GERMANS PREPARE FOR PEACE TIMES

Meeting Called to Discuss Sources of Work For 5,000,000 Soldiers.

Berlin, July 5.—Germany is preparing her labor market for peace times. At a von Bethmann-Holweck, representatives of large employing concerns and German labor unions decided that something must be done to obtain work for 5,000,000 soldiers when the war is over. Although this was only the initial meeting, the details practically determined upon a plan of work similar to President Wilson's endeavors in the United States. It was decided that there should be established throughout Germany information bureaus giving names of employers who want workers and other facts which would assist the laborer in determining whether such a position was the one he wished. The employers announced their intention of re-employing men who are now serving if they should wish their former positions. In all the plans it was agreed that the labor unions, employer organizations and the government should co-operate so that Germany will not have an army of unemployed when the war is over. Minister of Interior Delbrueck presided at the conference, which was held in the Reichstag. In his opening address he declared that the whole question of the labor market at the conclusion of peace would be determined by the facilities for giving information to discharged soldiers. He emphasized the need of information bureaus. Among the many proposals was one that all those seeking employment be allowed free transportation on the railroads. This was regarded as favorable because in Germany the railroads are owned and operated by the government. Another suggestion was that all ex-soldiers be permitted a special telephone and telegraph rate while they are seeking a position. One of the chief concerns of the employers was as to what extent foreigners should be permitted to work in Germany when the war is over. Representatives of the agricultural classes declared they did not think the German fields could be tilled after the war unless there were foreign laborers. For today there are a large number of war prisoners helping there. When Minister Delbrueck suggested discussion as to what wages should be paid invalid soldiers it was taken as a matter of course that invalids would be given their former positions and former wages unless the workers were entirely incapacitated.

This morning's parade, the opening feature of the East Grand Forks Fourth of July celebration, was the biggest and best industrial parade yet given by the business men of this city. There were an exceptionally large number of floats, and several of them were unusually beautiful. Following the parade, Judge Stanton, of Bemidji, the orator of the day, delivered his address. The oration was given in the city park. The parade was led by J. C. Sherlock, marshal of the day. Following him, came members of the Grand Forks and East Grand Forks police forces on mounts. The speaker of the day and East Grand Forks and Grand Forks city officials followed in carriages. The Bydell and the Grand Forks Steam Laundry floats were two of the prettiest in the parade. The Bydell float represented a "basket of American beauties" represented by a number of young women of the city. A number of young women, in special costumes, occupied the Grand Forks steam laundry float. The floral and steam decoration of both were beautiful. The William Boeger automobile float also was decidedly pretty. Mr. Boeger's car was entirely covered by bunting, tinsel and flowers. The head of an Elk, to which were attached white ribbons, was placed on the hood of the car. Then, followed the Robertson Automobile company's car, driven by Oscar Wick, and the Grand Forks and East Grand Forks fire departments. The next position was given over to the comic floats, features of which were the nondescript Ford automobiles and the take-offs on county opinion. The No-Vary and Red Feather grocery floats, the Geist Bakery display and the Standard Oil company's big truck followed, after which came the Colton-Wilder float, a beautifully decorated truck. Congress Candy and Star Laundry company floats followed. The C. J. Kelleher display was interesting. It represented all the accoutrements of the bath room and showed a young boy enjoying a shower bath. The Arneson, Kaufman Bakery company, the Phoenix Mutual Life Insurance company and the Giese & Noonan Hardware company floats followed, after which came the Light-house display, an interesting picture of a light house. The Barnes Oil company and the Grand Forks Steam Laundry company floats completed the parade. The features of the afternoon program will be the baseball game between the East Grand Forks and Fisher teams and the races.

SLANG OF "THE FRONT." London Tit-Bits. The Rev. E. J. Hardy, in his book, "The British Soldier" gives us a few more of the amusing nicknames invented by "Tommy" at the front. All shells are "souvenirs." Some are called "Will-o'-the-Wisps" and some "Porridge Pots." "Woody Marias" are shells that burst in double puffs of white, woolly smoke. "Baby" and "Mother" are far-reaching guns of ours. The latter is so called because it takes good care of our infantry. Another name for the "Hot Cross Bun" because it is hot, snorts as if always cross, and takes the bun by its ability to hit what it is fired at nearly every time. Bullets are called "Haricot Beans." German soldiers are known as "Sausage" and the Uhlan Lancers as the "Ewe Lambs." The Kaiser himself is no more to our men than the passing references to "Asquiths." Now we know this is the name for French matches, because you have to wait and see what happens when you light one. The outer line of trenches, where the men are posted to draw the German fire, is known as the "drawing room"; the inner line where attacks are really met, the "reception room"; and the ground at the rear, where the dead are buried, the "dormitory." When a taube aeroplane approaches British lines the men call out, "Here comes a stormy petrel." The emergency ration becomes the "imaginary ration"; barbed wire entanglements are "fly traps" and "spiders' webs." ONE FATAL RESULT OF CELEBRATION Chicago, July 5.—One fatal accident resulted from the celebration of the Fourth of July yesterday. Clarence Marggraf was killed by the explosion of a gas pipe which he had filled with chemicals.
