Gust Nelson, who is employed at the Marlow House, was tendered a "surprise" last Monday evening at the Salvation Army hall. The party was planned by Mrs. O. J. Beck, who wished to show her appreciation of his faithful service while in her employ. A purse of money was presented to Mr. Nelson while seated at the table partaking of coffee and cake. The evening was spent in a social way, singing and remarks by his co-workers forming the program. Mr. Nelson feels very grateful for the honor bestowed upon him, and it proved a happy "surprise."

Say, friend! that's a bad cough you've got. Possibly your last cold has not entirely left you, and you should see to it that you use Mossberg's Cough Remedy in time to fortify your lungs against the chilling blasts of the early winter. Perhaps that's not a cold you've got, but at any rate if you feel one coming on you should try Mossberg's Cough Remedy before you get yourself in the grip of a hacking cough that will stand by you all winter.

A. E. MOSSBERG, Manufacturing Drugist, Willmar, Minn.

The movement for the organization of a stock company for the purpose of erecting an engine factory, foundry and machine shop at Willmar has assumed such proportions as will warrant us to announce that such a company will be formed. Mr. Halvorson, the inventor, has made a preliminary canvass of our well-to-do citizens and has met with hearty encouragement on all sides. It is planned that the company will be incorporated in the near future and have a working capital of about $8,000. Ground will be purchased in the village for the plant. Besides the manufacture of gasoline engines of Lars Halvorson's patent, it is the intention to place in a very complete department for the general repair and re-building of machinery, something that will be of great service and convenience to farmers and mechanics of this and neighboring counties. There is no doubt but that the enterprise when properly launched will do a fine business and be a financial success. THE TRIBUNE predicts that there will be a good demand for the Willmar engines as soon as they can be placed on the market. An enterprise of this kind, that will employ about twenty-five hands, will be an addition to our village, which all good citizens will welcome. Push it along.

TEMPERANCE RALLY.

The temperance champion of Willmar, Prof. H. S. Hilleboe, will lecture at the Opera House next Friday evening. Good singing. All are invited.

Complimentary Lecture

TO LADIES, AT THE OPERA HOUSE, NEXT THURSDAY AFTERNOON.

The ladies of our town will be given an opportunity to listen to a lecture upon "The Physical Life of Woman" by Mrs. P. B. Keyes, of San Francisco. These lectures are given under the direct supervision of the Viavi Department of Hygiene, and as Mrs. Keyes is an enthusiastic exponent of a higher physical attainment among women, an instructive and entertaining programme may be expected. Another lecture will be given Friday on "The Structure and Derangement of the Nervous System." No admission will be charged and ladies are requested to be in their seats promptly at 2:30 o'clock.

Notice.

By order of board of health, all dogs running at large shall be required to wear a muzzle sufficient to prevent the possibility of the biting of other animals or men. Those not muzzled must be tied up until further notice.

Any person having or knowing of a sick dog, immediately notify the health officer.

Farmers are especially requested not to bring their dogs into the village, or they will be dealt with according to law.

This order to take effect at once.

By order of board of health. Dated Mar. 9, 1898, Willmar, Minn.

JOHN ERICSSON BANQUET.

The first annual banquet of the John Ericsson Memorial Association, held at Hotel Nicollet, Minneapolis, on Wednesday evening, March 9, 1898, was attended by a gathering of over two hundred persons. The large and spacious dining-hall was elaborately decorated, and the portrait of John Ericsson in the centre of the American flag was placed at each end of the room. Each of the guests was supplied with a carnation flower and the tables were decorated with roses. At 9:30 the guests were seated at the table. Some twenty waiters waited upon the wants of the guests, and twelve courses were served. After the supper, Hon. Andrew Holt delivered an address of welcome and resigning the office of toastmaster of the evening, introduced his successor, L. A. Rosing of Cannon Falls, who then proceeded to introduce the respective speakers after having himself called the attention of the audience to the purpose of the gathering and in a very patriotic manner and in glowing terms described the great good that John Ericsson had done for America by the invention of the Monitor. He first called upon President Northrup of the State University, who related at the opening, that it was directly due to the invention of the Monitor that he came to Minnesota. He spoke of the dangerous times and of the causes which called forth the necessity of the Monitor, its battle with the Merrimack and its victory; spoke in glowing tribute of the Scandinavians, and strongly urged the erection of a monument to the memory of John Ericsson. His remarks were received with deafening applause.

Hon. Frank Nye should have followed but was unable to be present. Next followed Prof. Henry Slade Goff, at one time Principal of the Willmar High Schools, in an original poem which follows:

John Ericsson, he of the stearn Northern land, Where the Baltic and Bothnia bathe the grim strand, John Ericsson, he of the rude Northern blood, Who for freedom and Ericssoned the rough flood, Of the Northern Atlantic a half thousand Ere the heel of the Genoese roped with its fears, Of Sweden was he of the engineer's fame, Whose triumphs exalted humanity's name, Whose thought pierced the secrets of Nature until The round orb of earth gave him homage, Was armed anew with great Ericsson's might.

John Ericsson, he of the patriot heart, When treason was rending our Union apart, John Ericsson, he of the fiber of oak, Whose soul grew the stronger the harder the stroke, It was he, living under the old stripes and And upon hoisted high on the surge, and And in the storm and the red fire of war,—it was he Whose soul met the tempest right zorn, Who fashioned the rescuing craft, and dispersed The cohorts of fire, and the old ship, immersed In the depths of despair, rose triumphant Once again, as of old, the proud queen of the sea.

Now build ye a statue to John Ericsson, To the land rendered free by the great Washington, Now build ye a statue to Svanhild's son, And the old World's and new World's united In one.

Let it stand where the waves of humanity beat, And the throngs of the city and country folks meet, Where the voice of the lashing of Water-calls To the echoing thunder of Anthony's falls, At the heart of the continent let its fair form Arise to the sunshine and pierce the dread storm, Where the land stretches far and the western winds blow, And the Father of Waters is rolling below, Lay firm its foundation and build ye thereon The features and form of the great Ericsson: In majesty build it high into the air, And name ye the site for it Ericsson square.

The toastmaster then called for A. F. Nordin, who spoke as follows:

"The very efficient committee of the John Ericsson Memorial Association are unquestionably well-up in their duties, for they have clandestinely, surreptitiously and premeditatedly placed the name of your humble servant upon the list of speakers and have over-ruled his objection which was sent by mail, and have not even granted him an exception, though we have among us tonight such a display of talent as is seldom gathered together and their names do not appear upon the lists of speakers. I came to listen—this modest prairie flower plucked in midwinter from the plains of Kandiyohi did not come here to speak. It is said and truly so, that brevity is the soul of wit. It is said not that alone, but upon occasions of this kind very convenient to take advantage of. But I should be false to myself upon this occasion should I fail to express my feelings at a time when we are gathered together to do honor to the memory of a man at whose name the arteries throb and the heart beats faster, and to perpetuate his memory by a suitable monument to be erected within the confines of your beautiful city. I doubt if there is a Swede to-night whose cradle like that of John Ericsson was rocked in the Land of the Midnight Sun, whose infant slumbers when the sun had gone to rest in its bed in the west, was lulled by the notes of the cuckoo and the song of the nightingale, whose infant eyes first opened upon the yellow cross of Sweden, upon its blue field, a flag made immortal through the ages of the past and by its baptism in the noblest blood ever shed by man, and which had gone victorious over land and sea, who is not proud of the name of John Ericsson and the common land of his birth. It is with pardonable pride that we speak of the land of his and our nativity—our mother-land.

"It is not the lot of those seeking the shores of our adopted country to walk through paths of roses or sleep in flowery beds of ease. John Ericsson had his share of the thorny paths of life, he had reverses often than his efforts met with success; but with that determined spirit born of his race he met and overcame them all and left behind an example of success unparalleled in the history of man and which gave his country a star in the constellation of fame ever to shine resplendently upon the pages of history.

"He was not one to live for self, his life was devoted to his fellow-men, an earnest lover of his country and the mercifullest patriot that ever were all-gracious to this his adopted country, and the heavenly-just banner which represents it. What a lesson to those who aspire to avail themselves of the God-given privilege of becoming American citizens, a title at which all others sneer into insignificance.

"John Ericsson's only reward was the transportation after life of his remains back to the land which gave him birth with honors such a monarch might envy and which falls to the lot of our few if any, three hundred scattered by the land of his nativity and resided in her embrace, that in life she had failed to recognize his ability or to extend to him a helping hand.

"He sleeps to-night in the land that he loved so well, and where the birch-groves sigh forth his requiem, mourned by two nations, one a kindred the other the grandest republic upon earth.

"His works live with us and his memory will live with our children and children's children so long as man shall exist upon this continent.

"Let us therefore regardless of nationality, regardless of creeds or political affiliations join hands as true American citizens and pay a fitting tribute to the memory and worth of John Ericsson by erecting a lasting monument to his honor and one that will also do honor to the loyal citizens of Minnesota, be they foreign or native born."

Mr. Nordin was followed by Herman Stockenstrom in Swedish, who dwelt upon the life of John Ericsson and also on the Mine disaster. His remarks were well received. The closing remarks were made by Major George Blight Halstead, who gave some very interesting reminiscences of both the Monitor and the Merrimack. The banquet closed with music by the Twin City Mandolin Orchestra, after which the guests departed seemingly well pleased.

School Notes

The Sophomore class met with Martha Kent last Saturday evening.

Miss Gerda Wannerlund is absent from school on account of illness.

Mrs. Handy, Mrs. Sherwood, Mrs. Rose and Mrs. Craswell visited the schools during the last week.

The Junior class class meeting was held last Wednesday at the home of Edward Lewis.

Miss Elina Wakeman went to Minneapolis last Friday to spend a few days with her parents.

There was no tardiness in the High School last week, which shows that an effort is being made to earn the half holiday at the end of the month.

Miss Hammons, a teacher of elocution and physical culture, is in the city organizing classes. A class of about thirty composed of pupils from the high school and the eighth grade has been formed.

The Teachers' Magazine Club met with Miss Gould on Tuesday evening. Miss Fenno reviewed a magazine article on the Klondike and Miss Gould gave a review of "A Good Word for the Egotist" and "Silk from the Spider's Web."
