In Memoriam.

[Dedicated to the Memory of Miss Amanda Nelson, Born March 26th, 1878; Died, Jan. 15th, 1899.]

A friend whose memory long lingers in the mind with a fragrance of pleasant recollections. Strong and fervent was her affection, but truth and sincerity were the most beautiful flowers which blossomed upon the tendrils of love which grew towards her associates. Frank, outspoken and stout-hearted, she did not fear to rebuke wrong, nor to caution friends at the forkings of the road through life where ahead the path of error seemed most attractive. Weak in the physical body but strong in spirit, her mission on earth was soon accomplished. Early, far too early we mortals thought, did the Master call her, but she responded gladly to His beckoning. Calm in the confidence of her redemption, brave in the assurance of her salvation, she fell into the deep sleep. Had our ears shared with hers the heavenly sounds as the spirit left the clay, no doubt we would have heard the glad acclaim of the spiritual hosts and the Master's voice, "well done, good and faithful servant, come into the joy of the Lord."

Amanda Lydia Nelson was born on the homestead on the Nest Lake prairie in the township of New London, Kandiyohi county, Minnesota, March 26, 1878. Surrounded by a number of brothers and sisters, her early life was of the same uneventful kind as that of any girl raised on a farm, relieved only by a lengthy stay with an aunt in Washington county while a child. Later, while yet young, she acted as housekeeper for a brother at New London for brief periods. Her school advantages were few, but she improved them well. She attended the New London school, and made rapid progress while there. In 1896 she came to Willmar, and entered the Tribune newspaper office as an assistant, where she rendered diligent and conscientious service until forced to leave by sickness. While yet a child she met with an accident the effects of which followed her through life. She fell through an open cellar trap door and struck her chest against the edge of a barrel. A slight deformity resulted which cramped her lungs when she developed into womanhood. In the autumn of 1896 she was taken with typhoid fever and a touch of pneumonia, from which she never fully recovered. She was a member of the Swedish Lutheran church of New London, having been confirmed in the faith under the tutorage of the Rev. C. J. Collin. While at Willmar she taught a class in the Swedish Lutheran Sunday school. She also became a member of the Y. W. C. T. U. at Willmar. Nature had endowed her with a sweet voice and instilled a love of music into her soul. To sing sacred songs was her delight, and before disease spent her powers she joyously gave vent to her emotions in singing. Her character was devoid of the flippancy and carelessness so often found in young people. Even in the midst of gaiety and enjoyment she would keep the serious side of life in mind. Being strong of mind and keen in her appreciation of right and wrong she was prone to be hasty in her criticism of the acts of others, but her many true friends learned to appreciate even this trait of her character. It may seem that hers was a strange fate to be taken far from home to die among strangers, but who will undertake to say of what great importance even her short sojourn among the mountains may have been. She had her mission in life, and brave, true girl that she was, she did not shrink her duty.

Sweet Amanda's spirit now dwells
With angels' throng,
Praising the Lamb her voice now swells
The angels' song.

We would not her awaken from the blissful rest,
We would not call her back from joys among the blest,
Although 'tis hard to part with one we loved so well,
And tears will roll and grief us choke mor'n tongue can tell.
But we know she is safe at home
With Christ Jesus.
She passed the gates at which she'll come
There to meet us.
She said she would expect to meet us all up there,
With her the Lord's glory forever then to share.
God grant us grace to live our lives so we may be
As glad to go and happy in death as was she.

"Side Tracked."

Theatre goers of this generation are desirous of witnessing only such organizations as prove their popularity nightly by playing to large receipts. When success crowns every effort of the manager, the actor feels duty bound to please his audience. The play moves with dash, climaxes are met with more enthusiasm by the audience and the public feels more delighted and better paid for their time. The comedy "Side Tracked," which is due here Friday, Feb. 10, is reported as doing a phenomenal business and has a record for successful management.

An Old Settler Gone.

DIED—On Wednesday, Feb. 1, 1899, at 8 o'clock a. m. of dropsy, Thore O. Ferring, aged 59 years, 7 mos., 27 days.
Deceased had been in feeble health for the last six months, during which time he consulted eminent specialists in this state and in Michigan. He spent several weeks in Detroit, Mich., and also in the Twin cities. Finally, as a last resort, he visited Mount Clemens, Mich., where he remained for treatment until some weeks ago. Not improving in health, he returned to his Willmar home to spend the remainder of his days with his children. They were all present at the bedside of their father except the oldest son, Olof, who was absent in Connecticut.
Nine children are left to mourn the loss of a kind father, by whose death they are bereft of both parents. The mother died some four years ago. The surviving members of the family are as follows: Four sons—Olof, Bernt, Carl, Gerhard; five daughters—Bertha, Julia, Minnie, Lottie and Annie.
Funeral services were held at the Free Lutheran church on Sunday afternoon, and were conducted by Rev. E. E. Gynild, assisted by Rev. C. H. Johnson, of the Presbyterian church. The remains were interred in the Synod cemetery beside those of the mother. A large concourse of old friends and settlers followed the remains to their last resting place. The sympathy of the community is extended to the bereaved children in their affliction.
Thore O. Ferring was born in Hallingdal, Norway, June 4th, 1839. He emigrated to America at the age of 27, first settling in Wisconsin. He removed to Goodhue county and later came to this county, where he engaged in farming and built a comfortable home on the eastern outskirts of Willmar. In 1870 he was married to Inga Anderson, and by that thrift and hard work which characterized the sturdy pioneers of Kandiyohi county, the two managed to accumulate sufficient property to leave their children in comfortable circumstances when the hand of death came to leave them both fatherless and motherless.

The ARGUS moves that a debating club or senate be organized here at once and a start made by some of the young men and women who have ability enough and to spare to make such an enterprise a success.

For the information of the Argus and others to whom it is not generally known, the Young Men's Christian Association requests us to state that a flourishing class in parliamentary practice meets every Friday evening at the Association rooms. The class is open to all who wish to avail themselves of the opportunity to study parliamentary law, as well as to participate in debates, which are conducted in an interesting manner. Prof. Hilloboe is proving a valuable instructor and those in attendance heartily appreciate his efforts. Let us encourage the enterprise by swelling the attendance even more than it has been. The winter evenings can certainly not be spent more profitably. No entrance fee is charged, so all are welcome to come!

A Fleshy Consumptive

Did you ever see one? Did you ever hear of one? Most certainly not. Consumption is a disease that invariably causes loss of flesh.
If you are light in weight, even if your cough is only a slight one, you should certainly take

Scott's Emulsion

of cod liver oil with hypophosphites. No remedy is such a perfect preventive to consumption. Just the moment your throat begins to weaken, and you find you are losing flesh, you should begin to take it. And no other remedy has cured so many cases of consumption. Unless you are far advanced with this disease, Scott's Emulsion will hold every inducement to you for a perfect cure.
