AUTUMN NIGHT.

There is no beauty in the hunters' moon. Though neat its mellow light the shadow dawn.

No song of quiet water comes to me. Nor gentle lyric of the woodland dell.

Who can content himself with these and see The nations league themselves with Death and Hell?

AY, democratic preacher, hurl in vain On King or czar the thunder of your ban!

Death's harvest springeth from the seed again Of ancient hate within the heart of man.

Lord Christ, Thy reign hath been two thousand years, And still can hate loose all his powers drear?

Shall not the heathen fling afar his jeers And say: "Your Christ—who never lived—is dead?"

It is not so. But do Thou still be nigh Through all the terror, guilt and shame and pain, Each with his hope in Thee, stern yeomen die.

AMERICA'S HOME SHOE POLISH BLACK-TAN-WHITE

MA WAS SHOCKED.

Linda White—at three—was missed by her mother one day for some time, and when he disappeared she asked: "Where have you been, my pet?"

"Where?" she asked, "I was in the house, but I gave a letter to all the boys in our street. Real letters, you know."

"Where on earth did you get them?" she questioned his mother, in amazement.

"They were those old ones in your wardrobe drawer, tied up with ribbon," was the innocent reply.

A TIPPING EXAMPLE.

It was her very first voyage and, of course, she was nervous. Moreover, she had been told to tip the steward.

"Does this ship tip a good deal?" she asked, timidly, of the officer.

"The vessel, madam," he replied, "merely trying to set a good example to the passengers!"

HE HAS QUIT.

The artist was painting—sunset, red, with blue streaks and green dots. The old peasant, at a respectful distance, was watching him.

"Ah," said the artist, looking up suddenly, "perhaps to you, too, nature has opened her sky pictures page by page. Have you seen the lambs at the edge of dawn leaping across the level east; the red stained, sulphurous islets floating in the lake of fire in the west; the ragged clouds at midnight, black as velvet wings, blotting out the shuddering moon?"

"No," replied the rustic shortly; "not since I signed the pledge."

HOW HE DID IT.

"Now, guard," said Mr. Pilkington to the English railway official, "remember if I have this carriage all to myself for the entire journey you will receive a half crown from me."

"Very good, sir," said the guard, and he locked the door and went to his break to think how he could break that half crown when he got it.

All went well till they got to a station about the middle of the journey, and then an irascible gentleman pulled at the door of Pilkington's carriage.

"Guard, guard!" he yelled, "open this door! I know your tricks. I've got a right to travel in this carriage and I mean to do it!"

The guard hurried up, but, wonder of wonders, he whispered a few words to the irascible gentleman, after which that gentleman went quietly away to seek room elsewhere.

"How did you manage it?" Pilkington asked the guard at the end of the journey, as he pressed the promised half crown into his hand. "How did you manage to get that bad-tempered old chap to go away so quietly?"

"Oh, that was easy," replied the guard. "I only just told 'im you were a bit wrong in the 'ead.'"

HE WAS REALISTIC.

Willie finally persuaded his aunt to play train with him. The chairs were arranged in line and he issued orders.

"Now you be the engineer and I'll be the conductor. Look, now, your watch and get up into the cab."

Then he hurried down the platform, timepiece in hand.

"Pull out there, you red-headed, pie-faced jay!" he said, under his breath. "Why, Willie!" his aunt exclaimed in amazement.

"That's right. Chew the rag," he retorted. "Pull out. We're five minutes late already."

Willie's parents had to forbid his playing down by the tracks.

HE SHOWED RESPECT.

An Irishman from a remote part of the country arrived in London wearing a pair of neat breeches and, as it is unusual to see short trousers on a man, he was soon accosted by a dapper fellow, who inquired:

"Why do you wear your trousers so short, Pat?"

"Well, your honor," replied Pat, "my mother-in-law has died lately and I'm wearing them half mast."

GETTING AT THE SAUCE.

For a solid hour the teacher had instructed her class in geography. Then she asked some test questions.

"Willie Smith," she started off, "you tell me one of the chief products of the West Indies?"

"No, miss," replied Willie frankly, after a long pause for thought.

"Now do try," coaxed the teacher, encouragingly. "Where does the sugar come from that you use at your house?"

Willie's downcast face brightened.

"Sometimes from the grocer's shop," he replied, "and sometimes mother borrows it from the lady next door."

THEY LIKED IT.

"How did the ducks like the new runway you put outside of their coop?"

"All right; they came out fatfooted for it."

ITS VALUE.

"The daisy ought to be selected as an emblem for sports."

"Why that particular flower?"

"Because that variety is a field day on the daisy."
