

WHAT THEY ARE DOING IN SOCIETY

The River of Life. The more we live more brief appear our life's succeeding stages.

The gladness current of our youth ere passion yet disorders steals lingering like a river smooth along its grassy borders.

But as the careworn cheek grows wan and sorrow shades the cheek, ye stars that measure life to man, why seem you courses quicker?

When joys have lost their bloom and breath and life itself is vapid, why as we reach the falls of death feel we its tide more rapid.

It may be strange, yet who would change time's course to slower speeding when one by one our friends have gone and left our bosoms bleeding?

Heaven gives our years of fading strength indemnifying fleetness.

And those of youth a seeming length proportioned to their swiftness. —Thomas Campbell.

Little Bedtime Stories

By Thornton W. Burgess (Copyright 1914, G. Lloyd.)

Peter Rabbit had made up his mind that there was something very wrong with all the world, or, at least, with the friends and neighbors who lived in that part of it which he knew. Here it was the finest play weather of the whole year, and nobody but the Merry Little Breezes to play with. It seemed as if everybody else was either too busy or too sleepy to play. Of course, it was all right for Striped Chipmunk, Chatter the Red Squirrel and happy Jack the Gray Squirrel to lay up stores of food for the winter if they wanted to, though for his part he couldn't see the sense of wasting these beautiful fall days in work. He would rather have a good time and trust to luck to get enough to eat somewhere when he needed it in the winter.

But how anybody could be sleepy these days when every breath of air made him want to jump up and kick his heels for very joy was more than Peter could understand. There was Johnny Chuck, so sleepy he could hardly keep his eyes open and actually talking of going to bed right now and staying there all winter. And there was Digger the Badger doing the same thing! Certainly there was something wrong with the world when people acted like that! He must be. He had it on the tip of his tongue to say so as he reached the bank of the Smiling Pool, but he didn't.

But Jerry Muskrat answered never a word. He couldn't, for he had his mouth filled with rushes which he was carrying to his house to repair the roof. Peter watched him climb up on the roof and cleverly fix the rushes in the place where they were most needed. Then and not until then, did he reply to Peter. "Too much to do, Peter. Too much to do! No time for play these days!" said he, and before Peter could say a word Jerry had dived head first into the Smiling Pool. Peter waited a little while and then followed the Laughing Brook up into the Green Forest. On the way he met Old Mr. Toad. Old Mr. Toad looked quite as his cousin, Grandfather Frog, he was quite as sleepy as he looked, for he nodded drowsily at Peter and then yawned as he replied to Peter's question as to where he was going. "To bed. To bed. Peter Rabbit, where all sensible people go at this time of year. And if I

Famous For Her Cakes Recommends CALUMET BAKING POWDER Some little time ago I made a careful study and investigation of the baking powder subject and I feel fully repaid.
