OFFICIAL PAPER OF KANDIYOHI COUNTY AND CITY OF WILLMAR, WILLMAR, MINNESOTA, WEDNESDAY, JULY 15, 1914

THE VALUE OF THE HEAVY RAINS

Success often grows out of adversity. In some sections such severe drouths occasionally occur that grass turns brown and fails to grow in mid-summer; hay is too short to cut, grain produces but little more than what is needed for the next year's seeding, and such crops as corn and potatoes simply dry up and burn.

Looking back on such periods in those regions they appear now as mile-posts pointing the way to the establishment of systems of farming under which such apparently disastrous seasons were virtually changed into successful ones.

During such seasons alfalfa stayed green and continued to grow when all other crops suffered, drouth resistant crops were discovered and introduced and farmers began to build silos that crops which would otherwise be lost could be utilized, and if the cows could not get fresh June grass from the pastures they could get just as good feed any time it was needed, summer or winter.

Periods of heavy rainfall are quite as disastrous to some crops as are seasons of drouth. The excessive rain in this section during June has caused damage to some crops, has delayed cultivation of corn and potatoes, and will make it impossible to save a large quantity of wild hay on the low lands. These immediate losses will work hardship to some and are to be regretted, yet these losses can be abundantly made good for in the future, if as in some of the regions of drouth, the lessons of the unfavorable conditions are observed, and there are put in operation some of the practices that will prevent losses under similar conditions.

One problem which needs further consideration in some localities is the continuance of construction of projects that will secure better land drainage. It is encouraging to know that action has already been taken on this question in a number of localities since the recent rains. In one county during the past three weeks four petitions were circulated for the construction of large drainage projects and in this particular county and elsewhere there is agitation for the filing of more petitions for similar purposes. In one respect, there is no better land for agricultural purposes than the lower lands after they have been given good drainage, for when well drained neither flood nor drouth can cause crops thereon to suffer seriously.

Another valuable lesson to be observed, is how beside fields of seriously damaged grain there stand high, and growing lustily, immense crops of clover and timothy that have every evidence of yielding from one and one-half to two tons per acre with every chance for a second crop either for hay or pasture.

Likewise it is to be noted the prospect for corn. Corn is a crop that stands adverse conditions well and recovers rapidly. Though it has been come weedy on account of the impossibility of giving proper cultivation, and its growth is somewhat retarded as a result, yet lost time is being rapidly made up, and considering that corn can use the abundance of soil moisture to advantage, a big crop is assured. All of it may not fully ripen yet the silo will furnish the means of making the best possible use of what is not fully mature.

From alfalfa, too, a great lesson is to be learned. Joseph E. Wing says that successful alfalfa growing is a cure for the blues. There can hardly be imagined a surer cause for despondency of the farmer than to work hard throughout a season and then see his crops lost or greatly damaged in just a day or two, especially if his farming is given over to one crop and he is entirely dependent on it. But to leave a damaged field of some crop that cannot readily recover and enter a good field of alfalfa will fill one with confidence and gladness. It is a crop that helps make the future secure, drouth notwithstanding, for if one cutting is somewhat damaged it is no cause for serious worry as there are two other immense crops that may be secured the same year.

Finally, the lesson of the heavy rains not only emphasizes the necessity of subduing undrained land, and furnishes further evidence of the importance of modifying still more our system of farming, so as to cut down the acreage of grain, increase the acreage of corn, tame grasses and alfalfa, and with the latter and the silo make possible profitable production of more live stock, but it also makes clear the value to be gained through greater diversification, in that thru better distribution of farm labor thruout the year, better living conditions may be secured both for a farmer and his family and those whom he must employ.—Frank E. Balmer, Supervisor Co. Agents, Morris, Minn.

PERTINENT ITEMS ON PROHIBITION ISSUE

Gleaned From Bulletins Issued From I. M. Kalness, of the Prohib. Party.

Speaker Champ Clark says that we'll have woman suffrage all over the nation by 1917. That makes a saloonless nation by 1920 surer still.

The brewer stands for license under local and county option. The Sunday school man is against license. If these two men vote for the same candidate, who wins?

The recent primaries demonstrated two things: that the state of Minnesota is ripe for state-wide Prohibition NOW, and that the influence of the country editor is stronger than ever.

Four kings of Europe have joined the list of teetotalers—Alfonso of Spain, Victor Emmanuel of Italy, Ferdinand of Belgium, and Gustav of Sweden. The world is going Prohibition. Pass the grape juice, Bill!

The "drys" of Le Sueur have appealed their license election contest to the state supreme court. If 10 blank ballots are counted as "dry" Le Sueur's saloons will have to go out of business.

The result of the primary election is highly satisfactory to the "drys" candidates for the legislature. Prospects are very bright for the election of a legislature that will pass a state-wide Prohibition bill.

A bulletin recently issued by the government's census bureau shows taxes in cities in Prohibition states to be less than taxes in license cities. The taxpayer should vote for Prohibition every time. It means money in his pocket.

Iceland was the first country to adopt national Prohibition. The law prohibiting importation of liquor went into effect Jan. 1, 1912. The dealers have till Jan. 1, 1915, to sell their stock on hand. At that time, absolute Prohibition becomes effective.

"Mr. Saloonkeeper: Mr. Prohibitionist is after you while you are asleep. You have seen his diabolical work in the long list of Minnesota and South Dakota towns which have gone dry within the last two years or so."—Both Sides, Minneapolis Liquor paper.

With Hugh Halbert, Progressive, Wm. E. Lee, Republican, and Winfield Scott Hammond, Democrat, three candidates for governor standing for county option, and W. G. Calderwood, Prohibition candidate for governor for state-wide Prohibition, the liquor interests will have to choose between two evils.

California, Oregon, Washington, Arizona, Colorado and Virginia, six large states, will vote on constitutional amendment for state-wide Prohibition this fall. Women vote in all of these states, with the exception of Virginia. The nine states already under Prohibition are: Maine, Kansas, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Georgia, North Carolina, Mississippi, Tennessee and West Virginia.

Thirty business and professional men of Bemidji have organized an 1855 Treaty Enforcement League, with J. J. Opsahl, president, and Harry Reynolds, secretary and treasurer. Funds are being raised to carry on a campaign for the enforcement of the treaty. Petitions signed by 400 residents ask that saloons be closed. These have been forwarded to the Indian department.

Frank A. Day, erstwhile Democratic state chairman and the man who made Governor Johnson, in speaking of Prohibition in his Fairmount Sentinel, says: "That is one of the live issues before Congress and it cannot be sidestepped. There is no doubt but the second congressional district would vote dry if it had an opportunity, and the opportunity is quite likely to come within the next few years. This is a time in which the voter has no time for trimmers and dissemblers."

The liquor interests are not pledging their candidates against county option in this campaign but against state-wide prohibition. There are a few exceptions of course in the very few strongholds. If the brewers and distillers succeed in defeating state-wide Prohibition candidates with county option men, they will claim after election that temperance sentiment is so weak in Minnesota that we ought not pass county option either.

The greatest benefit of removing the saloon is to the young man who never drank. Some may argue that they will send off and get the whisky; in all my years of observation and experience I have never known a young man who had never taken a drink to send off and get a jug of whisky and drink it. The young man usually learns to drink in saloons, a sherry can get a cool glass of beer, a sherry cobbler or a cocktail.—Col. W. H. Osborn, U. S. Com. Int. Rev.

There is only one temperance organization in the state of Minnesota that has gone back on the "Get-Together" program of the united temperance forces of the state. The other six state-wide organizations are putting up a united front for "State-wide Prohibition at the earliest practicable date." The Prohibition party organization is one of the six organizations to stand loyalty by the platform agreed on at Minneapolis on Feb. 24 and 25 by the representatives of all the different temperance organizations of the state.

Is the Progressive party becoming

A Prohibition party? The Progressive party of Maine in state convention declared for National Prohibition some time ago. Last week Progressive party state conventions in Idaho and Iowa declared for state and national Prohibition. The Republican party's convention in Idaho declared for immediate statutory Prohibition for the state and the Democratic convention was on record for submitting a Prohibition constitutional amendment to the vote of the people. It takes a Prohibition plank in a party platform to get the votes of the people—that's the secret of this mad rush for a seat on the political water-wagon.

"What science says about alcohol," is the heading of a very interesting article by Burton J. Hendrick in the June issue of Munsey's Magazine. We quote the following short excerpts: "Anyone who investigates the present attitude of medical men toward the alcohol problem will find marked difference of opinion. If one confines his inquiries to practicing physicians, he will discover plenty of authority that is not especially hostile to it." "Doctors base their conclusions upon experience, observation in their daily practice, and at the bedside, all colored more or less by personal inclinations, customs, and prejudice. On the other hand, there is a group of silent laboratory workers, who consider nothing but carefully observed and digested facts." "Now the remarkable fact is that, though the doctors may disagree about alcohol as about many other things, the scientists apparently never do. Practically all who really experimented have rendered the verdict strongly against it. Alcohol, in their view, is not a stimulant, it is not an 'appetizer' or an aid to digestion, it is not a food in any real meaning of the word, it is not an inspiration to mental work, and it does not increase muscular activity. That peculiar combination of otherwise wholesome matter—two atoms of carbon, six atoms of hydrogen, and one atom of oxygen—which make up the alcohol molecule is a mistake, a chemical abortion, something which the human frame, in all its conditions of health and disease, is infinitely better off without."

CRAWFORD BLAKELY.

The sudden death of Crawford Blakely occurred July 4th at 4:30 p. m. His death was due to heart trouble from which he had been suffering for some time past. Mr. Blakely was born at Hastings, Minn., June 7, 1855, and with his parents moved to a farm near Paynesville where he spent the rest of his life. He was married Dec. 25, 1878, to Eliza Lester. For ten years he was a member of the town board of supervisors and for many years served his district on the school board. He was a man well loved by all and had lived a life of kindness and thoughtfulness for others. He held membership in both the Odd Fellows and Masonic orders. The funeral services were conducted at his home by the Masonic lodge July 6 at 10 a. m. He leaves a wife, three sons and three daughters.—Paynesville Press.

JOHN NEHRING, Senior.

July 5th, when the people of Paynesville were greeting the new day of rest, the Evangelical church bell told us that another pioneer had gone to the better world during the night. Mr. Nehring was born November 27, 1827, at Blumberg, Germany; in 1848 he served his country as a soldier for three years. In 1862 he was joined in holy wedlock with Wilhelmina Bert, and lived together for 52 years. The family came to America in 1871, making their home north of Paynesville in the Salem settlement. About 15 years ago the old home and farm business was turned over to the youngest son and the old folks moved to town. Though nearly 88 years old, father Nehring was able to tend his garden and be among his friends down town and church. He leaves to mourn his loss his aged widow, two sons and two daughters. The remains were laid to rest on the beautiful Salem cemetery.—Paynesville Press.

BREWERS WERE SHORTSIGHTED

The biggest mistake ever made by the brewing interests in this state was when they permitted the non-partisan legislative law to pass without opposition. Before they had the temperance forces divided in four or five party camps, while their own well disciplined forces would disregard party lines. From all reports the next legislature will be such as to heed the voice of the people demanding that the liquor curse be wiped out of Minnesota.

COUNTRY WILL GO AHEAD.

Sewing machines were put on the free list by the Democrats. A howl of calamity arose of the dreadful result anticipated by the Republican politicians. The Singer Company, employing 10,000 men now announces that they cannot supply the demand for their machines, and that instead of shutting down for a month for repairs as has been their custom for every year for twenty years, they will try to do the necessary overhauling in one week. Wool is five to six cents higher than it was last year, the textile and cotton mills are running full time and report a prosperous year, iron workers are busy, the supply of mechanics is short all over the country, bank clearings have increased, and business interests in all sections of the country are optimistic in the prospects of big crops. Led by our energetic president, Congress has accomplished a lot of far-reaching legislation. But there are a lot of problems yet to be solved, and the important question before the country is the election of a congress to continue the work. There should be no backward step now.
