

WHAT THEY ARE DOING IN SOCIETY

Tomorrow's action! Can that hoary wisdom, borne down with years, still doat to-morrow? The fatal mistress of the young, the lady, The coward and the fool, condemned to life An useless life in waiting for to-morrow. To gaze with longing eyes upon to-morrow Till interesting death destroys the prospect. Strange that this general fraud from day to day Should, undetected, the world with wretches, The soldier, laboring through the winter's march, Still sees tomorrow drest in robes of triumph. Tomorrow brings the visionary bride. But then, too old to bear another cheat, Learn that the present hour alone is man's.

Miss Dorothy Von Donat Becomes Bride of Arthur Wilk of Gackle, N. D.; Pretty Wedding Here Today

The wedding gown was fashioned of ivory crepe de chine, made in quaint style, with trimmings of lace and cut in round neck. The wedding veil fell to the hem of the garment and was arranged in a Grecian band of white satin ribbon, lilies of the valley and bridal roses. A flower bouquet of bridal roses and lilies of the valley was carried by the bride.

The only ornament worn by the bride was a butterfly lavalliere, which has been in her family for 150 years, and was worn by her great grandmother on her wedding day in Germany.

After the ceremony, the wedding party went to the home of the bride's mother, where the wedding supper will be served to the members of the two families, and a few intimate friends of the bride.

naturally gentle race displaying in war the most dauntless bravery, not only in the excitement of a bayonet charge, but in the stubborn endurance of defense.

The Russian is very fond of pets. I have seen that embodiment of unbending and wooden faced dignity, the conventional butler, forgetting his thin silk stockings and pumps, dash out into the snow when the mercury was far below zero, to rescue a starved kitten, which he therefore kept in his own room. I have never seen a Russian boy throw a stone at a dog or a cat. Russian boys do not capture pigeons. One of the maids in the American embassy rescued a wounded pigeon, set its broken leg and tended it carefully in secret. When her act of kindness was discovered, she burst into sobs, because she was afraid that she would not be permitted to keep the bird.

What To Look For In Buying A Piano

Remember a Piano is, first of all, a musical instrument, not merely a piece of furniture. It must have the musical qualities as well as beauty of design and finish. Decide first on Tone, Action and Durability—select design and finish afterward.

Crown Pianos

are built for lasting musical quality. Perfection of tone is the reason for every part, every bit of workmanship, every careful refinement in construction. The very purity and strength of tone show superior quality. It does not take a trained musician to appreciate the tone of the Crown Piano. All music lovers recognize its beauty.

The action transmits the touch of the fingers to the strings. It must respond accurately to every variation.

To show sensitiveness of action, try getting a soft tone by a very light touch with the "loud" pedal on; then loud crashes to show its strength and wide range of possibilities. Try quick repetitions on the same keys to test the elasticity. These tests show the superiority of the Crown action.

Don't buy the first piano you look at. The more you investigate the more you will appreciate the Crown.

Send for our booklet telling more about how to select a piano. They are FREE.
