Miss Nelson of Orr was a charming hostess Saturday afternoon, when she entertained a company of young ladies at her home in honor of Miss Elia Montgomery, who will be a bride of November 10. The afternoon was satiated in sewing for the bride elect and a number of enjoyable games were provided for the entertainment of the guests. The rooms were made very attractive with a color scheme of yellow and white hearts were artistically arranged throughout the rooms. Baskets and vases of lovely carnations and ferns were used in completing the pretty effect. The bride elect was showered with parcels and the shower was arranged in a unique way. Miss Alice Nelson dressed to represent an Arabian Peddler, entered the room with a basket of her "wares," which were opened and presented to Miss Montgomery. A delicious three course luncheon was served at the close of the afternoon and the guests were seated at a long table. The predominant colors of yellow and white were further carried out in the dining room appointments, a basket of white carnations was used as a centerpiece for the table and yellow candles with pretty shades completed the decorative scheme. Tiny tepees formed of reception sticks, and arranged at each plate were the favors. Dainty cards marked the places for the guests and covers were laid for ten young ladies. Those present were Misses Elia Montgomery, Martha Montgomery of Valentine, Mont., Olive Montgomery, Laura Lynch, Isabelle Montgomery, Alice Nelson, Larimore, Charlotte Speker, St. Paul, Edna Stoffel, Tallmadge, Canada, Edith Bronson, Esther Nelson and Olive Burgett. Miss Montgomery is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Montgomery of Inkster. She has been teaching in the primary department of the school at Orr for the past year.

A wedding of interest will take place Wednesday at Inkster when Miss Margaret A. Mathis will become the bride of Ralph Muir, both of Inkster.

Mrs. R. A. Sprague, city food inspector, who was recently appointed on the press committee of the national organization of Women's clubs, received word yesterday from Mrs. R. E. Sefer, secretary of the Housewives' league, that Buffalo now has a woman food inspector. The appointment was made by the health commissioner and in making the appointment, he said: "Buffalo has long felt the need of a woman inspector, as she acts like a person shopping, natural and not exciting suspicion, when she wants to find the real conditions." The commissioner stated that he expects to appoint women to fill every vacancy in his department and feels confident that they will meet all requirements. The people of Buffalo are glad to have a food inspector and deem it a great honor that a woman has been selected to look after the work of a city the size of Buffalo.

Little Bedtime Stories

SAMMY JAY WISHES HE HADN'T BEEN SO HASTY.

By Thornton W. Burgess. (Copyright, 1914, by J. G. Lloyd.)

Never be like Sammy Jay. Because, you know, it doesn't pay. Go ask him if it isn't true. And hear what Sammy'll say to you.

With all his might Sammy Jay wished that he hadn't been so hasty in making up his mind that Old Man Coyote had gone away, and especially that he hadn't been in such a hurry to tell everybody. He felt that he didn't want to meet any one now, for every one knew by this time that Old Man Coyote hadn't gone away. Either they would laugh at him for being so easily fooled or else they would think that he had told a wrong story purposefully, and you know Sammy hasn't the best name in the world, anyway.

So he sat in a big hemlock tree in the Green Forest, not knowing what to do with himself until at last he grew so hungry that he just had to go out to look for something to eat. Sammy, like the rest of the little feathered people, cannot go very long without food. Hardly had he started forth when he saw Chatterer the Red Squirrel. He tried to dodge out of sight, but Chatterer's eyes are very bright and quick. He saw Sammy almost as soon as Sammy saw him.

"Ho! ho! ho!" shouted Chatterer. "Old Man Coyote has gone away with him? Tell me that, Sammy Jay." Sammy didn't say a word. He couldn't, because he hadn't anything to say to keep out of the way of Old Man Coyote, and he was just passing the corner of the Old Orchard when he should spy him but Johnny Chuck.

"What did Old Man Coyote promise you to tell us that he had gone away?" shrieked Johnny, angrily. "He didn't promise me anything. I made a mistake, that's all," snapped Sammy, and hurried on. Pretty soon Peter Rabbit caught sight of him. "Story teller! Story teller!" called Peter.

"I'm not, either!" screamed Sammy. "I really thought that Old Man Coyote had gone."

"Better know and not merely think next time," advised Peter. "Danny Meadow Mouse was the next to see him, but Sammy didn't wait to hear what Danny had to say. It was just his wall. He wouldn't have felt any more comfortable if he had. You see, Danny is one of the very little people who has to always be on the watch for the way of Old Man Coyote, and something very terrible might have happened to him as a result of Sammy's story the day before. Down in his heart Sammy was glad that nothing had happened."

When he visited the Smiling Pool no one would have anything to do with him. They just turned their backs on him and pretended not to see him at all. So it was wherever he went, Sammy spent a miserable day. It wasn't of the least bit of use to try to explain. No one believed him. He flew sadly to the Green Forest to hide in the thick hemlock tree where he had his home. And as he sat there thinking it all over he sighed. He was wishing that he had not so often given his neighbors cause to think ill of him. Then, quite suddenly, he thought of a way to regain his lost place in the regard of his friends. None of them knew that Farmer Brown's Boy had taken up his traps which he had set for Old Man Coyote. Tomorrow he would go over to the Smiling Pool and tell how he had seen Farmer Brown's Boy throw those cruel traps into a corner as if he didn't mean ever to use them again. Then Jerry Muskrat and Billy Mink and Little Joe Otter would be so glad
