

WHAT THEY ARE DOING IN SOCIETY

The Man Who Didn't Succeed. They sing of the man who build the mills...

'Tis not to excuse the indolent; No pleas for the down and out; No species rot condemning what the leaders are about.

His house is small, his table light; His family must endure The snubs and sneers of the bucca-neers.

Whose debts fall on the poor. Yet his is a home and no poor. His wife is a wife indeed, There's nothing about his children's love

Admitting it's true that he did not make The most of his talents then; He won no peer nor raised himself At the cost of his fellow men.

His honor has been his creed— Now who we do to say that he Is the man who didn't succeed?

Little Bedtime Stories

WHAT HAPPENED WHEN FARMER BROWN'S BOY JUMPED DOWN.

By Thornton W. Burgess. (Copyright, 1915, by J. G. Lloyd.) There is a great big word which is sometimes used when things happen and cannot be explained any other way. It is called co-in-cid-ence. When two people start to do the same thing or to go to the same place, neither knowing anything about what the other was doing or planning to do, that is co-in-cid-ence. So it was co-in-cid-ence that was of what happened to make Blacky the Crow laugh until he almost made himself sick.

Farmer Brown's boy wasn't thinking of Buster Bear at all. It was so long since he had heard of or seen any sign of Buster that he had made up his mind that Buster had left the Green Forest and gone back to the Great Woods from which he had come. When Farmer Brown's boy stood on the great rock deep in the Green Forest making up his mind whether or not to jump down into that snow bank at the foot, Buster bear was as far from his thoughts as the moon is from the stars.

Now, if Farmer Brown's boy had gone there a day later nothing would have happened. It was just co-in-cid-ence that he went when he did, which was at the very time when Buster had been waked from his long sleep by gentle Sister South Wind. You know, Buster had slept in a hole under that great rock nicely shut in by that very snowbank Farmer Brown's boy was looking down on.

And now, that he was awake, Buster was hungry, very hungry, for he had had nothing to eat since he went to sleep at the very beginning of winter. So when he had stretched and stretched and licked the kinks out of his legs he began to dig his way out through that snowbank. He had just got nicely started when something came plugging down from above, the snow almost on him. It was Farmer Brown's boy, who had jumped from the top of the great rock. Now, it would have been bad enough to have a thing like that happen under any circumstances, but Buster was really only half awake and, of course, this made it worse.

Now, he bawled, and began to scramble madly, trying to get away from this terrible thing that had come plunging down through the snow. "Help! Oh! Help!" yelled Farmer Brown's boy, but he was just about to get up and run when Buster Bear came and knocked him down and rolled him over in the snow.

Blacky the Crow looking on from the top of a tree, was just as disturbed in that bank of snow, then out of it burst two snow covered figures. One was Farmer Brown's boy. He had lost his head, but he was just about to look for it. With a wild yell he started to run, stumbled, fell, scrambled to his feet and ran, yelling "Help! Help!"

The other figure was Buster Bear and he ran in the other direction, whining and whimpering. His black coat was filled with snow and he was just as badly frightened as Farmer Brown's boy and trying just as hard to get away. Do you wonder that Blacky laughed and laughed? The fact is it is doubtful if he was ever so much as sorry for either of them.

have had a horror of someone taking a picture of the two and a half year youngster, and have dodged persons with cameras as though they were dangerous creatures.

But young John Jacob, pulling his newest and consequently favorite toy, ran the gamut of nurses and guards and strolled along the Mall in Central park alone.

What happened? Well, what happened so shocked the nurses and guards that they gathered up the child in charge and hurried home with him. A snapshot had been taken—New York World.

Diminutive Armies. If ever the disarmament of the world occurs there will be several countries that will not have much to do in that line, such as for instance, Monaco, the army of which comprises seventy-five carabinieri and twenty grenadiers. Another diminutive army is that of the grand duchy of Luxembourg, which numbers 125 gendarmes, 170 volunteers and 20 musicians.

30 DAYS UNDER HAY. Gettysburg, S. D., March 25.—Trixie, a crippled bird dog, is alive today after living 30 days underneath a load of hay. It fell under the load of hay and was not rescued until George Adams, its master, went to the stack to get another load of hay. The dog is emaciated and weak.

A Remedy For All Pain "The efficiency of any drug" says Dr. C. P. Robby "is known to us by the results we obtain from its use. If we are able to control pain and disease by means of any preparation, we certainly are warranted in its use. One of the principal symptoms of all diseases is pain, and this is what the patient most often applies to us for, i. e. something to relieve his pain. If we can arrest this promptly, the patient is most liable to trust in us for the other remedies which will effect permanent cure. One remedy which I have used largely in my practice is Anti-hemian Tablets. Many and varied are their uses, I have used them on many occasions, and have never been disappointed. I found them especially valuable for headaches of various origin, and especially for women subjected to certain times. Two Anti-hemian Tablets give prompt relief and last longer than the usual analgesic. These tablets may be obtained at all drugstores. Ask for Dr. C. P. Robby's Anti-hemian Tablets for headaches, neuralgia and all pains.
