BRIDGE WORK AGAIN HUNG UP Failure of Timbers to Arrive Causes Delay to Rebuilding Operations—Conduits Drag.

Lack of material is again causing a delay in the rebuilding of the DeMers avenue bridge by the Grand Forks Concrete company.

One carload of timber has failed to arrive as yet and it happens to contain that material which is needed before the work can progress further.

Operations are at a standstill. The steel will be shipped from Minneapolis as soon as the timber work is completed and there will then be no further delay.

In the meantime the company's men are busily engaged in what the conduits for the extension of the ornamental lighting system of the city of Fourth and Fifth streets and Bruce avenue.

BAREHANDED, CATCHES DADDY OF ALL PICKEREL Brainerd, Minn., April 21.—Catching a 22-pound pickerel, barehanded, in six inches of water on marsh land between Gull and Mud lakes was the feat of Julius Deering.

His exploit in catching the fish was reported by Alderman George Hess, Alderman D. A. Peterson, City Engineer C. D. Peacock, and Charles Nicholson.

Before the battle was over the water had been churned to mud and Deering was a sight to behold.

DIRECTS YOUNG ENEMY TO SAFETY Paris, April 20.—One of the most thrilling and at the same time human incidents of the war is related by M. Clemenceau in his paper, L'Homme Enchaîné.

An 18 year old sergeant was in a furious fight in which he and nearly all his company mowed down. He fell into a trench, wounded, and remained there alone with a flag.

When darkness came the sergeant attempted to creep toward the French line. He had crawled about a mile and a half, without knowing in what direction he was going, and was on the point of exhaustion when he came to a sort of cabin, which he entered for the purpose of resting.

There he found five German officers who had been killed by a shell. A sixth officer lay underneath them. He was terribly wounded and asked the sergeant to help him.

Bougoin went to the officer's rescue. Surprised on seeing the little French officer with his flag, the German officer asked him how he came to be there.

The soldier told the story of his adventure, and the officer, forgetting his sufferings, exclaimed: "You are a brave boy. I shall die shortly." He slipped and fell to the bottom, fracturing the left arm. The fracture had not been reduced early this afternoon, and consequently it could not be mended where the arm was broken.

Mrs. F. T. Roat Breaks Arm—While going downstairs at the F. T. Roat paint store this morning, Mrs. F. T. Roat slipped and fell to the bottom, fracturing the left arm. The fracture had not been reduced early this afternoon, and consequently it could not be mended where the arm was broken.

quartered at Monfalcone, Ronchi and Sagrado.

The Austrians also are reported to be strongly fortified the whole line from the Isone river westward to the mountains behind which batteries already are in position.

Making Efforts to Keep Supplies From Germany London, April 21.—Replying to queries from the house of commons yesterday as to what steps were being taken to prevent cotton from reaching Germany, Foreign Secretary Grey said that in accordance with the order in council of last night the workmen of the north had been urged to refrain from the output of munitions of war, refrained from all reference to the drink question and declared that there had been no slackness on the part of either the employees or employers.

The necessity for greater effort, he said, arose from the fact that an enormous quantity of ammunition was being expended in the west, and the consequent shortage of skilled labor. This was being remedied.

Will Disinfect Western Poland Petrograd, April 21.—A special sanitary commission has been appointed to disinfect and purify the battlefields of Western Poland, on which many thousands of dead lie either unburied or else buried in haphazardly shallow graves and trenches.

Under the new sanitary commission, fifteen detachments will operate, each consisting of two medical officers, a disinfecter, and ten grave-diggers. The commission has directed the opening, so far as possible of all the so-called brotherly graves, and the bodies of the foe were buried together, and separated them from one another.

Graves which were dug near towns and villages will also be opened and the bodies removed to points more distant from the abodes of men. Before being interred, all the corpses will be subjected to a thorough process of disinfection.

English newspapers are devoting columns to comment on the optimistic speech at New Castle last night by Premier Asquith.

Utterances of the premier indicate the putting into effect of a sort of industrial conscription by which employers shall forego some of their profits and trade unions agree to suspend some of their rules necessary in times of peace, and taxpayers contribute indemnity to the factories where loss and injury are caused by commandeering for the government.

French Drop Bombs Carrying Fearful Stenches Berlin, April 21.—German army headquarters says: In Arragne the French employed bombs the effect of which caused men to vomit. Early yesterday an aviator of the enemy dropped bombs on the town of Loerrach, in Baden, damaging a silk factory belonging to a Swiss and as two other houses, and injuring several civilians.

"I reprobly to the dropping of bombs by the Russians on Interburg and Gumbin, both open towns situated outside the zone of operations, we dropped 150 bombs yesterday on the railway junction at Blajestok."

More Wounded in Head in This War Paris, April 20.—Dr. Sendral, who has made a study of fire-arm wounds as affecting the head, declares that the former proportion of 12 to 15 per cent of wounds in the head has been increased in the present war; he attributes this to the use of trench warfare and in part to the increased effectiveness of shell fire.

Fifty per cent of wounds affecting the sight are caused by shrapnel fragments, forty per cent by rifle bullets, eight per cent by shrapnel bullets and two per cent various.

The destruction of sight is in the result of the use of gases the indirect result of wounds. There are a great many cases of what Dr. Sendral calls hysterical blindness. Men are frequently dumb, blind as well as deaf and dumb by shock.

Austrians Suffer Heavy Losses in Carpathians Petrograd, via London, April 20.—The Russian army headquarters last night gave the following official statement: "On Sunday night the enemy suffered great losses in a further attack on our troops on the heights of Teletan in the Carpathian mountains."

By counter attack we forced the enemy to evacuate the approaches to our positions and we captured an Austrian battalion which surrendered en masse.

It is confirmed that on April 16, when we captured a height to the southwest of the village of Polan, we killed 1,200 Austrians and twenty officers. We also captured six machine guns.

On April 17 we repulsed two fresh attacks in the direction of Stry. "In the other part along the whole of our front there was no change."

200 Britains Lost in German East Africa Berlin, April 21.—(Via London)—Official news from German East Africa of the defeat of the British forces January 18 and 19 in a two days' battle at a point near Jassin, in the north of the island. The British forces lost some 200 men.

Their total casualties amounted to about 700. These include the capture of 100 rifles, 100 machine guns and 60,000 rounds of ammunition fell into the hands of the Germans. The loss to the British was 11 men killed and 28 wounded.

Maifa Island, off the coast of German East Africa was occupied by the British January 10.

The din and confusion were indescribable. Through the thick pall of shell smoke the Germans could be seen on all sides, some emerging half dazed from cellars and dugouts dodging and scattering shells, others firing from windows, others crawling from behind overturned tombstones.

Machine guns were firing from houses on the outskirts. In one place a party of Germans were found dancing about in agony and fear, screaming in a high-pitched voice in English: "Mercy! Mercy! I am married!"

"Your misssus was than us for sending you home," retorted one of the English who took him prisoner and his life was spared.

A rifle brigade, falling over a sandbag into a German trench, came upon two officers, mere boys, their hands above their heads, their faces ashen gray. They were trembling. One said gravely in good English: "Don't shoot. I am from London."

Also they, too, were spared.

Slaughtered by Gurkhas Outside of the village there was a scene of tremendous enthusiasm. A rifle brigade, smeared with dust and blood, fell in with the Gurkhas, with whom they have been brigaded in India. The little brown men, dirty but radiant, and Kukris in hand had very thoroughly gone through some of the houses at the cross roads and allenced a party of Germans who were making themselves a nuisance with machine guns.

The riflemen and Gurkhas cheered themselves hoarse. In a few hours of martyrdom the Scottish Rifles at Neuve Chapelle showed they had lost nothing of the spirit which won fame at Lucknow and at Spion Kop. All their officers save one were killed or wounded. Lieutenant Colonel Biss and his adjutant falling side by side, bravely surviving officer, a second lieutenant, could collect after the German position had been won, but the men remained as steady as on parade, moulding themselves on the glorious example given by the officers.

BLOODY BATTLE IN NEUVE CHAPELLE Village was Sight Men wont Forget—Looked Like an Earthquake. London, April 21.—A long and thrilling narrative of the Battle of Neuve Chapelle, the first detailed story published outside of the official dispatches, appears in the Morning London newspaper. Following are a few of the best extracts: Describing the great cannonade which prepared the British attack, the writer says: "Hell broke loose. With a mighty, hideous, screeching burst of noise hundreds of guns spoke. The men in front of the trenches were deafened by the sharp reports of field guns spitting at shells at close range to cut the Germans' barbed wire entanglements. In some cases the trajectory of these vicious missiles was so flat that they passed only a few feet above the British trenches. The din was continuous. An officer who put his ear to the ground said it was as though the earth were being smitten that morning. Of all the once fair village but two great blows with a Titan's hammer. "After the first few shells had whistled screaming amid clouds of earth and dust into the German trenches a dense pall of smoke hung over the German lines, sickening fumes of lyddite blew back into the British trenches. In some places our troops were smothered in earth and dust and even spattered with blood from fragments of human bodies that went hurtling through the air. The upper part of a German officer's cap on head, was blown into one of our trenches."

Taken at Bayonet Point. "There was bloody work in the village of Neuve Chapelle. The British captured the place at the bayonet point. The village was a sight men say they will never forget. It looked as if an earthquake had struck and the chaos was so utter the very line of streets was all but obliterated. Hardly a stone remains upon a stone. It was indeed a scene of desolation into which a German brigade, the first regiment to enter the village, raced along. Of the church, only a bare shell remained. The little churchyard was a mass of mud and very dead plucked from their graves. Broken coffins and ancient bones were scattered amid the fresher dead slabs which remained intact, the great crucifixes reared aloft, one in the churchyard, the other over against the chateau.

The din and confusion were indescribable. Through the thick pall of shell smoke the Germans could be seen on all sides, some emerging half dazed from cellars and dugouts dodging and scattering shells, others firing from windows, others crawling from behind overturned tombstones.

Machine guns were firing from houses on the outskirts. In one place a party of Germans were found dancing about in agony and fear, screaming in a high-pitched voice in English: "Mercy! Mercy! I am married!"
