

WHAT THEY ARE DOING IN SOCIETY

WE ARE NOT ALWAYS GLAD WHEN WE SMILE.

We are not always glad when we smile. For the heart in a tempest of pain may live in the guise of a laugh in the eyes. As the rainbow may live in the rain; And the stormless night of our woe may hang out a radiant star. Whose light in the sky of distress is a lie As black as the thunder clouds are.

Little Bedtime Stories

SAMMY JAY DOES A LITTLE TALKING. (By Thornton W. Burgess.) (Copyright, 1915, by J. G. Lloyd.) If sound advice was always heeded it would not be so often needed. The trouble is that those who need it are very apt not to heed it. This is especially true of young folks. You see they don't like to own up that they don't know as much as they think they do. And this is a very great mistake, a very great mistake indeed. When Sammy Jay watched old Granny Fox trot off down the Lone Little Path out of sight he was sorely tempted to follow her. He knew perfectly well that she had some plan in that shrewd head of hers for catching those three little Possums, Bumpy, Frumpy and Grumpy. Old Granny Fox is not one to give up easily. She is very sharp and very clever. She has to be in order to live. He had upset one plan. There wasn't a doubt in his own mind that but for his timely warning at least one and perhaps two of those silly little children of Unc' Billy Possum would be by this time inside of old Granny Fox instead of safe up in the tree from which Granny had tried to entice them with the promise to show them the wonderful things to be seen in the Great World.

And Sammy also knew that Bumpy, Frumpy and Grumpy were not a bit thankful for what he had done because of the smooth tongue of Granny Fox, and the fact that they had much rather believe what she said than what he said. You know it is a great deal easier to believe things you want to Romance and Chills or Cheer and Warmth?

The open fireplace is certainly romantic—but not very practical. It is picturesque—but not much for warmth. And then, too, it never seems to be where it is needed—never in the bathroom on a chilly spring morning—nor in that cool corner of the living room where you like to read in the evening.

believe than things you don't want to believe. So Sammy had half a mind to leave the three little Possums to find out by experience that his warning was for their good. But when he thought of what a sad experience it might be he decided to stay where he was and give them some sound advice. Then he would have done his duty by Unc' Billy's youngsters and if anything happened to them it would be no fault of his.

So as soon as Granny Fox was out of sight Sammy cleared his throat and began. "I know just what you are thinking," said he. "Granny Fox told you that I am a modlesome meddler and you believe Granny because you want to believe her. I don't blame you a bit. I was just like you when I was young. I didn't want advice from anybody and the wonder is that I'm alive now. It cost me some terrible rights and some feathers out of my coat to learn that I didn't know all there was to be known about the Great World, and to heed the advice of those who were wiser in the ways of the Great World than I. "Granny Fox told you that I am a thief. Perhaps that is true and then again perhaps it isn't. Whether it is or isn't makes no difference to you, but this does: Granny is a thief herself. If you can't believe me because you think I am a thief then you can't believe Granny Fox. Now it doesn't make the least bit of difference to me whether or not you are gobbled up by old Granny Fox, because you know, I don't eat little Possums. But it does make a great big difference to you. Now tell me, doesn't it?" The three little Possums nodded and finally Grumpy admitted that it did. "Of course it does," continued Sammy. "Now I know old Granny Fox and her ways. She isn't a bit interested in showing you the wonderful things of the Great World. All she is interested in is a good meal of young Possums. If she could climb as you can she wouldn't have bothered to talk to you. But she can't climb and to catch you she has got to get you on the ground. She trusted to her smooth tongue and her promises to do that. As long as you are up a tree you are safe from her and from Reddy Fox and from Old Man Coyote. You take my advice and don't listen to any of them. You may not trust me, but your common sense will tell you that by heeding my advice you are at least safe, while if you do as Granny Fox wants you to you will not be safe if she is what I tell you she is, and you'll find that she is. My advice doesn't cost you anything, but failure to heed it is likely to cost you your lives. Think it over. And without waiting for a reply Sammy Jay spread his wings and flew away.
