

SENECA CAMERAS

There is an irresistible fascination in photography that words cannot adequately convey. We all treasure some memory of the past and "nothing tells a story like a picture."

For nearly one hundred years experts have been working to produce an apparatus which would produce the best possible results with the smallest risk of failure.

"The Seneca 1914 Model" is an ideal instrument. It combines the most modern equipment so simplified that even a small child can understand to operate it.

The Seneca roll film camera has made a decided advance this year in many features. Among the many improvements featured on

Our assortment, we have discarded the obsolete rubber bulb and tube for the Push Cord Release. The advantages of the Push Cord Release are decidedly pronounced, affording absolute certainty in exposure with no possible chance to jar the camera.

One thing we do that no other dealers can—"Being photographers, we have mastered every branch of photography."—We offer to thoroughly demonstrate and assist our customers in buying the best pictures.

NOT A CHOLERA CURE

Dean Woods Says Benetol is of No Value in Treating Hog Cholera.

In view of the fact that certain claims for a proprietary remedy—benetol—have been made in the public press recently, calling attention to it as an alleged preventive and curative remedy for hog cholera, in such a manner as to indicate that the Minnesota Experiment Station approves it, we wish to call the attention of hog owners to the following facts:

Dr. E. W. Berg, whose name is mentioned in the press articles, is not and never has been connected with the Minnesota Experiment Station either directly or indirectly.

In a series of experiments recently conducted at the State Hog Cholera Serum Plant, it was found that benetol had absolutely no value as a preventive or curative agent for hog cholera.

In one series of experiments the hogs that were given benetol died before others which had not been given any treatment at all, and the characteristic lesions of hog cholera were found on autopsy.

In a large number of cases it was found that the hogs that were given benetol, by drench, as directed, developed a severe inflammation of the entire digestive tract, evidently due to the irritating action of the drug.

When benetol was injected hypodermically, local abscesses usually followed at the points of injection.

In a herd of hogs sick of cholera by natural infection, and treated with benetol by a representative of the company manufacturing the remedy, every hog treated with benetol subsequently died of cholera, while a few that were untreated made a recovery. The treatment of this herd was under observation by a veterinarian from the Experiment Station.

Neither the Minnesota Experiment Station, the State Live Stock Sanitary Board, nor the Federal Department of Agriculture, has given any endorsement of benetol as a remedy to combat cholera, as might be inferred by the newspaper articles referred to.—A. F. Woods, Dean and Director, Department of Agriculture, University Farm, St. Paul.

PROHIBITIONISTS ELATED

United States Supreme Court Steps Lid Back on Indian Territory With a Bang.

Minneapolis, Minn., June 9, 1914. (Special Correspondence). The decision handed down yesterday by the United States Supreme Court in the appeal of the Indian Country Liquor case establishing absolute Prohibition covering sixteen thousand square miles of territory and affecting a population of 200,000 people is considered the greatest victory ever won for Prohibition in this country. W. G. Calderwood, the Prohibition party candidate for governor of Minnesota, was the man who dug up the old Indian treaties prohibiting the introduction of intoxicating liquors into the Indian Territory. He called the attention of the Interior Department to the treaties with the result that "Pussyfoot" Johnson and his deputies closed up about 400 saloons in the territory affected. But Judge Willard now deceased, dismissed proceedings against 12 Benidji saloonkeepers and granted a permanent injunction against the federal officials, holding that the treaty was not in force outside of Indian reservations.

Four or five days after Judge Willard's decision had been given, W. G. Calderwood was sent to Washington by the Minnesota Prohibition State Committee to urge the United States government to make an appeal to the supreme court. He was very favorably received both by the Department of the Interior and the legal department and action for appeal was promptly begun. It has taken three years to get the case before the supreme court, but the decision was handed down yesterday affirming every contention made by Mr. Calderwood. Only about 180 or 200 of the 400 saloons originally closed by Mr. Johnson have been re-opened since the Willard decision. These will now have to close up again and stay closed till congress changes the status of any of the territory affected.

W. G. Calderwood was able to accomplish this as a private citizen of the commonwealth. Given executive authority his services would be vastly extended. This territory in North Central Minnesota is the largest absolutely Prohibition territory in the United States. The strong arm of the federal government enforces the law and that is the kind of Prohibition that absolutely prohibits.
