

When a Man is a Failure

When he has no confidence in himself nor his fellow men.
 When he values success more than character and self-respect.
 When he does not try to make his work a little better each day.
 When he becomes so absorbed in his work that he cannot see that life is greater than work.
 When he lets a day go by without making some one happier and more comfortable.
 When he tries to rule others by bullying instead of by example.
 When he values wealth above health, self-respect and the good opinion of others.
 When he is so burdened by his business that he finds no time for rest and recreation.
 When he loves his own plans and interests more than humanity.
 When his friends like him for what he has more than for what he is.
 When he knows that he is in the wrong, but is afraid to admit it.
 When he envies others because they have more ability, talent or wealth than he has.
 When he does not care what happens to his neighbor or to his friend so long as he is prosperous.
 When he is so busy doing that he has no time for smiles and cheering words.

We Appreciate--

We find it hard to account for some of the new business that comes to us from day to day. We sometimes inquire and learn that some patron has spoken to a friend about the facilities which this bank affords. We certainly appreciate these kind courtesies and take occasion to thank those who have expressed their approval and commendation of our service. We accept deposits subject to check in any amount and pay 4 per cent interest on savings accounts. Interest twice a year, June 1st and December 1st.

FORWARD MOVEMENT

Willmar Will Participate in the Nation-Wide Rally to Bring Men into Churches.

The Men and Religion Forward Movement, the main object of which is to increase the active membership of men and boys in the churches of this continent, has reached the Northwest, with Minneapolis as a center. An active campaign is to be held the week of October 1-8, radiating by the means of auxiliary campaigns in other cities and towns in all directions to all localities and conditions of life.

Minneapolis is the first of 76 of the larger cities of North America, in which there will be such campaigns, organized and conducted along the same lines, with the ultimate purpose in view of making Christianity a standard of all relations in life. Back of the movement are the Brotherhoods of all Protestant churches, the International Sunday School Association, the International Committee of the Young Men's Christian Association, and the Gideons. These organizations initiated the Movement at a meeting held at New York May 19, 1910, which led to a conference at Buffalo that fall, attended by representatives of religious organizations from 76 cities. A plan was evolved for the greatest religious Movement the world has ever known, to be systematic, far reaching, and conducted to conserve results.

For the Minneapolis campaign, beginning the Movement, there will be four teams of experts, of seven men each, who have been specialists with marked success, who will give the benefit of their experience and leadership in the lines of Bible Study, Boys' Work, Evangelism, Community Extension, Social Service, and Missions (home and foreign). These teams will afterwards be divided among the different 76 cities, but they will all be at Minneapolis and will include Dr. Charles Stelzle, head of the Department of Social Work and Labor of the Presbyterian Church of North America, who will be assisted by Raymond Robbins, of Chicago and Dr. I. J. Lansing, from the Reform Bureau at Washington, D. C., Mr. John L. Alexander, formerly head of the Boys Scout Movement, W. C. Pearce, secretary of the adult work of the Sunday School Association, Fred S. Goodman, of the International Y. M. C. A., A. L. Bruner, head of Industrial Foundation Work, Chas. L. Drum, industrial work expert of the International Committee of the Y. M. C. A., John Dean, of Pasadena, Cal., H. F. Swartz, special representative of the Laymen's Missionary Movement, Rev. W. E. Beiderwolf, D. D. national evangelist, Rev. John Timothy Stone, of Chicago, David G. Latsch, of New York and A. J. Elliot, special student secretary among universities and colleges of America, Rev. W. R. Lane, of London, England, Rev. David Russell, of South Africa, besides a number of other notables in church work.

An inter-church committee will be organized in this city, which will become responsible for the details of the local participation in the Movement. Representatives from the churches will attend the Convention, to be held in Minneapolis October 3 and 4, and will reproduce the campaign here, and then extend it to our neighboring cities and towns, so that it will reach the remotest hamlet.

Minneapolis has been divided into districts. Great meetings are being held and a campaign of general publicity has been started to awaken interest in the Movement, leading up to the active campaign October 1-8.

SCANDINAVIAN LANGUAGES IN OUR DISTRICT COUNTRY SCHOOLS

(By J. N. Lenker, D. D.) VI.

If our American public school system is to be raised to the high standard of continental Europe, at least two modern languages must be taught, it being left entirely to the liberty of each school district to name the languages it prefers. No one will doubt that this can be done, and ought to be done, and it is the wise thing to do, and so on. But it costs labor, sacrifice and money to develop sentiment in a settlement to persevere in having it done and to stir individuals to see that it is done. We wish to emphasize in various ways that the German and Scandinavian tongues embody distinctive types of civilization, most closely related to the English, and they should be studied for other reasons than that next to English they are spoken the most in the United States. German, doubtless, will hold its own, but it is not so certain about Scandinavian. If it does, a special effort must be made without further delay. TEACHING SCANDINAVIAN IN MINNEAPOLIS HIGH SCHOOLS A SUCCESS.

This movement, only a year old, has already excellent results, considering the small effort made. The teaching of Scandinavian languages in state high schools is a success where they had qualified teachers. I just learn that the south high school of Minneapolis opens with 65 pupils in Norwegian-Danish and 45 in Swedish, total 110. Last year the former were 39 and the latter 22, total 61. The Swedes more than doubled and the others nearly so. At present in this school 79 study French, 110 Scandinavian and 184 German. Both the East and Central high schools report an increase and prospects are good for it being introduced into the North high school. The North side high school district is planning to hold a mass meeting for the cause. East side high school had 16 pupils in Norwegian in the fall of 1910 and 23 in 1911; and 18 in Swedish in 1910 and 22 in 1911; Central high school had 4 in Norwegian in 1910 and 8 in 1911; and 12 in Swedish in 1910 and 15 in 1911. There is great need of efficient language teachers, and the need, it seems, will grow. Where are they to be had? Universities and high schools, however, will never solve the problem. That must be done by the secondary and country schools.

Successfully and profitably has America introduced from Germany Kindergarten and University methods, the highest and lowest grades of school work, and since Prof. Jas. E. Russell, of Columbia University, issued in 1899 his excellent work on "Secondary Education in Germany," the missing link has been found, and there has been an increased interest in learning how to teach Americans modern languages.

SCANDINAVIAN CULTURE AND LANGUAGES INSEPARABLE.

After considering the country and people of Scandinavia, it is in place to notice the distinctive type of culture, or civilization, they produced in the north and is offered to the world by means of their languages. It is necessary to carefully study the geography and history of a nation if its culture and language are to be rightly understood. Michelet remarked the whole of English history could be summed up in the single sentence: "England is an island." The last number of "The Living Age" of Sept. 9th adds in the same line that continental Europe is in reality the western promontory of Asia, and France is merely an isthmus, all but converting that promontory into a peninsula, an isthmus linking the Mediterranean to the Atlantic and the North Sea. French soil is the central historic road of civilization during at least the last three thousand years—it is because France is located at this particular spot of the planet that French ideals, problems and history differ from those of other nations.

What we wrote about Scandinavia is thus confirmed by this leading American literary magazine. When Americans thus study Scandinavia and Germany in their geographical and historical relations, they will better understand them and the need of learning their languages. Favored France tried to force European countries to learn its language by not learning theirs. It practically ignored other tongues and became a one language nation. Scandinavia and Germany take the opposite course. They respect and learn other tongues, hence the difference. Which will Americans follow in their continental culture? Scandinavian culture and languages are inseparable and in America they are helping to answer this question.

Real heart interest in a country and people, their life and culture, without a sincere interest in their language, as the only means by which they are correctly and fully learned, is logically impossible—a pretense doomed to an early death. We advocate the study of modern languages not merely as an end, but as the only means to many ends.

DISTINCTIVE CHARACTER OF SCANDINAVIAN CIVILIZATION AND MARITIME ENTERPRISE.

Du Chaillu, who more than any other author has introduced Americans to Scandinavia, in his "Viking Age," writes: "The indisputable fact remains that both the Gauls and the Britains were conquered by the Romans and afterward by the northern tribes. This northern civilization was peculiar to itself, having nothing in common with the Roman world. Rome knew nothing of these people till they began to frequent the coasts of her North Sea provinces, in the days of Tacitus, and, after his time, the Mediterranean. The North was separated from Rome by the swamps and forests of Germania, a vague term given to a country north and north-east of Italy, a land without boundaries, and inhabited by a great number of warlike, wild, uncivilized tribes. According to the accounts of Roman writers, these people were very unlike those of the North, and we must take the description given of them to be correct, as there is no archaeological discovery to prove the contrary. They were distinct; one was comparatively civilized, the other was not. The manly civilization of the Northmen was their own. The people of the North, even before the time when they carried their warfare into Gaul and Britain, possessed a degree of civilization which would be difficult for us to realize were it not that the antiquities help us in a remarkable manner." The Tribes of Germany were not comparatively civilized nor were they a seafaring people at this time when Scandinavians were both.

The excellence of the Norsemen's fleets is not generally recognized. Every chief aimed to have power on sea. Every bondi owned one or more craft. The people were trained sailors, soldiers and horsemen. In the battle of Bravell, the Norse fleet was reported of such size that on it one might walk for twenty miles as on a bridge. The enemy had from 2500 to 3000 ships. Seldom were the Scandinavian seamen defeated. For centuries they remained undisputed masters of the sea. Then, as today, the navy made power. It was their navy that enabled Scandinavians to conquer, settle and colonize other lands. "If we call them pirates, we must apply the same term to the English, French, Spaniards, Dutch and other peoples." Civilization then, as now, was aggressive.

Britain being an island, it was a prize for seafaring tribes only; even as today the conquest of foreign territory must be reserved for nations possessing a navy. After the Romans withdrew, the name England was given to a portion of the island, but historians called the people "Saxons," the name given them by the Romans. Not the Romans, not the Celts, but the ocean-loving Northmen developed England's power on the water. Nearly everywhere in Europe are found traces of their culture and language. They have not run their course, but are very much alive today as all know, who study their languages and read their current literature.

A REQUEST—Papers, of any and all languages, are requested to print these articles, or parts of them, for the good of the common cause and for their own interests among their constituency. They are not copyrighted.
