ABOUT THE STATE News of Especial Interest to Minnesota Readers.

The advantages of the construction of the Lake Superior and Mississippi river canal from St. Paul to the lakes were presented to the board of engineers of rivers and harbors at Washington.

Senator Nelson and Representative Stevens presented the principal arguments for the delegation. In urging the importance of the project Senator Nelson declared it was analogous in importance to the Erie canal and declared that New York never would have become the great commercial center into which it has grown had it not been for the Erie canal.

Senator Nelson pointed out that whenever water and rail transportation were in competition rail rates always dropped to meet the water rates, and that inland waterways had done more to help the Northwest in cheapening freight rates than the interstate commerce commission.

To both Senator Nelson and Mr. Stevens, Chairman Black of the engineer board offered the objection that there was no knowledge at hand of the cost of the canal traffic and that until that knowledge was available the construction of the proposed canal was of doubtful advisability.

SELECT MINNEAPOLIS MAN

Minnesota Democrats Choose A. L. Sortor Chairman.

Peace was apparently restored between the Democratic factions at the meeting of new Democratic state central committee in the new capitol at St. Paul when A. L. Sortor of Minneapolis was elected state chairman and Daniel W. Lawler made a speech clarifying W. S. Hammond, his successful opponent for the Democratic nomination for governor.

Four of the men whom Mr. Lawler declared should not be appointed on the executive committee were placed upon it. They are Martin O'Brien of Crookston, vice chairman; D. D. Daly, Minneapolis; R. W. Hargadine, St. Paul, and Senator T. E. Cashman, Owatonna.

The executive committee named D. D. Daly as its chairman and Robert W. Hargadine of St. Paul as secretary of the general committee and S. D. Works of St. Paul as treasurer. H. F. Wessel of St. Paul was substituted for Hargadine as a member of the executive committee.

Mr. Schmah was also served with an order issued by Judge R. Stolberg of the Nineteenth district court, restraining him from placing the name of Preus on the general election ballot until the contest has been determined.

Rines' affidavit, giving eighteen reasons for his contention, charges that 3,000 ballots were wrongfully counted for Preus, 2,000 for Julius H. DEATH REMOVES FAMOUS BRITON

Joseph Chamberlain Expires After Long Illness.

London, July 4.—Right Honorable Joseph Chamberlain, one of the most commanding figures in British national and international politics, is dead. He succumbed after a protracted illness. The end was peaceful.

Mr. Chamberlain's last public appearance was at a garden party on the grounds of his Birmingham home May 6 last, when, with his wife and son, he received several hundred constituents. Mr. Chamberlain was wheeled out on the lawn in a chair and appeared very emaciated and feeble when he lifted his hat to friends and neighbors in acknowledgment of their salutes.

Mr. Chamberlain's death came as an entire surprise, as the condition of his health was not publicly known to be worse than at any time in the past two or three years.

Mrs. Chamberlain was a daughter of W. C. Edcott, secretary of war under President Cleveland.

"King of Birmingham."

Chamberlain was born in 1836 in Birmingham, which he held politically in the hollow of his hand. He was known as the "King of Birmingham."

All the seven parliamentary seats of the great manufacturing city are held by Chamberlain nominees and a politician he opposed was simply wasting time when he made the race.

The dead statesman started political life as a Radical, but left Chamberlain's party on the issue of home rule for Ireland, to which he was opposed. He held the highest posts under Conservative administrations and was secretary to the colonies from 1895 to 1902.

He went to great lengths to gain his ends and was the most cordially hated and loved political figure of his time.

His imperialistic policy, which led to the South African war, was the cause of assaults upon his person. None of them were successful.

PEERS ANXIOUS TO AVOID CIVIL STRIFE

Unionists Realize Serious Situation in Ireland.

London, July 3.—Debate in the house of lords on the bill to amend the Irish home rule bill was characterized by general recognition on the part of the Unionist peers that some means of settlement must be found and that the amending bill offered the only solution.

The Duke of Aberdeen, speaking as an Ulster volunteer, said he looked upon the bill as the only loophole he could see for the avoidance of a most awful calamity.

The Marquis of Londonderry, chairman of the Ulster Unionist council, said the bill was a horrible one, but he would support it in order to avoid civil war.

The Marquis of Salisbury announced he would support the amending bill for the same reason, much as he disliked it.

The Earl of Halsbury, once the most irreconcilable of the "die hards," hoped so, too, for nothing could be more urgent, he said, than the necessity of making some sacrifices in order to avert civil war.
