This was Dr. Jordan's second appearance in Willmar and all who heard him hope to hear him yet a third time. He proved himself especially strong in his power of description. This morning he delivered his lecture on Napoleon at the high school auditorium.

WILLMAR MILL IS BURNED

Big Flouring Mill is Totally Destroyed by Fire Fled Last Monday Night.

The large four-story Willmar roller flour mill is a mass of smoking ruins. It burned Monday night, the fire being discovered about ten o'clock, and after burning fiercely for an hour or more, the heavy frame work of the mill and the smokestack collapsed and fell in a very spectacular manner in the awed presence of thousands of spectators, who had been attracted by the lurid glare of the flames which lighted up the city. While walking along Pacific avenue, Edward Lundquist noticed some smoke issuing near the top of the mill which he at first could not account for. As he watched it he saw some sparks issuing. Four ladies passed him and he called their attention to the matter and they agreed that the mill must be on fire. Edward rushed to the mill and saw the flames and the alarm and with the help of Will Johnson, a Seminary student, Chas. Robinson, and other firemen hurried to the scene, pulled out the first hose cart and strung out the first line hose from the Benson & Jorvis corner. Many of the firemen were attending the performance of "Managing Mildred" at the opera house, and the department as a whole made a very quick appearance. The interior of the mill was a mass of seething flames and the fire was breaking out from the roof when the first stream was turned on. There was no way of saving the mill proper, but the department did good service in confining the fire to the mill and the Wiggins' building which was gutted by the flames. Five streams of water from inch nozzles played continuously. The nearby elevators were threatened, and did actually catch fire several times, but the incipient flames were promptly extinguished. The fire was the hottest that Willmar has ever seen. Had one of the fierce northwest gales which we have lately experienced been blowing at the time, a terrible conflagration would have resulted. The fire-fighting was under the direction of Chief C. C. Selvig and Assistant Chief Jorgenson. All the hose was used, and no less than six different lengths burst during the progress of the fire and had to be cut out from the lines. The mill and machinery was inventoried the first of the year at $25,000. Besides this there is known to have been in the mill about two thousand bushels of wheat, about five hundred bushels of corn, 800 bushels of oats, about 200 barrels of flour, a lot of screenings, feed, stock of sacks, etc. The power plant, including engine and boilers was saved intact, deducting which the loss may be placed in the neighborhood of $30,000. In all there was $25,000 insurance—$11,000 on the mill proper and equipment, $4,000 on the power plant and $10,000 on the stock and grain. The insurance is carried in some millers' mutual insurance companies, and none of that loss falls upon the local agencies. The loss on the old Wiggins building is estimated at $1,000, partly covered by insurance. The mill was originally built and equipped with four runs of stones by Locke & Bunker in 1876, at the cost of $13,000. It was leased and operated for a term of years by G. L. Hurlbert & Co. In 1885 it was purchased by John and Benjamin Williams and John H. Wiggins, who rebuilt the same, adding largely to the size and installing rollers. About a dozen years ago the Willmar Milling Co. was organized with Peter Hong as manager, when further additions were made to the building and equipment. In 1905 Marcus Johnson of New London Milling Company acquired a controlling interest in the industry, and since that time it has been managed by the New London Milling Co. The origin of the fire is a mystery. The mill was shut down at 6 o'clock. The head miller, George L. Crowell, was the last man to leave the building about 7:30. He had made his customary round of inspection before leaving the building to see that everything was in shape, as he supposed it was when he left the place.

SYNOD SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHERS ENTERTAIN.

The members of the Sunday School of the Luth. Synod church were given a happy time by the teachers Monday afternoon from 3 to 5:30 o'clock. Owing to several of the children being from the country, it was thought best to begin as early as three o'clock; so thru the kindness of Supt. Foster the pupils were excused from school at that time. The exercises opened with a hymn, a prayer and a few words of welcome by the pastor and then the refreshments provided for the occasion, ice cream, cake etc. were served most generously. Following this there was a pleasing program of singing, and reciting, and Rev. J. N. Anderson occupied a few moments pleasantly, telling the children the object of the gathering and waving in many words of good advice. This part of the program was followed by jolly games which the children enjoyed greatly. After the guests of honor had left for their homes, a delightful menu was served by the teachers to all who had assisted during the afternoon. It was one of the happiest annual entertainments ever given for the Synod Sunday school.

MAMRE CREAMERY TO RE-OPEN MAY FIRST

The Board of Directors of the Mamre Co-operative Creamery Company gives notice in this paper that the creamery will again open for business after having been shut down for some time. Conditions in the butter market are such that the new start will be made on a market with a certain upward tendency. First-class creamery butter is commanding a large premium over the cold storage butter which has glutted the market for some time back. Then several laws have been passed this winter that are expected to help the local creameries against the centralization of this industry in the larger cities. One provides that cream may not be shipped over 65 miles without first being pasteurized or without being shipped in refrigerated cars. Another imposes further restrictions in the sale of oleomargarine, and a third prevents a discrimination in prices paid to producers. The latter provision is form price to all the patrons, allowing only the difference of a cent freight, thus preventing a central plant from overbidding some local creamery in one locality and getting back their money from some locality where there is no competition.

The Mamre board has figured out a plan of making cream which will make that work much less burdensome than under the old system. The patrons will be divided into routes of six, so that each patron will not have to make more than one trip every two weeks. Extra cans can be provided so that the party hauling may simply deliver the cream cans than take back the empties, thus eliminating the long wait that was required under the old milk hauling system. Each patron will draw his share of the buttermilk.

O. O. Bergstrom is the manager of the company, O. F. Johnson is secretary and treasurer; Gust Danielson, Fred Anderson and G. A. Anderson are the directors. Christ Elkjer has been engaged as butter-maker. The officers start out again with a very hopeful spirit for permanent success.

Entertained O. E. S.

Mrs. C. E. Miller was a charming hostess to the members of Siloam Chapter O. E. S. at her home Monday evening. A profusion of pink carnations lent beauty and fragrance to the attractive rooms. Several tables of cinch were played and at the close of the games elaborate refreshments were served. The favors of the evening were won by Miss Clara Monson and A. Bakke.

Mr. and Mrs. A. N. Lewis are planning to spend May and part of June at Centerville, Mass., with Mrs. Lewis' mother and other relatives.

GREAT CROWDS THROUGH SCHOOL

Dedication of Industrial Building Notable Occasion in History of Willmar Schools.

Last Thursday evening marked an epoch in the history of the Willmar public schools, the occasion being the dedication of the new industrial school building. The dedication did not take place at the time the building was finished and occupied, because it was that best to prepare an exhibit of the work done to show the people of the city what this new work means. Shortly after seven o'clock the doors were opened and the people began to pour in. In the manual training department a class of boys were at work, and the machinery was in operation. In the domestic science department some girls were working in the kitchen and others in the sewing room, showing exactly what is being done there. The exhibits of the various departments, as well as exhibits of the grade work in regular studies, were shown in the high school building. The display of sewing by the high school girls and the various household articles made by the manual training department were a source of delightful surprise to all the visitors. They certainly reflected great credit both on the pupils and teachers in these departments. At eight o'clock the doors to the assembly room were thrown open and in a few minutes the room was literally packed, while a large number of people had to stand in the hall. Russell Spicer, president of the Board of Education made the opening address, his subject being, "History of the Willmar Schools." He briefly outlined the history of the school, and the movement for industrial education. He called special attention to the fact that whenever the board has asked for means for extending and improving the school system the people have always responded. P. C. Tønning, assistant superintendent of public instruction, who for seven years served as superintendent of the Willmar schools, was the next speaker. He was to speak about new legislation in school matters, but took occasion at the same time to give some reminiscences from the years in which he was connected with our schools. He said it was just eight years to a day since he took his place as superintendent here. At that time there were 75 students in the high school. Now that number has been more than doubled. He then sketched the contents and purposes of the Putnam act and the Lee-Benson act for the promotion of industrial and agricultural education in the schools of Minnesota. Supt. Munroe of Cokato gave a very interesting talk on agricultural education in the public schools. Coming from a school where the system provided for in the Putnam act has been tried for two years, he spoke from experience. The associated agricultural school at Cokato has been an unqualified success, and Mr. Munroe showed by specific examples how it has been of direct financial benefit to individuals as well as to the community as a whole. The Putnam act requires the schools that get the state aid for this work to run a short course, that at Cokato lasts during the three winter months. The school opens at 10:30 and closes at 2:30, giving the rural pupils a chance to do their chores on the farm in the morning, come to town and attend the school session, then return to their homes in time for the evening work. Last winter they had enrolled in this short course 72 men and boys and 28 women and girls, the ages varying from 12 to 39 years. The work included manual training or domestic science, agriculture, English, arithmetic and business accounts. Geo. B. Aiton, State Inspector of High Schools, closed the speaking with some remarks about the future of the Willmar schools. He said it was no longer the purpose of the schools to help a few of the brightest pupils to "reach the top," but to prepare all to become useful in whatever sphere of life they might be placed. He said: "During the next hundred years we shall probably not need more than twenty or twenty-five men to occupy the White House as presidents. But we need right now twenty million good, intelligent and industrious men to fill all kinds of positions, who can and will do their duty well. We shall in that period probably need only twenty or twenty-five ladies to occupy the White House, but we need right now twenty million good, intelligent, industrious and well trained young women to become the queens of twenty million households in the United States, and who can and will do their duty there well."

The program was interspersed with selections by the High School Chorus and the Girls' Glee Club and a solo by Miss Helen Sather, which was so enthusiastically received she was obliged to respond and did so very graciously. Among the exhibits were many pieces showing that in the Willmar schools are enrolled many talented pupils who will some day occupy prominent positions in the art circles of the world. There were beautiful specimens of free hand drawing, original designing, sketching, water color work, stenciling, clay modeling, paper cutting and weaving, penmanship, dainty stitches and prettily fashioned garments, all calling forth expressions of well deserved praise. "Fully equal to the exhibits at the state fair." "Nothing better in school exhibits at the St. Louis World's Fair" were among the pleasing criticisms heard from the crowd of interested spectators that thronged the building during the hours of the exhibit.

The Willmar school is endeavoring to come in under the Putnam act for associated agricultural schools. In order to further this cause, a meeting was held in the Carlsson hall at five o'clock in the afternoon of the same day, where Foot Lake Hearing is On.

Testimony is being taken before the viewers appointed in the Foot Lake matter, at the courthouse. The following land owners are fighting the matter of raising the present outlet of the lake: J. S. Robbins, L. O. Thorpe, I. I. Berg, Peter Anderson and the Associated Packers. Besides their local attorney, they have retained Atty. Fosness of Montevideo. The public interest is being represented by County Attorney Otterson. A number of witnesses are being examined; the hearing beginning yesterday afternoon before the three viewers, Messrs. C. M. Holm of Litchfield, John Norgaard of Granite Falls, and D. F. McDermott of Clontarf. This is a matter of the very vital importance to the city, and more interest should be taken by the citizens generally in the matter.

The Annual Parish Meeting.

The annual parish meeting of St. Luke's parish was held at the parish house Tuesday evening. Reports were given and the following wardens and vestrymen were elected: C. A. Affleck and J. H. Wiggins were re-elected wardens; Russell Spicer was elected to succeed himself as vestryman and Fred Larson elected vestryman in place of C. E. Hornbeck, who resigned on account of removal from town. The evening's business was followed by the service of refreshments and a social half hour.

Monday Afternoon Club.

Monday afternoon the club ladies were very happily entertained by Mrs. Fred Wold.

Continuing the "Life of Alexander Hamilton", which has proved most interesting, Mesdames Tyler and Handy gave enjoyable reviews of Chapters 8 and 9. A dainty luncheon was served by the hostess, an Easter centerpiece adding an attractive touch to the table.

At the close of a sociable half hour Mrs. Hornbeck gave the last number on the afternoon's program, reviewing an article worthy of much serious thought, from the March American Magazine, by Frederick W. Taylor, "The Principles of Scientific Management". The review was well prepared and entertainingly given.

Mrs. Meyer will be hostess to the Club May 1. Mesdames Petersen and Gates will review Chapters 10 and 11 of the biography and Mrs. Moore was appointed Magazine reporter for that date. One of the anticipated pleasures of the May Day meeting is the expected presence of Mrs. Rice and Mrs. Sherwood, who have been prevented by ill health from meeting with the club for sometime.

Anniversary Program.

The "Little Helpers" of the Swedish Baptist Church will celebrate their twenty-first anniversary Wednesday evening, Apr. 26th, at 8 o'clock. The following program will be rendered and an offering will be taken. Coffee and cake will be served for ten cents. Everyone is welcome.
