

Price per Gallon

By buying paint, many people make the mistake of simply considering first cost. They think only of the price per gallon. THIS RESULTS IN THE SELECTION OF A LOW-PRICED, SHORT-LIVED, ADULTERATED PAINT.

The right way to buy paint is to consider not primarily what it costs per gallon—but spreading power, ease of application and durability.

If P. S. Paint, as regards spreading capacity, is more economical than a so-called "cheap" paint. It will cover at least 25 per cent more surface. This is largely due to the much finer grinding it receives.

On account of pure lead, zinc, and linseed oil used, perfect formula, and fine grinding. P. S. Paint is fully 10 per cent easier to apply than cheap, adulterated paint. As cost of applying paint is about twice as expensive as time is important.

Further, P. S. Paint reduces a beautiful, glossy finish, that will last twice as long as any finish that can be secured by the use of so-called "cheap" paints.

By Spreading Capacity, Ease of Application, and Durability, P. S. Paint is the Most Economical.
