WHEN DINNER COMES One Ought to Have a Good Appetite. A good appetite is the best sauce. It goes a long way toward helping in the digestive process and that is absolutely essential to health and strength. Many persons have found that Grape-Nuts food is not only nourishing but is a great appetizer, and children like the taste of it and grow strong and rosy from its use. It is especially the food to make a weak stomach strong and create an appetite for dinner.

"I am 57 years old," writes a Tennessee grandmother, "and have had a weak stomach from childhood. By great care as to my diet I enjoyed a reasonable degree of health, but never found anything to equal Grape-Nuts as a standby."

"When I have no appetite for breakfast and just eat to keep up my strength, I take 4 teaspoonfuls of Grape-Nuts for breakfast. When dinner comes I am hungry. While if I go without any breakfast I never feel like eating dinner. Grape-Nuts for breakfast seems to make a healthy appetite for dinner."

"My little grandson was sick with stomach trouble during the past summer, and finally we put him on Grape-Nuts. Now he is growing plump and well. When asked if he wants his nurse or Grape-Nuts, he brightens up and points to the cuphead. He has no trouble to wean at all—thanks to Grape-Nuts."

WHAT GIRLS MAY DO. Why do many girls live on snuff food? (By Jessie Roberts.)

I sat opposite a girl in one of the dairy restaurants one evening and was struck by what she ordered. She was evidently a girl who worked for her living, and she probably had little time allowed her for luncheon. She did not look robust, but rather tired and pale, and she should have eaten a good, nourishing meal. Perhaps she could not afford steak and a good soup, but there is plenty of food that is not expensive and yet gives the best results.

But this girl ordered grape fruit, doughnuts and coffee. She ate very little of the doughnuts, crumbling them on her plate, but she took two cups of coffee. For the same money she could have had a glass of cream and milk, a nice omelette, and a baked potato. As for the fruit, she could have got two good grape fruit at the grocery's and eaten them at home for four meals at the same price she paid for her portion.

"Too many girls appear to think that the sole purpose of eating is to kill the appetite. That is one of the effects of eating, but the real purpose is to nourish the body. Pluff food won't do that. It chokes off your hunger, but you wear out on it."

I wish you of the girls who aren't as rosy and healthy as you ought to be would take the trouble to read up a little on the question of diets. Numerous good and simple books tell you how to combine the necessary food elements in an appetizing and economical way in order to get the best results. There are many tasty and nutritious dishes to be had in restaurants that will be just as good eating and of infinitely more value if only you would take the trouble to seek them out. Think of your body as a machine that must be properly stoked, and study up a trifle on the best ways to stoke it. It doesn't only mean better health, but a better appearance, too, for no girl who is below par looks her best.

YOUR MONEY. The Bankers Say You Can Save. (By John M. Oakison.) The American Bankers association is boosting thrift through its savings bank section—preaching sound savings gospel. In a recent bulletin the association demonstrated how a man earning $20 a week may, by saving $5 a week and investing it wisely, double his income at the end of 28 years. Suppose he began at the age of 25—by the time he was 50 the income from his investments would amount to a little more than $20 a week. "This is not a get-rich-quick scheme said the bulletin. It is not; it is a sober mathematical demonstration of what any one may do. You decide to test the plan, and take $5 a week regularly to a savings bank that pays 4 per cent interest and credits interest earnings every six months. At the end of four years you have to your credit $1,123.29; take out $1,000 and put it in a sound real estate mortgage paying 6 per cent. Go on then building up your savings fund again until you have a thousand dollars or more; at the end of the seventh year you will buy another $1,000 mortgage paying 6 per cent. In twenty-five years you will have $14,000 invested in 6 per cent mortgages and $761.33 in the savings bank. Three years later you'll have $17,000 in mortgages and $779.22 in the savings bank, and your income from mortgages and the bank will be $1,051.20 a year, or $20.21 a week. Suppose you were in a position to set aside $5 a week for every child of your family, beginning when the boy was ready to go into business or the girl to get married, each would have a little fortune to help along. Making such calculations and plans is fascinating work. Carrying them into practice is not so easy. To judge by results in this country, as reported by experienced savings bank men, regular saving is very hard. It will be made easier by keeping in front of you some such table of possible results as the bankers' association has worked out. It is remarkable that the thermometer has too many sinking spells.
