BARS MUSICAL AUTO HORNS

French Judge Says Law Requires Single Note, Grave, Even Sinister.

The musical automobile horns which threatened to fill the main streets of Paris with snatches of popular or classical airs instead of the usual "honk, honk" have come to a quick finish in France. A test case was brought against two motorists of Douai, who envied the night, trumpeting the lie-totiv of "Die Walkure," and it has been decided that these instruments are illegal here. The decision brought out a judicial definition of the word "horn," which had hitherto been rather widely interpreted. "The latter," said the judge, "must be for the purpose of sounding an alarm and be used to warn the public, not to amuse it. It must give forth a single note which should be grave, even sinister, in order to call attention to the impending danger."

"The new fanfare horns," added the Judge, "lack seriousness, and are therefore outside the meaning of the act."

ROUGH FISH TO BE SEINED BY STATE

Our Legislative Correspondent Discusses Voting Away From Home.—Primary Election.—Anti-Discrimination Law Killed.—Lengthy Laws.—Public Utilities Monstrosity Killed.—Workmen's Compensation, Etc.

St. Paul, April 15—It has always been regarded by traveling men and others, whose duties made it impossible for them to be at home on election day that the law made no provision whereby they might cast their vote elsewhere. This condition is remedied in a law passed at this session of which Senator J. D. Sullivan of St. Cloud is the author. This bill provides that any legal voter may cast his vote for presidential electors, for state officers or on constitutional amendments by depositing his ballot in any election district where he may happen to be on election day.

CONDITIONS PRECEDENT.
 To do this he must first apply in person or by an agent to the judges of election in his home district on one of the registration days and secure a certificate to the effect that he is a legal voter. This he presents to the judges of election in the precinct in which he wishes to vote. On the judges being satisfied of the voter's identity and the genuineness of his certificate, he is given a ballot, which, after being marked, is put in an envelope and sealed. At the close of the polls such envelopes are sent by registered mail to the auditor of the county of which the voter is a resident. They are opened by the canvassing board and entered on the tally sheets of the election district in which the voter is entitled to vote and added to the totals. There seems no good reason why the plan will not work well enough.

BREWERY AGENTS OVER ENTHUSIASTIC.

Because they felt it plain that they were tickled to death when the primary bill passed the house containing the provision that members of the legislature should be nominated on a non-partisan ballot, the agents of the breweries jeopardized its passage. They set the house, which has small love for their kind, to thinking that if they were so enthusiastic over this provision of the amendments to the primary law there must be something radically wrong with it. That unquestionably accounted for the defeat of the bill after it came from the conference committee. And although it has been reinstated, the fate of the measure hangs on a very slender thread. The bill has been amended in conference so as to make the date of the primaries in June instead of on the first Tuesday in October. The latter date was so near that of election that a state campaign would have been impossible, and besides it did not give the secretary of state time in which to have the ballots, tally sheets, etc., printed and circulated. It would have been at least the fifteenth of the month before the primary vote could have been canvassed by the state canvassing board, and to print the ballots, etc., between that time and the first of November would have been out of the question.

GOOD BILL KILLED.

What looks like a very meritorious measure was defeated when the senate went on record against the Theos-Saugstad measure prohibiting discrimination in the purchase or sale of grain, lumber or other commodities in general use. This is a common practice of those who wish to squeeze out competition. Elevators will pay more for wheat than the market warrants when an obnoxious farmers' organization is in the field, or managers of lumber companies will cut prices to the bone in one place and make it up by charging the loss to consumers in another district where there is no competition. Only twenty-six senators were found who would vote for the bill when it came to a show-down, although Senator Theos says there were thirty-six who pledged themselves to support it.

THE LONGEST BILL.

The Dunn Good Roads Law is by quite a little the longest measure that will be passed at this session. It will cover forty pages of the general laws of 1913. The negotiable instruments act, which has more sections, is a close second. The Uniform Warehouse Receipts Act, which comes next, so far as they have been printed, is next in extent, is scarcely half so long. There is no measure in sight which in scope is in the class of either of these.

PUBLIC UTILITIES BILL FAILS.

The public utilities bill would have run the Dunn bill a close race if it had not had bad luck. The one favored was a modification of the Wallace bill prepared by the house committee on general legislation. It is charged that the interests so-called had a hand in its making, and every indication points to this being true. It looks as though the senate only waited for the house to give it its sanction when it would have put over there. However, the house was not so inclined. The bill was riddled there from stern to gudgeon and then thrown out. There were only thirty who voted for it. This vote, however, does not indicate the sentiment in favor of state control of public utilities. Many, perhaps most, of those who voted against the committee bill favored state control as an abstract proposition. Those in a position to judge look for legislation of this character before long. The trend of public sentiment seems to be employed by a city in digging a sewer has his leg broken when a pipe he is putting in place accidentally falls on him the city would be required to compensate him. Many people will see no reason why it should not. AMENDMENTS FAVOR WORKING MEN.

Whether this is the case or not, all the amendments to the bill to which the house could be induced to consent favored the working men. The two most important of these provided that employers should be liable for hospital expenses, and that an injured man should be entitled to compensation from the time he was hurt, and not be required to wait a fortnight before he was entitled to relief as provided in the senate bill. Another amendment makes it the duty of the state labor commissioner to investigate injuries and if it is found that the workman is deserving to represent him in case his claim to compensation is resisted. With these amendments the house approved the bill with but few dissenting votes.

THE SENATE OBJECTS.

While the senate declined to concur it is generally believed that such differences as exist can readily be settled in conference. There can be no question as to the disposition in both houses to pass the bill as a step in the right direction. It could have been passed in the house in its original form, and organized labor, except where influenced by ambulance chasers is inclined to accept the bill as better than nothing. The gentleman I have mentioned are, of course, irremediable. People who look at this matter dispassionately, however, are inclined to conclude that in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred the workman will be better off with the remedies provided in the bill than without them. In the hundredth case—that of the workman who goes to law and gets exemplary damages—of course he is worse off. Any way the bill is a beginning, and if in practical operation it proves to fall short of doing substantial justice, it will be an easy matter for some future legislature to apply the remedy.

THE SALARY LISTS.

The committee on appropriations is inclined to deal fairly if not generously with state officials. Three of them only so far as I have heard have had their emoluments cut down. The governor's private secretary has been paid partly by salary and partly by fees, and his stipend is believed to have been over $7,000. The clerk of the supreme court has been paid in the same way, probably a slightly smaller amount. Both these positions have been put on a salary basis. The amount fixed is $4,500 a year, which is probably all the work is worth. The bank examiner has been cut from $5,000 to $4,500.

SOME INCREASES.

The salary of secretary of state has been increased from $3,500 to $4,500 a year. An allowance hitherto made him every two years of $1,000 for preparing the Blue Book has been cut off. The State Treasurer has been raised from $3,500 to $4,500. The auditor has been raised from $4,200 to $4,600. The public examiner has been raised from $4,100 to $4,600. The superintendent of public instruction has been raised from $3,500 to $4,500. The adjutant general has been raised from $2,000 to $2,400. The state librarian has been raised from $2,000 to $2,500. The dairy and food commissioner has been raised from $2,600 to $3,000, though why his services are considered of less value to the state than those of railroad commissioner or bank examiner, I am at a loss to imagine.

ADDING TO THE EXPENSE OF ADMINISTRATION.

Increases to subordinate officials are quite general. So far as the salary list is concerned, economy has not been practiced, nor does any attempt appear to have been made to lessen the public burdens by any reorganization. The most promising of these, that to abolish the office of oil inspector and make oil inspection a function of the dairy and food department which could have done this in connection with its other work as well as not, was balked by the senate. The attempt to create a department of public domain and thus abolish a number of boards, commissions, and fee offices has also failed. Any real reform in the reduction of the expenses of government must be the work of a succeeding legislature if it is to be accomplished at all.
