LATEST PICTURE OF GERMAN AMBASSADOR

Entire Forenoon Given Over to Testimony of Dr. John Crawford.

CLAIM STATEMENTS HAVE BEEN MADE

Removed That Prosecution Has Obtained Confessions From Two Accused, and Will Attempt to Introduce Them as Testimony.

(Herald Special Service.) Cando, N. D., March 29.—The entire morning in the Benson county child-murder case was occupied with the testimony of Dr. John Crawford of New Rockford, who developed into a strong witness for the state under examination of Prosecutor Burke. A hypothetical question, based on facts gained by a physical examination of Mrs. Betsy Jones on January 7 was put to the witness, but objection was made by the defense. The point will be ruled on this afternoon by Judge C. W. Buttz.

That medical experts for the state based their statement that the victim of the Benson county child murder case died from pneumonia contracted by exposure, upon the fact that the body of the babe was found in the vault of an outhouse in the winter, and not upon the result of a post mortem examination, was the point scored by the defense for relief.

The trial opened this morning with the defense asking strong Attorney Torger Simms, backed by Attorney Victor Wardrobe, have the state witnesses through a hazardous cross examination. A large part of the testimony of Dr. Bussen of Baker, a state witness ordered stricken from the record by Judge C. W. Buttz and it is expected that this afternoon the same fate will fall to the testimony of Dr. Warren of Leeds, coroner of Benson county.

Upon the testimony of Carl A. Anderson, a foreigner employed on the Sogge farm, will depend the strength of the state's case. The opinion of many. Anderson will be placed on the witness stand late today or tomorrow. He was employed by Hans Sogge and left the farm with Betsy Jones, Elmer Jones and Mrs. Hans Sogge, when Hans Sogge in a fit of anger drove them out. The four went to the Harold Sogge farm, where the scene of the affair upon which the criminal prosecution was brought. He says that he heard a noise several times on the night of October 17, which sounded like the cry of a kitten; that he and Harold Sogge went out to the outhouse and lowered a lantern into the vault but that he saw nothing. He says he is certain the stand for the defense.

SHOOTING VICTIM IS RECOVERING. Mrs. Wessels, of Nelson Co., Only Slightly Injured by Farmhand.

Frederick Palmer Spends Night in English Lines; No "Idyl of Peaceful Security"—Death is the Only Familiar Thing to All Troops.

Frederick Palmer, who is at the front in France for the Associated Press, sends the following dispatch: British Headquarters in France, March 27, via London, March 29.—While the world is eager for news, day after day may pass with no news of desultory artillery and rifle fire, which is the normal existence, save when some supreme effort is made.

Next to having witnessed the battle of Neuve Chapelle, the most interesting thing to a correspondent is a night spent in the new British line of work which defend that section of the shell-ton earth that the British won and hold against all German efforts at recovery.

Officers Not Responsible. Such a visit, made alone, without automobiles or other accessories, proved to be the best of peaceful security. The army corps staff officer, who gave the correspondent permission to go, required him to sign a paper releasing the army authorities from any responsibility, could only reply that he used the crossing at the Forty-second street at rush hour without holding the mayor accountable if he ran over.

The Germans were shelling the avenues of approach to the British line at the edge of the village. Yet, the most cheerful spot where the British flag flies is here. It was worth enduring sleepless nights and plunging in mud to enter into the spirit of the soldiers, who had suffered such hard knocks and had last seen the tide turn.

No Complaint Among Men. Though rumors come from London of complaint over the heavy cost of the victory, the officer or man at the front who takes that view is to be found. They know the situation and are prepared to pay the price which success requires. The point they make is that they have been able to make a rain without any heavier losses than the Germans who yielded. "A lot of our fellows were killed," said a soldier. "But this time it was in pushing the Germans, instead of trying to hold them back. You can't realize, sir, unless you have been in it from Mons, how that bucks you up."

My host in the breastworks was a captain, who the previous day had received a shot through the arm, and, although officially reported wounded, remained in his mud-spattered uniform on duty, with no bed except a rubber sheet laid on the wet earth. His relatives in England may worry about himself, although when the war is over he is certainly going to have one real bath and one good meal in London, no matter what it costs.

When it was noticed that he had no blankets in his dugout, the captain explained that the men's blankets were not up yet and he wanted to enjoy no luxury they lacked.

Faint aurors of light showing above the line of the German breastworks rose from their camp fires, which were the counterpart of the British barriers, made by punching holes in any sort of bucket to be found. Around these, the men of duty gather to keep warm and fry their bacon and make their tea. Time sped rapidly as one moved from group to group to chat, everyone keeping his head below the parapet to avoid German bullets.

"We are standing on dead Germans," said one soldier. "We turned their trenches in to make graves—good trenches they were, too."

When a fusillade broke out in a distant part of our line at the sign of some movement, the Germans in front of us burst into yells of derision.

The consul ordered three priests and two deacons to leave the mission, and as they were passing through the streets they were insulted and mercilessly beaten.
