

INDIAN LEGENDS READ IN CHAPEL

Thursday the faculty and the students of the State Teachers College enjoyed a series of readings given by Miss Signe Bekkerus, about the legends and myths of some North Dakota Indians.

As an introduction to her readings she stated that it is thirty-two years ago since Benjamin Harrison signed the proclamation which admitted North Dakota into the Union, and that the history of North Dakota was not complete without mention of the Indians.

The titles of the Indian myths were "The Hermit," and "The Medicine Woman," taken from the Sioux Indians. The other story was the "Legend of Devils Lake." We give an outline of two which were read.

Minnewaukan is the Indian name for Devils Lake, and means mysterious water or spirit water. It gets the name of Minnewaukan as a result of the old warfare between the Sioux and the Chippewas. The Sioux were camped along the eastern and southern shores of Devils Lake and the Chippewas made their camp near the Turtle mountains.

The Sioux were eager for a battle against their old enemy, so they crossed the lake to fight the Chippewas who had invaded what they called their territory. All day the old men and women watched for the return of the Indians. The most faithful watcher was the daughter of the chief, whose lover was with the war party. All at once she gave a cry. They could see the returning canoes, with scalps waving from their bows, which showed they had won in the battle. Everything was made ready for their welcome, but a storm arose which lasted all night.

The next morning they found lots of shattered boats, but the mysterious water had carried away the war party. The chieftan's daughter grieving for her lover, Watha, leaped into the lake. For days the mournful death song floated on the lake broken now and then by the despairing wail "Minnewaukan! Minnewaukan!"

"The Hermit" is a myth about a hermit who lived in a forest. During the day he would wander thru the forest studying different plants and roots which he used for medicine. Once in awhile a warrior would come to the tent of this hermit and get medicine for his tribe.

One day the hermit came home very late and being very tired at once lay down on his bed and was just dozing off to sleep when he was awakened by something rubbing against his foot.

He looked around and thought he saw a dark object. Just then a voice said, "Hermit, I have come to invite you to my home." The hermit said he would come, so he arose and followed.

The next evening he cut a hole in the tent large enough to stick an arrow through and stood by the door watching. Soon the dark object appeared and just as it spoke, the hermit let go of the arrow. The next morning he went out and there on the ground lay a heap of corn and from the heap a line of corn lay scattered along a path. He followed the path which ended in a circle.

The hermit thought that this was the home of whoever it was that invited him. He commenced to dig in the center of the circle and found several sacks of vegetables and an empty sack except for a few kernels of corn in one end and that the sack had a hole in the other corner where his arrow had pierced it. The hermit taught the tribes how to keep provisions by digging a pit and covering them with earth.

HALL GIRLS HAVE HALLOWE'EN PARTY

On Monday evening the dining room of the Ladies' Hall was the scene of much merry-making. The resident students of the Dormitories held a Halloween party, Dr. and Mrs. C. E. Allen were the only invited guests.

The dining room was very prettily decorated with witches, cats, jack-o-lanterns, a camp fire, and everything else which helps to make a successful Halloween party. Almost every one came in costume which added a great deal in securing the proper atmosphere. No one was idle a minute. There were fortune tellers, the telling of ghostly stories around the camp fire, bobbing for apples, and many other games and stunts in keeping with Halloween. The last part of the evening was spent in dancing. At ten o'clock a delicious lunch of pumpkin pie with whipped cream, and coffee was served. Dancing was again enjoyed for the remainder of the evening.

A district meeting of Rebecas was held in the Odd Fellows hall last night at which time three candidates were given the degrees. The Binford lodge, to the number of over twenty put on the work, and we are told they put it on in fine shape. Following the work the local Rebecas served a fine banquet and then dancing was the order of the evening for a few hours. The Binford folks ask the Times-Record to say that they appreciate very much the splendid way in which the local folks entertained them and they are going home with a very high regard for the hospitality of the Valley City Rebecas.

The editor is not a betting man but last week "Billy" DuVall stuck his head into our private office and wanted to bet the oyster stew for the office force that Nestos would be elected governor. Well, we thought that was a good bet if we lost, as we would feel like setting up the oyster stews if we won, anyway, so we took him up on that proposition. As you know, we lost, so Friday night Mr. and Mrs. Trubshaw entertained the office force at the Liberty Cafe and had those oyster stews, and seeing that Prof. Seymour is one of the force every Friday night when he edits the Teachers Budget he got into the deal. We never paid for a stew with so much satisfaction as we did those last night.

One of our loud mouthed farmers went into bankruptcy recently, just the day after election, just to beat his creditors we think. This same man now is shooting off his mouth saying that Trubshaw is to blame for his going into bankruptcy. Another town guy, who never does a day's work and can be classed a non-producer—his dad produced the most he ever got—says that Trubshaw's Times-Record is nothing but a "pack of lies." This man Trubshaw must be a wonderful man to hear these chaps froth and snort. Anyway the difference between this man Trubshaw and the two we have quoted is that Trubshaw works for his living every day in the year and pays his bills, while the other fellows get their living from other people's efforts and do not pay their bills. We presume we are to blame for all the troubles of the league.

years being first stationed at Ft. Sill, Oklahoma and later at Camp Hancock, Georgia. She comes here with a very fine recommendation as a nurse and will undoubtedly find her work very pleasing here.

The fire department boys held a meeting last night in the city hall to talk over plans for their annual Thanksgiving ball. A committee on arrangements was appointed to look after the details after which the boys adjourned to the rooms in the basement of the city hall and enjoyed coffee, weiners, etc., furnished by Chiefs Craswell and Swanson. Rooms have been fitted up in the basement where the boys can get together and have a social time and they appreciate the hospitality of the two chiefs last night.

Coach Rhoades of the Teachers College left this morning with a crippled lineup for Jamestown where the teachers will clash with the fast Jamestown eleven this afternoon. The local's lineup is somewhat crippled due to the fact that Roy Garret and J. Larson are out with injuries sustained in practice recently and it is believed they will be out of the lineup for the remainder of the season. Regardless of these draw backs the Teachers left this morning determined to give their Jamestown rivals a run for their money. The local high school eleven will leave tomorrow for Bismarck where they will clash with the High school at that place.

Judge Cooley granted a change of venue in the Gummer case at Fargo yesterday and sends that notorious case to Valley City for trial at the January term of court. This means that this case will take up about all the time of the regular term in January. There are ninety-seven witnesses called for this case and taking all the attendants, lawyers, etc., connected with it, we are going to have our hotels pretty well crowded in January. We are told that a special term of the district court is to be held here on the fifteenth of this month, which will take care of a number of criminal and civil cases and will relieve the situation some.

The social season is opening up on high this season. The ladies are having parties in abundance and we heard one married may say yesterday that they were getting so thick that his wife was away all day and most of the nights, and that if they keep up at this gait he would have to be introduced to his own wife. Since the eighteenth amendment the men have not had so many parties and consequently they are getting a little bit jealous of the ladies we think.
