DENMARK.
A fire at a farmstead in Sobiers spread so fast that the people barely saved their lives, but 23 head of cattle, 2 colts, and 12 hogs were burnt to death.

The people of Moen needed an electric plant, and a committee was appointed to see what could be done. This committee was discouraged by financial difficulties and the matter had to be dropped. At this juncture a Swedish company offered to build a plant provided the people could guarantee as much as 15,000 lamps, which they have agreed to do.

Two Egyptian monuments have been placed in the Copenhagen glyptothek. One of them represents King Ramesses II standing by the side of the God Ptah of Memphis. The group is cut out of red granite. The other monument, which was taken from the famous Labyrinth, is supposed to represent a king and his son. This group is much damaged. On account of its great weight—14 tons—it had to be placed in the basement of the building.

As a result of recently issued publications dealing with the life and character of the late King Edward, Queen Alexandra has decided to revise her original intention and allow an "authorized" life of his majesty to be published much earlier than was intended. The late king left all his private papers for publication as seemed fit to her, and these her majesty has since gone through very carefully with the assistance of King George and the Princess Royal. The work of writing the biography will be entrusted to a former friend of King Edward.

King George of Greece, who again looms large in the public eye by reason of the fame of war in southeastern Europe, has entered upon the fiftieth year of his reign. Next to the venerable emperor of Austria he is the oldest of the sovereigns of Europe. Born a prince of Denmark, he was proclaimed king of the Hellenes by the national assembly of Greece on March 30, 1863. He was then 17 years old. On Oct. 30 of the same year he arrived in Athens, and on the following day he took the oath and mounted the throne. When the future king arrived in Athens, forty-nine years ago, he was welcomed by a little nation of a million people. He has more than two million subjects now, and Greece has progressed very creditably under his rulership. Though Greece has been overtaken by severe political storms during the past half century, the throne of King George has never been seriously threatened.

Prof. Alexander Bugge, who is 40 years old and occupies a chair of history at the university, has handed in his resignation on account of ill health.

Bishop Bang is suffering from inflammation of the veins and at present he is unable to put the finishing touches to his history of the Church of Norway.

The local government at Vik, Logn, wants to take 40 acres of land from the parsonage and cut it up into small farms to be sold at cost to poor families of the neighborhood.

Bishop Bang has offered to sell his private library consisting of almost 7,000 volumes, some of which are entirely unknown outside of his collection. The bishop would like to sell everything to one party, in order to prevent the collection from being scattered to the four winds.

A number of Norwegian capitalists have bought out the Bure Stock company of northern Sweden. The deal includes 135,000 acres of timber land and much stamptage besides a saw and planing mill, a majority of the stocks of the Orsviken sulfate factory, etc. The purchase price has not been announced.

A farmer living a short distance south of Hangesund raised 50,000 head of cabbage last summer. He supplies the city of Hangesund with cabbage, and still has much left for the neighboring cities. The name of the farmer is L. W. Rossebo. He started on a small scale a few years ago, now he keeps 20 cows and many horses, sheep and hogs, besides raising large quantities of vegetables of different kinds.

Viking manners and customs are not quite dead yet in the North. During the field maneuvers in Stjorland last summer a horse planted one of his hind shoes with such force in the face of a fresh recruit from Spalten that deep cuts were left in the cheeks and the throat, and two teeth were knocked out. The young man coolly spat out the useless teeth, mounted his horse, and took part in the movements as though nothing had happened.

Queen Maud recently gave an entertainment for the benefit of the women's militia defenses fund. About 500 persons filled the large hall of the palace, where Mrs. Bergljot Ibsen sang vocal solos, the orchestra of the National theater played, and a number of moving pictures from the field maneuvers were shown. During a pause refreshments were served in the side rooms. The price of admission being $2.70, the entertainment netted a handsome amount of money for the defenses of the country.

Haakon Loken demands a rule prohibiting foreign warships from passing inside the forts at Kristiania, Bergen, and Trondhjem. Last summer, he says, a French European war was on the point of breaking out along the coast of Norway, and just at that very moment German warships lay inside the forts. At the decisive moment four or five German warships might have imposed any terms upon the Norwegians, and the forts would have cut no figure at all. A repetition of this incident must be prevented. Foreign ships of war must be kept outside of the forts. Germany never permits foreigners to enter Wilhelmshafen or Kiel. It may be said that the condition last year was accidental. But it was not a happening that looked like a thought. The situation is more difficult because the harbors of sold cities cannot be reached by the jaws of the forts. It requires skill and tact to enforce a rule like the one demanded by Mr. Loken, but he asserts that the country needs it and must have it.

Large beds of copper ore and sulphurous galena have been discovered in Frostviken, Norrland. The veins have been traced for about 800 yards partly by blasting, partly by removing dirt. On the east side of Fogel lake veins of ore have also been found.

Men Need Help—Not Charity. There is a higher duty than to build almshouses for the poor, and that is to save men from being degraded to the blighting influence of an almshouse. Man has a right to something more than bread to keep him from starving. He has a right to the aids and encouragements and culture, by which he may fulfill the destiny of a man, and until society is brought to recognize and reverence this it will continue to groan under its present miseries.—Channing.

An IHC Manure Spreader Is an Investment—Not an Expense

A MACHINE that makes two dollars where one was made before is not an expense—it is a good investment. Careful tests made at the Ohio Experiment Station showed an average increased crop yield of $15 an acre when eight loads of manure were properly spread. Spreading with a fork, it would take at least sixteen loads to an acre to produce the same result. By fertilizing twice as much ground with the same quantity of manure and doing the work better, an IHC manure spreader soon pays for itself. Add to this saving an increase of $15 an acre in the value of your crops, and you at once see why we urge the purchase of an

IHC Manure Spreader Kemp 20th Century, Corn King, or Cloverleaf

Ask the IHC local dealer to show you the self-aligning, removable rollers on the main axle; notice that the axles are roller bearing to reduce the draft; study the apron construction, and note the large rollers on which it runs. IHC spreaders can be used in any corner of the barnyard. There is no reach to interfere. The seat folds out of the way when filling the spreader.

If you appreciate machines of extra merit; machines that spread manure in ample range of quantities; machines which can be equipped with drilling attachments for use in market gardens, and above all, machines which are made in sizes convenient for every farm, investigate IHC spreaders. Go to the local IHC dealer and look carefully over the machines he shows you. Get catalogues and full information from him, or write
