HERE'S THE POINT

If you are a business man, did you ever think of the field of opportunity that advertising opens to you? There is almost no limit to the possibilities of your business if you study how to turn trade into your store. If you are not getting your share of the business of your community there's a reason. People go where they are attracted—where they know what they can get and how much it is sold for. If you make direct statements in your advertising so to it that you are able to fulfill every promise you make. You will add to your business reputation and hold your customers. It will not cost as much to run your ad in this paper as you think. It is the persistent advertiser who gets there. Have something in the paper every issue, no matter how small. We will be pleased to quote you our advertising rates, particularly on the year's business.

VICTOR E. LAWSON, Editor and Manager. WEDNESDAY, JUNE 12, 1921.

A Johnson club has been formed in Sandusky, Ohio. Its purpose is to work for the nomination of Gov. John A. Johnson of Minnesota at the democratic candidate for president in 1928.

Texas has fined a branch of the Standard Oil company in the sum of $1,623,000 for violation of the anti-trust law and has further forbidden the company to continue in business in the state. The Texas method is more effective than the usual way of levying a light fine and then letting the company raise the price of its product sufficiently to make the people pay the fine in a few hours.

Senator Knox of Pennsylvania will go into the next republican national convention with the 68 votes of his state pledged to him. He was formally placed in the field by the Pennsylvania state convention last week, and says he will accept. This will somewhat embarrass Roosevelt in his efforts to make the round Taft his residuary legatee, as Knox has been pretty close to the president and is generally credited with having started the anti-trust litigation of the administration. Roosevelt himself having publicly given him credit for this work. As far as ability is concerned he is undoubtedly the superior of the Ohio politician, and he certainly ought to know how to get at their trusts, for he has been in their service the greater part of his life and ought to know their methods pretty well.

What the people want is tariff revision and a continued use for another term of Teddy's big stick.—Ex.

The most hearty and earnest enunciation of the needs of immediate tariff revision and reciprocity was made by President McKinley six years ago just before his assassination and the inauguration of his successor. Since that time, not a step has been taken by congress and not a word has emanated from the White House, in the direction of fulfillment of President McKinley's words to the public. The needs of the country for tariff revision have grown since 1901 daily and monthly each, and neither congress nor the president have permitted any national action to be taken in the direction of meeting these needs.—Commercial West.

Which goes to show that if the country really wants tariff revision it will have to place Teddy's big stick in the hands of someone willing to use it for that purpose. Teddy is either satisfied with the present tariff, or else he has not the courage to offend the element that furnished a large part of his campaign fund in 1904.

Will the next national campaign be fought out on the old states rights question? It begins to look that way. President Roosevelt is becoming more and more pronounced in his utterances demanding that the entire regulation of the railroads shall be put in the hands of the federal government. Bryan, Johnson and other democratic leaders are equally insistent in demanding that state traffic be controlled by the state governments and that the federal government shall control interstate traffic. Thus the old question of states rights, which for nearly half a century has been a merely theoretical one and therefore of no interest to the people at large, has become joined to one of the vital issues of the day. The railroads as a rule are with Roosevelt on this proposition. They recognize the fact that if all the work of controlling them is thrown on one commission, out of touch with local conditions and the sentiment of the people in the various sections of the country, and overwhelmed with work as it necessarily must be, there would be very little control exercised. The states have of late shown a strong determination to exercise effective control, and the railroads want to get away from that power. There are, however, men in sympathy with the railroads who are clear-sighted enough to see that the people are in earnest in this matter, and that if effective control is not provided the people will resort to the more radical remedy of government ownership. Among these is the editor of the Commercial West, who in his issue of last week said: "If state control is denied to state and local business and the federal government is given an absolute monopoly of railroad control even in state and local matters, there is little question that the question of government ownership would be immediately precipitated. Federal regulation has thus far been so closely interwoven with political control thru congressmen that it has failed thus far to command public confidence. To stop each and every state in the Union from exercising its constitutional prerogatives in regulating state business would arouse a wave of popular antagonism and distrust, which not at all unlikely would react on the railroads and give great impetus to government ownership. Let the federal government show good faith and efficiency, first, in effectively controlling interstate business before trying to cover state affairs also."

Attorney-general E. T. Young has won the St. Cloud "lid" case in the supreme court. A decision by Justice Brown was filed today affirming the lower court in the quo warranto action against J. E. C. Robinson, former mayor of St. Cloud.

The decision holds that any mayor is under obligation to see that the state laws are enforced. If he fails, the attorney-general may sue for civil damages, and may also bring proceedings to have the mayor ousted from office.

This is regarded as a sweeping decision of great importance in the efforts for law enforcement. It puts a powerful weapon in the hands of the temperance forces.

The Robinson case was appealed on a demurrer and will now go back to the lower court for trial. Only the civil case will be tried, as Robinson's term as mayor has expired. He is now a member of the state senate.

The law makes it the specific duty of the attorney-general to bring proceedings for the removal of an officer who is neglecting his duty. The revised statutes, in the chapter on intoxicating liquors, specify the duty of mayors and other officials, in the following: "Every sheriff, constable, marshal and policeman shall summarily arrest any person found committing any act forbidden by this chapter and make complaint against him. Every county attorney shall prosecute all cases under this chapter arising in his county. The president or mayor of every municipality shall make complaint of any known violation of the provisions of this chapter, and the chief of police and all policemen shall make arrests and complaints as in this section provided, anything in the ordinances or by-laws of such municipality to the contrary notwithstanding."

Any county commissioner, member of a municipal council, sheriff or other officer who willfully refuses or neglects to perform any official duty imposed by this chapter shall be guilty of malfeasance in office and shall be removed therefrom and be disqualified from holding the same for and during the remainder of the term for which he was elected or appointed, and shall forfeit not less than $100 nor more than $500, which amount may be recovered in an action against him personally or on his official bond."

The above decision is one of the most important victories ever won by the temperance people of this state. No mayor or city authority will dare openly disregard this decision if they do not care to take chances of being removed from office. St. Paul, the largest wide-open city in the state, promptly shut down, and not a drop of liquor was to be had there last Sunday. The saloonkeepers estimate that from $150 to $1500 was lost to their respective bank accounts, but their patrons are just so much ahead. The police court business on Monday was about one quarter of the usual Monday grind. Were it simply the loss of one day's business during the week the average liquor dealer might accept his forced holiday philosophically, but the shutting down and rigid enforcement during Sunday is an object lesson which shatters the chief argument against prohibition on other days of the week. If the law against illegal sale of liquor can be enforced on Sundays it can also be enforced on other days. If closing saloons on Sunday promotes the peace, happiness and prosperity of the people during part of the week, no further proof is needed that closing on all days will improve conditions during the whole week.

The names used for this week's rebuses are physical features of the county's geography and may all be found in the geological survey of the county, which is reproduced on pages 98 to 102 in the County History. To the party sending us the best solution of these rebuses by Saturday evening, June 22, we will send as a prize a volume entitled "Darius the Great." There remains but one more installment of this series of county history rebuses. Then the prize-winners of the entire series will be announced, and also all who have sent in solutions. This installment is not a difficult one and we suggest that some of our bright young readers who have not tried before send in solutions. Address: Puzzle Dept., Tribune, Willmar, Minn. There is yet time to send solutions to the installment of "Early Teachers," published last week, which must reach our office by next Saturday night, June 15. The one sending the best solution to that installment gets an interesting story-book entitled "Adventures of Billy Trill."

"The Old World and Its Ways."

Col. William Jennings Bryan announces a new book of travel entitled "The Old World and Its Ways," which recounts his recent tour around the world and his journeys thru Europe. It is profusely and elegantly illustrated with 240 artistic engravings representing men and things seen in the various countries of the earth during that noted journey. The engravings are made from photographs taken by him or his party specially for this publication. It is the monumental literary work of his life, and is published under his special supervision. He has, by special contract with his publishers, made the retail price low down with the view of putting it within the easy reach of every reader and book buyer.
