LATEST LEGISLATIVE LETTER

BY LYNN HAINES.

An analysis of the House organization will convince any reasoning citizen that the Klemmer-Stone charges are true. Twelve reactionary members were so placed on the important committees that they control legislation. The dozen men who have been entrusted by Speaker H. H. Dunn with this power are: L. D. Brown, Little Falls; C. A. Congdon, Duluth, Robert C. Dunn, Princeton; C. R. Fowler, Minneapolis; John G. Lennon, Minneapolis; George A. MacKenzie, Gaylord; L. C. Spooner, Morris; C. E. Stone, St. Paul; W. H. Westcott, West St. Paul; Harrison White; Luverne, Leonard Virtue, Bloming Prairie; Albert Pfander, New Uim.

The committee of which these dozen men have absolute control are three: Taxes and tax laws, where they have 10 of the 17 places; rules, where they have every one of the five places, and general legislation, where they have nine of 17.

On appropriations they have nine of 21, and temperance five of 15, so that of the 75 places on these five most important committees, one-tenth of the membership of the house has 38 places, or more than half of the whole committee strength.

On these same five committees, the most liberal construction of the word "progressive" could not muster more than 20 members out of the 75, and they are not in control of any one of these committees.

Compare these 12 now with 45 progressives. Messrs. J. J. Anderson, A. V. Anderson, Burnquist, Campbell, Christie, Conley, Farley, Ferguson, Fisher, Harding, J. N. Johnson, Klemmer, J. F. Lee, Lundeen, McMartin, Morton, W. I.

Nolan, Nygren, A. J. Peterson, Putnam, Robinson, Rustad, Sampson, W. T. Stone, Sulerud, E. Warner, and Voxland, a total of 27 of the leading progressives, were not given a single place on the 10 most important committees.

Another group of 18 progressives, including Messrs. Crane, Davies, Davis, Frankson, Hillman, Holmberg, C. Johnson, J. T. Johnson, J. J. Lee, Lindberg, O'Neill, Orr, Palmer, J. E. Peterson, Rines, Skartum, Webb and Whiting, were given a total of only 32 places on the 10 most important committees.

Twelve leading reactionary lieutenants of Speaker Dunn have a total of 57 places on 10 most important committees, average of 45 most five to a committee, while 45 progressives have a total of 32 places on the 10 most important committees, or an average of much less than one to a committee.

Judging the membership of the house by their votes on questions like the initiative and referendum and other issues involving the rights and welfare of the people, the 10 leading committees were packed as follows:

Committee	Reac's.	Progr.
Rules	5	0
Appropriations	14	4
Taxes	13	4
Elections	12	5
Reappointment	20	7
Temperance	10	5
General legislation	16	4
Railroads	15	1
Public lands	10	1
Health and pure food	12	1

S. C. HILLMAN & SON

Froshaug - Farrington contest the most significant vote cast by the Senate was the one killing the woman suffrage bill. It should be distinctly understood that this was not a vote on the question of equal suffrage. That was not the issue. The bill provided for constitutional amendment giving to the people the opportunity to decide whether or not women should have the ballot. A vote against the Sageing bill, therefore, in the final analysis signified that thirty-two senators did not believe in the rights or judgment of the people. The vote was as follows:

To give the people a chance to vote on woman suffrage—Bedford, Benson, Boyle, Cashman, Chesdie, C. F. Cook, Dale, Donegre, Duxbury, Elwell, Froshaug, Gundersen, Hanson, Hayeravft, C. D. Johnson, V. L. Johnson, Lende Moonan, Nelson, Odell Olson, Peterson, Putnam, Rustad, Sageing, Saughsad, Schaller, Sundberg, Thoe, Wilson.

Against giving the people an opportunity to decide the question—Ahmann, Anderson, Carpenter, Claude, Coller, L. O. Cooke, Donaldson, Dues, Dunn, Dwinell, Fossen, Glotzbach, Gunn, Hackney, Handlan, Johnson, Klein, L. Herault, McGrath, Marden, Murray, Pauly, Pochter, Pugh, Rookne, G. H. Sullivan, J. D. Sullivan, Swanson, Van Hoven, Wallace, Weis, Works.

In order to make the reactionaries secure and prevent any recurrence of the Lennon-Rines-Holmberg incident, the organization pushed the Mattson-Hopkins resolution requiring a two-thirds vote to make a special order. This rule would give a reactionary one-third absolute power to delay and defeat reform measures.

Mr. Klemmer and Dr. Stone are worth their weight in gold to the state. Since their charges of packed committees directed public attention to the deplorable and disgusting situation in the House, the reactionaries are so thoroughly frightened that they shy at their own shadows. Let any progressive whisper the name of Klemmer and the organization will acquiesce in whatever he may demand. The temperance committee killed the Robinson brewery bill. Mr. Robinson threatened to add a chapter to the Klemmer incident and they quickly reconsidered and placed his bill on general orders. It was the same with the railroad committee when they were threatened with Klemmer's killing S. F. No. 440. The vote by which the Haycraft bill was indefinitely postponed was reconsidered.

Were you watching the lower house of the legislature last Wednesday? A most interesting and significant thing happened. First let me offer a few explanations and introduce a few characters.

Previously the Senate has passed a bill extending the primary to the nomination of state officers. The House reactionaries did not intend that this bill should become a law. Accordingly it was sent to the elections committee where it was to be held indefinitely.

The Elections committee had a reactionary chairman and a reactionary majority, which was a good and sufficient guarantee to the special interests and professional politicians that this primary bill would not be reported out in time for its passage. In order to understand the situation you must know that business had become so congested in the House as to render the assassination of any measure safe and easy. That is the modern method—the one Congress employed to kill the non-partisan tariff commission. At that time last week—and it is the same today—there were so many bills on general orders and the calendar that there was not the least possibility of any fundamental reform being reached unless it was advanced out of its regular order. A reactionary ruler and reactionary rules were at hand to see that no important progressive measure was given precedence. A reactionary one-third, under the canonistic conditions which prevailed, could delay and defeat any and all reforms, and this desire for death included a number of measures besides the primary.

Next consider a vastly different sort of measure. Minneapolis has a liquor license zone. Two large hotels—the Dykeman and the Radisson,—are outside this zone. A bill was introduced to make an exception of these two hotels and permit them to dispose of intoxicants. The people of Minneapolis were and are violently opposed to the granting of this special privilege, which amounts to an extension of their patrol limits. Hence it can readily be seen that this particular bill must have had substantial impetus personal and otherwise, to make it move under such conditions.

New meet the characters in the play. Speaker H. H. Dunn was ill and unable to act his part.

His understudy, the speaker pro tem, was John G. Lennon. Mr. Lennon is a reactionary and a exponent of the modern method—congestion and obstruction. He holds that a majority have not the power to advance a measure at the critical time. This speaker pro tem is opposed to the primary, and progressive ideas generally. On the other hand he was author of the hotel license bill and entrusted with the responsibility of passing it through the House.

Let a Representative of the Central Life Talk it Over With You.

J. F. BRANTON, STATE MANAGER

I shall next present a group of progressives, naming only two, N. J. Holmberg of Kenville and Henry Rines of Mora. Between forty and fifty others might be included in the list of those who have carried on the almost hopeless fight for fundamental reforms. But Messrs. Rines and Holmberg acted the stellar parts on this occasion.

Let us assume that this happened before the session started that morning. Mr. Holmberg sought the speaker pro tem and informed him that the progressives were determined to unlock the death grasp of the elections committee upon the throat of the primary bill and bring the measure before the House where it would be acted upon in the open. Still assuming, the speaker pro tem sought to discourage this insurgency by informing the exponent of progress that the chair would hold that it took a two-thirds vote to recall a bill from a committee and make a special order. Of course Mr. Holmberg was sorry and to emphasize his grief probably threatened to connect the incident with the Klemmer-Stone charges of special interest control of the organization. Whereupon, and this is more than mere assumption, the speaker pro tem's voice became lower and more oily, and he made this proposition to the progressive leader:

If you and a few of your followers will vote for my hotel bill, I'll let the primary bill be advanced this way—when we reach "motions and resolutions" in the order of business, I will find an excuse to vacate the chair and will call upon any one you name to preside. While I am out you can make a special order of the bill. Mr. Holmberg accepted in considerably less than a second and Mr. Rines, another dependable progressive was selected to preside during the brief but epochal period during which Mr. Lennon was summoned from the chamber.

The rest of the story is simple and comparatively unimportant. Mr. Lennon vacated the chair, according to contract. Mr. Rines was called upon to preside. Next Mr. Holmberg moved that the primary bill be recalled from the elections committee and made a special order for April 12th. A reactionary raised the point of order that it would require eighty votes to carry the motion. Acting Speaker Rines ruled that a majority could do whatever they pleased with the bill. That settled the question and the reactionaries, after being defeated, clambered aboard the band wagon. All present, excepting Greene, Hoffman, Lydiard, H. Nelson, O'Brien and C. E. Stone, voted with the progressives.

Do you comprehend what all this means? The fate of the primary election bill depended absolutely and alone upon the men in the chair. It should not require very many more expensive lessons in politics like the present session to convince people of the paramount importance of the speakership.

Later in the day Mr. Lennon's hotel bill was placed upon its final passage. It is H. F. No. 690. It was passed 80 to 35.

BRIEFS

Representative Converse has secured a fish hatchery for his people. The story of his success will be told later.

The net results of the session in fundamentally democratic reforms will be very small. The reactionary organization is directly responsible.

Dr. W. I. Stone introduced a resolution charging specifically that the special interests controlled the House organization and demanding an investigation. There has been and will be no inquiry of that character.

The business of the House was never before so badly congested at this stage of the session. Under the Canonistic conditions which prevail a reactionary minority of one-third can now delay progressive measures to their death.

The House passed one bill providing for the popular election of United States Senators: The Senate passed another bill on the same subject. The Senate passed one recall bill; the House another. This lack of team work is not accidental. Both branches are trying to make a reform record without accomplishing any reforms.

The people might as well abandon all hope of a bona fide, effective initiative and referendum bill. The attitude of the House on this question is well known. In the Senate W. W. Dunn, representative of the brewery combine, is chairman of the sub-committee of the judiciary on constitutional law which has the direct legislative measures in custody. Senator Dunn will sit on the lid until it is perfectly safe, from the special interest point of view, to release the bills on this all-important subject.

Too Many Words. "I told you in so many words not to dare to take a drink today!" said Mrs. Jawback.

"That's what I did, m' dear," agreed Mr. Jawback. "You tol' me in so many words that I couldn't remember 'em."—Boston Traveler.

When a Man is a Failure

When he has no confidence in himself nor his fellow men. When he values success more than character and self-respect. When he does not try to make his work a little better each day. When he becomes so absorbed in his work that he cannot see that life is greater than work.

When he lets a day go by without making some one happier and more comfortable.

When he tries to rule others by bullying instead of by example.

When he values wealth above health, self-respect and the good opinion of others.

Sanford Dodge Makes Good.

Sanford Dodge, the Shakespearean actor, made his first appearance before a Silver City audience this week and he made good. Mr. Dodge is a finished and consummate artist and gives an intelligent, sympathetic and artistic interpretation of the great roles he essays. On Monday evening, "Faust" was given, Tuesday evening, "The Taming of the Shrew," and on Wednesday evening, the most finished production of all, a skillful interpretation of "The Merchant of Venice."

This last performance was as delicately delineated and as clean cut as a cameo, and those who went saw a living, breathing thing. The troupe was better cast in this play than in the others, and Dodge himself in the role of Shylock showed a versatility and a broad sympathetic understanding of human nature that bespeaks for him a great future.—Silver City., New Mexico.

UNIVERSITY MAKING RECORD.

All over the world the name of the University of Minnesota is known because of the discovery of the wonderful new chemical, Benetol, in its laboratories. One of the many marvelous uses of this chemical is to instantly stop pains in burns and scalds and in most cases to prevent blistering. Kept handy in the kitchen it would save many a long drawn out case of suffering from accidents because there is no known product that will half as quickly cure burns, scalds, cuts, bruises, or poison infection. Benetol has been often tested against old style remedies on two wounds on the same person, and heals in less than half the time taken by them. Carlson Bros, Willmar.

The Merchant of Venice.

It was especially gratifying to those instrumental in bringing the Sanford Dodge company here to see that the play was well patronized last night, the opera house being well filled.

That the performance met the expectation of those most capable of judging there can be no doubt. Sanford Dodge as Shylock portrays the moods and characteristics of the ancient Jew as perfectly as it is possible for one man or race to imitate another.

It was Henry Irving, the great exponent of Shakespearean plays who made the statement that the Jew was a man of exceeding kindness and not a heart harsh withal, but one can hardly witness the manner in which Shylock exacts his "pound of flesh" and at the same time agree with Sir Henry.

In every mood Mr. Dodge portrays the character perfectly. The audience was more than delighted with his acting, and he can feel sure that Cherryvale will give him even a greater audience in the future, should he return.—J. M. Ward, Cherryvale, Kans.
