobile tourists, as well as good roads advocates, are being welded to insure its success. There will be at least 50 cars to depart for the western playground on July 20, according to W. W. Smith, of the North Dakota State Automobile association, under whose auspices the tour will be run.

Many clubs throughout the northwest have called for entry blanks, indicating that members of their respective organizations intend to participate. St. Cloud will be represented; Detroit, Minn., will have at least one car; Little Falls motorists expect to send an automobile representing that city, and clubs in North Dakota have assured the promoters that from three to six cars will represent the larger North Dakota cities along the route.

It is planned to send a pathfinding car over the route to Gardiner, Mont., leaving the Twin Cities about May 15. While the directors are already well marked on the National Parks highway, the purpose of the pathfinding trip will be to take notes on places where road improvement work may be required. Three automobile manufacturers have made application to furnish the pathfinding car. This indicates that the large motor car producers are evincing much greater enthusiasm than had been expected.

Meantime, preparations for the dedication ceremonies at Medora, N. D., are going on. This function, opening for traffic the new $18,000 automobile bridge across the Little Missouri river, will be one of the principal attractions offered the tourists before they reach the Gardiner entrance to Yellowstone park.

Theodore Roosevelt, in a letter to J. P. Hardy at Fargo, has tentatively promised to be present at this celebration. Medora was for several years Col Roosevelt's home and the flood of letters and telegrams from his old-time cowboy friends, Mr. Hardy declared, has proved too great an appeal to be resisted.

A committee to have charge of the tour, which will be purely sociable in nature, will be named during the coming week.

Study Club Members Discussed Our Birds

Miss Vida Austin of the Normal school, was the principal speaker at the meeting of the Neighborly Study club Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Whitman. Bird migration was her topic and her discussion of this subject was very interesting. Following this a general questionnaire was indulged in, Miss Austin answering many queries from practically all members of the club.

Mrs. Caley was to have discussed the difference in food, nests, and habits of the climbing and perching birds. As she was not present, Miss Austin briefly explained the differentiating characteristics. Mrs. Drake gave an interesting paper on the wonderful endurance of birds in their migratory flights. Mrs. Cheney, who could not be present, sent an interesting paper on bird houses, which was read by Mrs. Wittner. Mrs. Carr read a humorous bird poem, detailing their domestic cares in a very human way, which was enjoyed by all.

Following the bird program, Mrs. Nelson discussed the pasque flower, and Miss Austin gave general directions for the preservation of specimens for a flower herbarium.

The next meeting will be held May 8, at the home of Mrs. T. A. Veblen, when an interesting program will be rendered.

PUBLICITY IS GIVEN STATE BY PAMPHLET

In an effort to introduce more settlers into North Dakota and to have the large land owner cut up his holdings into 160 and 320-acre farms, the publicity department of the Great Northern Railway company has issued a pamphlet containing the history of Appreciation week and many of the letters published in North Dakota newspapers during its observance.

James J. Hill's prediction of $50-per-acre land at the state fair grounds near Grand Forks during the pioneer days of the state and the manner in which he was scoffed by many for his prediction, and his later prediction of $100-per-acre land in the Red river valley, are recalled in the pamphlet.

Many of the better letters written by farmers from all sections of the state and published in the newspapers of the state during Appreciation week, are reprinted in the booklet. It is "Sunshine" State.

"North Dakota, the sunshine state," it declares, "has an abundance of summer sunshine, cool nights in warm season and bracing cold in winter makes this state an ideal dwelling place."

"North Dakota is in the exact center of North America and has 160 hours more sunshine during the year than the central states."

"North Dakota Appreciation week, originated and conducted by the newspapers throughout the state, brought from the pioneers and others some of the most interesting and intimate personal history that has ever been published concerning the settlement and development of this wonderful state. The settlers from the fullness of their hearts and in appreciation of their success have not hesitated to lay bare the most intimate details concerning their early struggles and trials and a complete history of their success. These stories trace the history of North Dakota from the sod house and ox cart to the present-day automobile and steam-heated modern house. We believe these stories will be of absorbing interest and an inspiration to the man of limited means who is renting land as well as to the owner of high-priced lands in the central states—who have growing families to provide for."

State Land Value

"Statistics show that out of every 64 people living at the age of 65, 54 of them are dependent upon their relatives, friends or public charity for support. The letters from our settlers show how independence may be attained. Not even money in the bank so certainly insures against poverty in old age as a clear unencumbered title to some of North Dakota's fertile acres."

Newspaper clippings from many of the state papers are also shown in the pamphlet. Live stock farming in Grand Forks county is described, the Arvilla Supply company of Arvilla being taken as an example.

Ships Much Stock

"Farmers in the vicinity of Arvilla have organized the Arvilla Supply company and in the last 15 months they have shipped out of Arvilla between $90,000 and $100,000 worth of cattle and hogs. This association demonstrates as well as anything the great opportunities in live stock farming.

"John O. Fadden, of Arvilla, president of the association, is one of the greatest live stock farmers in the state. He has raised a large amount of cattle on his own farm and each year ships many head to distributing markets.

"One of the biggest live stock farmers in the state is located near Lakota in Nelson county. He is one of the many who have come from eastern and southern places. He is Irvin W. Thomas and he purchased the old Berrisdale farm. This year Mr. Thomas had over 60,000 bushels of grain, and at present he is feeding over 200 head of three and four-year-old shorthorn steers for the market.

"Among the prominent Grand Forks county live stock farmers is J. D. Bacon, owner of the Lilac Hedge farm. This farm has done much in spreading the gospel of diversified farming and has given farmers of the state practical demonstrations of the vast wealth in live stock farming."
