Sheeley and Young's big musical comedy "Maloney's Wedding Day," new in everything but the title, comes to the Willmar opera house on Wednesday, Oct. 5. "Maloney's Wedding Day" is a farce comedy pure and simple—a farce played by real comedians-singers and dancers a farce filled to the brim with cat-by music. There is nothing which is coarse, vulgar or suggestive and one may laugh comfortably over its sallies, its "mix ups," and its dialogue, with the assurance that, if laughter he medicine, herein is an excellent tonic for melancholia. It is full of gaiety, sparkle and vim and is laughable even in its most quiet moments. To the brilliant music of Hyomel is added the music of merry peals of laughter which the performance provokes.

Woman Was Insane.

A woman, giving her name as Eliza Rebecka Olson, was taken from the "Flyer" last night when it arrived here and Policeman Stephens was told to look after her, as her actions while on the train indicated that she was raving mad. Stephens removed her to the county jail, where she staid till this morning, when she was examined in probate court. She said she had been in the asylums at St. Peter and Rochester and that she was on her way to Shieldsville, but as her explanations were all broken and contradictory nothing definite could be ascertained. She was declared to be insane and was ordered committed to the asylum at Fergus Falls, to which place she was taken today by Sheriff Lundquist.

It is said that a somewhat elderly man, supposed to be her husband was with her on the train and that he went through abandoning her to her fate.

Home from Wedding Trip.

Louis Eddy and bride arrived in Willmar last Monday, after spending their wedding trip at Eastern points, including a visit to the World's Fair at St. Louis. They have gone to the farm home in the town of Whitefield, where they are now at home to their many friends.

The bride will be remembered as Miss Hannah Berkness Moe, who for several years made her home with the Eddy family in Whitefield. The marriage took place in Chicago the 14th inst, the ceremony being performed by the Rev. C. Harmon Johnson, at his residence, 5312 Indiana avenue. Willmar friends extend hearty congratulations and wish them a long life of happiness in their new relation.

CHOKING CATARRH CURED

Your Money Back if Hyomel Does Not Cure You.

"Use Hyomel and be cured of catarrh," is what all who have tried it for that disease say to their friends. It is the easiest thing in the world to stop catarrh at its beginning if you use Hyomel. Just breathe the health-giving, balsamic air for a few minutes and your catarrh will be cured.

In this city and neighboring towns, there are hundreds who can testify to the remarkable powers of Hyomel to cure catarrh. Many of the staunchest friends of this remedy today began its use with little hope that they would be cured, but as A. E. Mossberg offered to refund the money if it did not cure, they decided to try it on that plan, and were soon restored to health.

"Tony, the Convict," is a comedy which will be presented at Maynard in the near future, under the auspices of the Maccabees at that place. The leading role will be played by Al Green, one of the scrobbots who was with the Cash Carnival Co. last season but who is at present traveling for a fruit house. Wm. White, the genial clerk at the Park hotel, will take the leading comedy role—"Weary Wayside," a tramp character, while Miss Ruth Zeno, formerly of this city, will appear as "Sally," a colored servant girl. There are twelve characters in the cast and as some of the players are professionals there is reason to believe that the play will be well presented. It is probable that arrangements will be made to have it put on in Willmar.

There was a fair attendance at the men's meeting held last Sunday afternoon in the Lutheran Free church. Very interesting addresses were made by Secretary P. C. of the State Y. M. C. A. and Mr. J. M. Anderson of the State executive committee. Excellent music was furnished by a male quartette and on the organ by Lewis Hanson. In the evening the two gentlemen spoke to a very large congregation at the Presbyterian church.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

Music will be had regularly every morning after this.

More music books and more seating capacity seem to be the demands of the day.

The Freshmen class for this year is the largest that has ever entered the school, and the "freshies" feel proud over it too.

We note that the question in the debating league has been changed, and will bear upon some phase of the emigration question.

A change in the High school course which we forgot to note last week was the change from botany to zoology in the Freshmen year.

The first examinations for the school year are being conducted in the different classes, and with these examinations were the resolutions that the standings shall average the '90's and '100's by the individual students.

The Seniors held their first regular class meeting last week. The following served as officers: Maurice Jensen, president; Barbara Williams, vice president, and Mayme Garver, secretary and treasurer.

HOW HE WENT GUNNING

(Original.)

A belle usually becomes such rather on account of her talent for "social politics." To use a coined expression, than her beauty. Irene Whittemore of New York was not only an adept in those artificial ways which go to make a woman a social success, but she was a very beautiful woman. Her smile was irresistible, especially as it showed a superb set of teeth. Many a woman, obliged to repress her own smile rather than reveal discolored or repaired teeth, envied Miss Whittemore her thorough abandonment to mirth, which revealed an additional beauty.

Miss Whittemore, being comparatively poor, had no choice between abandoning society and marrying a rich man. Anderson Asche, possessed of $50,000 a year, fell in love with her, was accepted, and they were married. All went well till one autumn day shortly before Mr. Asche was about to go gunning for woodcock a note which his wife had neglected to send lay unheeded on her dressing case. It was addressed to a Dr. Bachrach, whose name the husband had never heard his wife mention, the family physician being Dr. Fairchild. Asche became suspicious and, slipping the letter from the envelope, read:

My husband goes to his shooting club on Thursday. Come Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock, I will wait for you and let you in. Remember that any slip would ruin me.

As there was no street and number on the envelope, Asche concluded that he should send it by confidential messenger. Putting the note back into its envelope, he replaced it on the dressing case and left the room. Thinking that his wife might desire the services of a physician without his knowledge, he looked through a directory and discovered that there was no Dr. Bachrach in the city. Then he gave up all hope as to the innocence of the signature. "I have decided," he said to his wife that evening at dinner, "not to go shooting till Friday afternoon."

"Indeed?" said his wife carelessly.

"And if I don't find the game in morning, I can find out all about it as you had better attend to it on Friday night."

"There is no social matter that I think of. I shall take advantage of your absence to get a good rest."

Asche expected that his wife would change her assignment to Friday night, and he was not disappointed. When Dr. Bachrach stepped from a carriage before the Asche residence, Mr. Asche was on the opposite side of the street watching for him. A friend whom the injured husband had taken into his confidence stepped up to Dr. Bachrach and informed him that Mrs. Asche desired the doctor to submit himself to his guidance and he would take him to a place where she awaited him and where she could receive him with less risk. Without waiting for Dr. Bachrach's consent, the friend pushed him into another carriage, got in himself, and the U. W. Linn, who had been previously instructed, drove away. Asche preceded them in another carriage.

In a few minutes Asche's carriage stopped at a house, which he entered, and directly afterward the friend and Dr. Bachrach entered after him. When the two latter stepped into a room on the second floor, Asche was standing before a fireplace ready to receive them. There was a look on his face that meant death, and Dr. Bachrach saw at once that he had been trapped.

"Sir," said Asche, "my wife's correspondence with you has fallen into my hands. You have wrecked my life. Either you or I shall not go out of this room alive."

"What?"

"Silence! You shall have the same chance for your life as I. You shall be represented by a friend."

"But—"

"Silence, I say! There are writing materials in that secretary. Go there and write to a friend simply that you desire him to come to you at once, and I will see that your note is delivered."

"Will you?"

"Do as I bid you," thundered Asche, "and do not tempt me to kill you in a way that will be considered murder."

"If you will only listen!"

"I will not listen. Write for your friend. Then we will settle which, if either, of us is to live."

Asche stood pointing to the desk, and Bachrach, despairing of a hearing, went there and wrote something on a piece of paper.

"Examine it, Higbee," said Asche. "Remember, he shall write nothing but a simple request for a friend to come to him."

Higbee took the paper and read it. "A singular expression stole over his face. 'A fool blunder,' queried Asche, 'what is it?'

"What do you mean?"

Higbee handed him the paper.

I am a Philadelphia dentist and made an appointment with Mrs. Asche to replace her husband, which I made her some years ago, with a new set. I have always heard New York is a wicked city, but I didn't expect her murdered here.

Asche looked up from the paper to see the dentist standing in a humble, appealing position before him, terror written on every line of his face, holding forth a dainty box, in which rested a set of false teeth.

"Get out!" yelled Asche, and the dentist beat a retreat, missing his footing in his haste and tumbling downstairs.

The story got out. Mrs. Asche retired from social life, and Dr. Bachrach received so many orders from Gotham society magnates that he left Philadelphia and settled in New York.

How Wheat Shrinks.

G. W. Monson, who lives west of Spicer, made an experiment which may be of interest to farmers who are undecided as to whether or not it pays to hold wheat after it is threshed in the fall.

After seeding last year Mr. Monson had a small quantity of cleaned wheat left, and after carefully weighing it, he set it aside for a year. At the end of this time he re-weighed the wheat, finding that it had shrunk from 128 pounds to 116 pounds, or nearly ten per cent. When we consider the fact that this was dry wheat which had been threshed eight months before the first weighing, it will be seen that the shrinkage on wheat, from the time it first leaves the machine until it gets perfectly dry, must be very great.

When we come to figure insurance, interest and shrinkage the man who holds his wheat a year before he markets it must get quite a substantial increase in price in order to realize as much as he would get for it when it was first threshed.—Green Lake Beece.

THE ARAB HORSE.

He is Virtually a Pony, but a Remarkably Sturdy One.

The Arab is virtually a pony, standing 14.2 hands, oftener under than over. He is not fast, even at the gallop; indeed, he is slow. He is a very poor trotter both as regards speed and action, a bad back, and cannot walk without continually sticking his toe in the ground. He is totally unfitted for harness and is uncomfortable to ride, except at the gallop; this is his natural gait, and in it his movement is free, smooth, delightful and easy. As regards his general makeup and anatomical formation, he is perfect, and his constitutional and physical soundness is wonderful. He has great bone substance, vigor, resolution, strength, staying powers, courage, boldness, sobriety, the soundest legs and feet and extraordinary lung power, which is due to the atmospheric conditions and free life to which he has been used from time immemorial; extraordinary eyesight, good temper, mild manners, tractability, instinct and sagacity, and for his size is a wonderful weight carrier.

It is this extraordinary constitution and anatomical perfection, and this magnificent courage, nerve and mettle of the Arab which have made the thoroughbred of today what he is, and not his speed, which has only existed in songs.

The Arab attaches far greater importance to bottom, speed and sobriety than he does to what might be called "artistic beauty." Of such a horse he will say: "Let us not be in a hurry. Let us see him work. He might be only a cow, with a lion's hide on his back." When you consider what the idea of bottom is, it may be sufficient to know that it means a horse should be able to travel with a man on his back, a change of clothing, food for rider and horse, his gun, bag, etc., from sixty to ninety miles a day for five or six days in succession, and after a couple of days' rest be able to repeat the task, and this under a sweating sun. Further, it is
