

WHAT THEY ARE DOING IN SOCIETY

"MOTHER'S SONGS." Mother's voice is low and sweet. As she rocks her babe to sleep; Twilight shadows creep along; While she sings her cradle song; And now we hear— Hush, my dear, be still and slumber; Holy angels guard thy bed.

Now the child has grown, Quite a boy, he walks alone; But the love that mother keeps, Watch o'er him while he sleeps. And now we hear— How gently God commands! How kind His precepts are! Come, cast your burdens on the Lord, And trust His constant care.

See the boy in manhood stand, Fighting for his native land; Over all this broad domain Shall the Stars and Stripes remain. And now we hear— My country, 'tis of thee, Sweet land of liberty, Of thee I sing; Land where my fathers died, Land of the pilgrim's pride, From every mountain side, Let freedom ring.

Peaceful glides her life along; Still she sings her evening song; While her loved ones gather near, Hark to mother's tones so dear, And now we hear— Home, home, sweet home, Be it ever so humble, there's no place like home. —Mrs. William Annerman.

Work A Pleasure

is largely a matter of health; and in this a big factor is eating the right kind of food—food that repairs the daily wear and tear of body and brain—keeps one in trim.

Grape-Nuts FOOD

made of whole wheat and malted barley, supplies all the rich nourishment of Nature's field grains, including their vital mineral salts, so lacking in many foods, but all-important in building up and sustaining brain, nerve and muscle tissue.

Grape-Nuts with cream or good milk supplies sound, well-balanced nourishment—makes for happy days and successful endeavor.

CLUB HONORS JASPER, THE DOG ACTOR, CALLED BROADWAY'S BRIGHTEST STAR

Miss Peggy Wood and Jasper Wearing His New Gold Medal.

New York, Jan. 10.—A few years ago society people gave a dinner to an ape in Newport and they were roundly condemned by the world. The other night a glowing eulogy was delivered by Fred Niblo and a medal presented to a dog by the Theater club of New York, and everyone who was acquainted with this dog, "Jasper," was pleased.

The ape was just an ape; but the dog seems to be something more than a dog; at least he is a justly celebrated actor. In one short season he has risen to stardom on Broadway. Nobody is jealous, nobody thinks that he was pushed into the limelight by an ambitious manager. Everybody knows that he got exactly what he deserves as a reward for his artistry.

Now Jasper acts the human members of the "Young America" company, having pleased New York for a season, will make a tour of the country.

Fittingly celebrating the departure from Broadway, the Theater club, at its annual banquet at Hotel Astor, invited Jasper to be its guest of honor. It has been the custom of the club to extend its compliments to some actor or actress who has shown particularly meritorious work during the year.

This year, in all seriousness, the medal went to the dog. In making the presentation speech Mr. Niblo called attention to the fact that he is the only actor on Broadway who never complained about his dressing room, the number of rehearsals, or the role assigned to him. Also, he never received one of the columns of glowing praise that have been bestowed upon him by the metropolitan press, and in reality does not care what is said of him and seems to live only for his art.

"Young America" recites the story of the village. Everyone hates him, everyone but his dog Jasper. He lives with his aunt, who abuses him, and he grows sullen and suspicious.

He is arrested for robbing a chicken coop and brought to court. Forrest Robinson is the benign old judge who wants to help such boys instead of discouraging them. Art is finally "adopted" by the woman whose chickens he has taken and this causes trouble in her family.

Then Jasper is run down by an automobile and brought in to die. He is put on a couch and Art thinks he is going to lose his only real friend.

"You can't save him unless you make a noise," declares Art, whereupon the company began to snap their fingers in unison and "pull" for Jasper to recover his health. Jasper recovers and the recovery succeeds in fusing all the discordant elements of the family circle so that the play ends happily.

It is an unusual play and in the opinion of many competent critics, the nearest approach to a novelty of the New Year season.
