

Thank You!

It is now about three months since I came to this city and purchased the outfit and business of the Willmar Steam Laundry. At that time the institution was the first week's business being less than the actual expenses. But thanks to the courtesies of the people of Willmar and vicinity, the business has gradually increased each week until it is now on and gives promise of doing even better in the future. This is not said in a spirit of bragado but simply to show those of you who are my patrons that your patronage has helped along the aggregate result and has been appreciated. There are however numerous others whose names I would like to see on my register.

a new washer to my outfit and will put in a new boiler within thirty days. Other facilities and improvements will be added as needed and patronage demands. Again allow me to

Thank You!

From Uncle Silas in Chicago

Chicago, Ill.

Saint Patricks Day, 1906

Dear Readers of the Tribune:—

Last letter I wrote left me a standing in the Montgomery Ward tower, and I 'spect some of you folks have been wonderin' if I stayed up there. But for your satisfaction as well as my own, I'm glad to say I got down alive the same way as I went up. I reckon I could have made the distance a good deal faster by jumpin' over the railing, but I weren't in no great rush, and I was afraid that if I did I reached the sidewalk the sudden stop, the Irishman sed, wouldn't be very healthy for my vitals. But as for as I can figger out, the result may be what I heard about the same as would had happen and that is what I'm going to tell you 'bout.

When I came down on the ground again, the trials and tribulations of this earth came back to me with renewed force. Where was I to go for lodgin' for the night? Without a single copper in my trousers, things, I 'low, looked pretty plum. But it is queer how I see the darkest life before me, and the next thing I know I was crowded I reckon I'd just take the middle of the street for it. I was a walkin' along lookin' up at the buildin's like, never 'specin' nothin' but 'fendin' for 'fendin' 'fendin' boys, before I had time to turn around or even say Chaney Platt, I was knocked into the air. If I ever struck the ground again, I don't remember, but the next thing I know I woke up in a bed in the city hospital.

"Doctor," ses I to a lace-curtained bald-headed 'vidual ses was standin' by my bunk. "Doctor, ses I, I reckon that's what you are to judge by your drug store smell, have you got nothin' askin' you a question?"

"Uncle Josh," ses he, "you probably can't stand to talk." "My name is Silas," ses I, "and I reckon I kin talk layin' down fer as that goes. You want blame me fer bein' a mite curious, but say Doc, haint lightnin' a little unusual for this time of the year?" "My friend Silas," ses he, "one of them 'ere horseless carriages, heh! Well, I'll say this much for the machine, that it had a fierce punch than any bronchus I ever run up against. Then I turned my face to the wall and got to sturin' the wall paper.

What is this craze fer buildin' machines to get through space at such an all-fired rate of speed a goin' to lead up to? Course I know what the automobile led up to in my particular case, but I'm speakin' in general. What in Dan patch are folks in such a terrible hurry fer? Now fer instance, there I was a walkin' on the public thoroughfare. I had as much right there as anybody. What good did it do that those goggled-eyed scorchers to knock me sky high? Couldn't he have slowed up some and 'plittly asked me to get out of his way? I reckon I'd have been more than willin'.

What are people tearing after anyway? Now there is them fellers as are breakin' their necks tryin' to make flyin' machines. Just as if had nater meant us humans to fly she wouldn't have given us wings. I seed in the papers the other day 'bout a feller as is going to make an attempt to fly with the north pole in an automobile. Well here is wishin' him luck, but I can't help thinkin' that his underpropation is a rather precarious proposition.

To judge by the number of them 'ere broke-down aught-to-mobles us farmers have hauled to town fer the fallen-by-the-wayside chaw-fierces, it would seem to me safer for the man to start out with a yoke of oxen. He would at least find them more sure when it come to snakin' home the pole, if that is what he is after. And that brings my mind to the question: what do folks want with the north pole anyway. Now take fer another instance that feller here in Chicago that thought the old way of navigatin' in a boat was to tame. He goes to work with much labor and expense to make a big hollow rubber ball, gets into the thing and starts to roll across Lake Michigan last winter.

FLORIDA FLUCTUATIONS.

LAKE FLORIDA, March 26. — E. P. Schedeen returned from his trip to the west last Monday evening. While there, he bought a farm near Gresham, Ore., 14 miles from Portland. After a month's sojourn in that delightful country, he says a corner near the stove is the most advisable place here.

Some of those interested in good music made a trip to Willmar last Friday evening to hear the noted violinist, Heide. "Would not have missed it for any price," is the most common expression, and a hope that Prof. Heide will return to Willmar is expressed everywhere.

Miss Ragna Nelund spent a few days with her sisters, Miss Rykken and the Misses Soderholm, last week. Miss Josephine Rykken spent a few days visiting at the home of C. C. Berkland last week.

Everybody is indulging in a slipping and tumbling contest these days. Miss Mary Nelson will return to her home this week, after spending three months in New London.

Mr. and Mrs. Victor Johnson and family left for Chicago last Friday. They have sold their farm to Reier Thorson, who will move over soon.

Mr. and Mrs. John Skoglund will move to Willmar soon, where they will make their future home.

how my friend Will Johnson of New London has traded for a pair of bronchos.

I admit that a broncho haint no animal to be trusted much, but she's a heap more trustable than one of them 'ere 'mobles anyhow. And Bill knewed it.

Sorely yours, UNCLE SI.

Springdale Ranch, Wash., Feb. 20, 1906. On March 1 left Everett on the C. N. over the Cascades enroute for Wenatchee, at the foot of the mountains on the east side. As far as to Wellington the weather was fine, but there we began climbing the Cascades, passing the same object three different times only higher each time, and then thru the Cascade tunnel after which there was snow so deep that a man standing in a path that was out was out of sight. Then came the descent on the east side. At the foot of the mountain there was no snow, but the weather was very cold. At the Wenatchee depot I was met by Mrs. H. A. Morterud, formerly Miss Mattie Hogmore of Lake Lillian, and enjoyed the hospitality of that home for one day. Then 91 miles at in into the renowned region, the Big Bend country, 30 miles east from the coast. There I got into one of the fiercest storms I ever experienced. Old settlers say they never saw anything like it in thirty years. Snow, sleet and gravel whirring at the windows and walls, and pieces of boards flying around in all directions. I could hear my friend as he destination three miles from the station, over the phone, but I could not get me for three days. During this time I had to get up with poor hotel accommodations, not suffering severely, as no one was prepared for such weather. I sat there reflecting on the weather, at the coast and said to myself: "This is also Washington, but the other side of

"To judge from the buildings in town and the way business is carried on in all cities a person sees at a glance that there is something to be bind it. And that is the great wheat country, which is unexcelled. Thirty thousand of wheat the acre is considered a small crop, and the style of farming here convinces the easterner that he is not in it. A gang of three plows is run by eight horses, four teams in a line, driven by a teamster with only one line, called the jerk line. Six horses are used on a driver or harness. Selfinders are unknown in this country. The harvesting is done by hand, run by six horses. But it requires 21 horses and seven men to take care of the grain and all. The combined machine is fast coming and the cutting, threshing, sacking and weighing up sacks is all done on the machine. The straw is dumped into bins, and the sacks are also dumped out at a time. As there is no rain here all summer the sacks are left in piles like cordwood until they are ready to be hatched by six teams to one wagon. horses—all large racks. No farmer drives anywhere with less than four horses. All seem to be doing well. Christ Aasen, formerly of Minnie, is considered one of the most well-to-do farmers here; owns 300 acres of land, farm in good shape, well equipped with the necessary tools, and has money loaned out beside. By possums do not seem to be doing well here, as each farm supplied with two or three dozes. These are kept to keep the coyotes (prairie wolves) from the doors. Coyotes are a pest in this country. If a horse or other animal is sickly or for some reason left alone to get up quickly when lying down it will be attacked by a dozen or more coyotes and devoured. A little girl, four years old, left home once to follow the track her father had gone a few minutes before. She was found by a neighbor who recovered her, dead or alive, but nothing was found except some skin and hair from her head and some bones.

Special Sale of Sorosis Petticoats

ONE DAY ONLY Saturday, March 31

THE SOROSIS PETTICOATS are the finest made. They are perfection. Stylish, handsome, beautiful. At this sale every woman will find fine, serviceable skirts and petticoats at prices so low as to be within the reach of every purse. It is a great opportunity also to add an extra petticoat to their wardrobe.

Made of best mercerized saten, they are as rustling silk as silk itself. And that yoke which sets the straight front sure and true is important. So is the fact that every seam is strapped both inside and out.</
