PEOPLE'S PARTY STATE TICKET.

For Governor, THOMAS J. MEIGHEN, of Fillmore county. For Lieutenant Governor, JOHN B. HOMPE, of Otter Tail county. For Auditor, O. S. REISHUS, of Yellow Medicine county. For Secretary of State, C. T. LAMMAN, of Polk county. For Attorney General, F. J. STEIDL, of Traverse county. For Treasurer, E. W. KNATVOLD, of Freeborn county. For Clerk of the Supreme Court, H. B. MESAHL, of Marshall county. For Railroad and Warehouse Commissioner, F. C. GIBBS, of LeSueur county.

When the paper is being printed, the primaries are being closed, and soon the result will be known. Then the campaign for the election will begin in earnest.

In a day or two some of those preliminary estimates will look rather forlorn. In politics it is especially true that a man's "hind sight is better than his foresight."

The successful candidates at the primaries will be ready to endorse the new system of nominations, while a number of unsuccessful ones will probably be inclined to the belief that after all the old convention system is to be preferred.

There is not a county in the state where the party lash is less potent than in among our own people in Kandiyohi county. Especially is this true in county politics. Any little clique or ring, who think they have "a cinch," are subject to serious disappointment.

The primary ballot for each political party should contain blank spaces for all the offices to be filled, regardless of the candidates who have filed. The citizen should be given the same free opportunity to express his preferences at the primaries as is his at the general election.

The busy hum of the thrasher is heard throughout the land. The jolly threshermen who preside over the shelling of the grain, reducing the well-built stacks and filling the bins in the granaries, are the princes of the country districts these days and nothing is too good for them on the average Kandiyohi county farm.

In addition to the republican and people's party candidates for governor or who will visit the Willmar Street Fair, Mr. Rosing, the democratic nominee, has been invited, and he has arranged to be here on Friday. The prohibition state committee has also been asked to send around their automobile band-wagon which carries their candidate, Rev. Scanlon. Thus all parties will be represented.

We are pleased to hear a report that a close watch will be kept up during the street fair of suspected places, to prevent them from selling intoxicating drinks. That report, if true, has the right ring. The evil should be minimized to the least possible degree during these three days especially, for the sake of the reputation of the city to be carried out by the thousands of visitors to the fair, and the same policy should be enforced permanently. With the power the police department possesses under the charter and laws, the suspected places can be subjected to so strict surveillance as to make infractions of the law few and far between. The possession of a government license is a sufficient ground for suspicion. With a number of officers in the city armed with search warrants ready for action there will be little peace of mind to the individual intent on defying the law. No person conducting a legitimate refreshment stand would seriously object to having his premises searched to prove his innocence of wrongdoing.

A Water Set from Anderson Bros. makes not only a most artistic and ornamental feature of your sideboard, but will be found a very necessary essential for hot weather comfort. We have them in silver and cut glass, and in glass with silver mountings, very rich and effective.

A Pleasing Outlook.

There is a pleasing outlook for political discussion. For six years it has been an unpleasant duty to question the sincerity of old party leaders. A party, great at least in numbers, declared for certain reforms in its national platform. Its sincerity was at once doubted by many reformers, whose efforts have necessarily been to make the voters believe that such professions were insincere; that they were made only to fool the people. To prove to a man that the leaders of his party are not acting in good faith is an uphill job, an almost hopeless task. At best it is very unpleasant. The outlook now is that good faith may be conceded to all parties in the next presidential campaign. The democratic party's position, already outlined, will be that monopolies exist by reason of the protective tariff and that the remedy is to take the tariff off of goods manufactured by monopoly. The Republicans will claim that to destroy the tariff might kill the trusts but would at the same time kill the industries of the United States; that the evils of trusts, not necessarily the trusts themselves, should be removed; that congress has not the power to control trusts and that the constitution should be so amended to give it such power, and that when such power is obtained the Republican party will take proper action. The People's party position will be that the monopoly of money and the monopoly of transportation breed and sustain other monopolies; that a reduction of the tariff will not kill these parent monopolies, will in no way reach them, that the government should issue the money direct to the people and should own and operate the railroads, giving equal rates of interest and of transportation to all. The issues will be about the same they were in 1892 and 1894, when they were the tariff question as between the old parties, with the Populists advocating Missouri World.

Why Stoop to Misrepresentation?

In his tour through the northern counties Mr. Rosing is reported to have said Mr. Meighen and his colleagues on the Peoples party state ticket were nominated merely to keep up the legal standing of the party; that it was not intended that it should get a large vote. This is a misrepresentation unworthy of a candidate for any office, especially for governor of the state. The Peoples party stands for actual reform in government. Mr. Rosing is the candidate of the Cleveland renegades from democratic principles. If elected he will be powerless to administer the affairs of the state upon the policy declared in the platform upon which he is making his canvass; a platform erected, as we believe, to deceive populists and others who demand actual republican democracy in government. It would have been treason to true Jeffersonianism for the Peoples party to surrender to the Grover Cleveland contingent of the trust pirates.

Thomas J. Meighen's nomination was thrust upon him by a party that stands in the breach for the whole people of the United States. He accepted the nomination as a duty that no patriotic citizen can ignore. He and the people behind him are governed by love of country and equal justice to all men. To purify the public service and repeal class legislation the party is pledged. It will not compromise with imperialists under whatever party name they may adopt. Mr. Rosing made a serious mistake when he misrepresented the meaning of the nomination of the Peoples party state ticket. That it will receive the hearty support of the party and many who have not openly joined in the contest against political and official corruption is well known. The Peoples party is forging to the front and will accomplish its glorious mission—National Republicanism.

Shots From The Forum.

Intelligent voting comes only from independent thinking. Up to the hour of going to press the list of trusts smashed by the republican party can be set up from an empty case. The campaign posters depicting the fatted laboring man with "the full dinner pail" have been torn down in coal mining districts. The beef combines has obeyed the injunction and formed a merger. Nothing like having an attorney-general that attends to business. The men who upheld the banner of the peoples party in 1892 and 1894 were not three-months men out for a picnic. They enlisted for the war. Roosevelt says that the republican party is not in favor of the trusts. It is certain, however, that the trusts are in favor of the republican party. If the constitution does not permit the levying of an income tax the peoples party believes in amending it so that the incomes of millionaires can be taxed.

If the country's prosperity is to be measured by the number and magnitude of its labor troubles, the republican party now has the right to pat itself on the back.

Vaudeville managers, ever on the lookout for funny things, are making strenuous efforts to obtain a set of moving pictures representing Terrible Teddy charging on the trusts. If the rights of property are superior to the rights of man than the public should have nothing to say even if they will have to keep their coal stoves warm with woolen blankets.

The adoption of an economic system in this country which would reduce the number of millionaires, and incidentally millionaires' daughters, would be a hard blow to the spindle-legged scions of European nobility.

When a keg of American trust wire nails sells in foreign countries for one half of the price charged in the home market, the American consumer should not wonder why certain protected "infant industries" are so willing to contribute campaign funds to the republican managers.

Don Quixote Van Sant will continue to poise his javelin before the railroad merger windmill until the November election. The ludicrous spectacle may divert some peoples attention from the most dangerous of mergers—the merger of the republican party with the trusts and monopolies of the country.

Some republicans, strange to say, are getting their eyes focused on the injustice of a high tariff on trust-made products and are beginning to cry for tariff reform; but they say: "We want the tariff adjusted by its friends, not its enemies." Very good indeed. The Younger brothers were anxious to be sent from Minnesota to Missouri for trial, because they wanted to be tried by their friends and not their enemies.

An eminent republican statesman has declared that the government would be justified in taking possession of and operating a sufficient number of coal mines to supply the navy and the army transports with coal. The function of armies and navies is to destroy human life. Stoves and furnaces are used to save and give comfort to human life. Isn't it a strange philosophy that the government should destroy but not protect life?

Julius Caesar, bent on establishing a one man power on the ruins of the Roman republic, said he feared Cassius, because said he: "He thinks too much, such men are dangerous, give me fat men, such as sleep o' nights." The men whom the republican empire builders of this country fear are the men who think. The contented party slave who is satisfied with a full dinner pail and who sleeps o'night, even though his children shiver from want of coal, is not dangerous.

If the peoples party is dead, some of the high-bred republican papers should quit talking about it, or use a little more refined language in talking about the dead. It must be the populist ghost that is haunting some of these politicians and old party newspapers.—Fulda Free Press.

The republicans don't believe their own statements in regard to the demise of the peoples party. They are talking that way only for the purpose of fooling weak-kneed populists.

AN OLD FAVORITE BATTLE HYMN OF THE REPUBLIC By Julia Ward Howe. JULIA WARD HOWE was born in New York city May 27, 1819. At the age of seventeen she was an anonymous contributor to the New York Magazine. She married Dr. Samuel G. Howe of Boston in 1843. Her first book of poems, "Fusion Flowers," was published without signature in 1854 and was followed in 1857 by a second volume. Her third volume of poetry, published in 1858, contained the poem printed below, which was written in beleaguered Washington in November, 1861, and first given to the public in the pages of the Atlantic Monthly for February, 1862. MINE eyes have seen the glory of the coming of the Lord; He is tramping out the vintage where the grapes of wrath are stored; He hath loosed the fateful lightning of his terrible, swift sword; His truth is marching on. I have seen him in the watch fires of a hundred circling camps; They have builded him an altar in the evening dews and damps; I can read his righteous sentence by the dim and flaring lamps—His day is marching on. I have read a fiery gospel writ in burnished rows of steel: "As ye deal with my contemptors, so with you my grace shall deal. Let the Hero, born of woman, crush the serpent with his heel, Since God is marching on." He has sounded forth the trumpet that shall never call retreat; He is sifting out the hearts of men before his judgment seat. Oh, be swift, my soul, to answer him; be jubilant, my feet! Our God is marching on. In the beauty of the lilies Christ was born across the sea; With a glory in his bosom that transfigures you and me. As he died to make men holy, let us die to make men free, While God is marching on.
