THE TUBERCULOSIS QUESTION

Dr. Johnson Quotes Dr. P. M. Hall.

Editor Willmar Tribune: Dr. P. M. Hall of the Minneapolis Tribune has the following remarks on tuberculosis in the Jan. 27 issue of that newspaper. As it corroborates my position and emphasizes other vital points in the discussion, I ask you to publish it.

"LEST WE FORGET."

"There are some fundamental principles regarding tuberculosis that will bear frequent repetition. We know, for instance, that the tubercle bacillus is always present in developed tuberculosis disease, yet we know but little positively of the conditions favoring implantation, nor the manner of its entrance into the body."

"We know that many persons die of other diseases that show upon post mortem examination the healed lesions of a former tuberculosis implantation. Who shall say just what was the method of cure in the particular case?"

"We have reason to believe that the tubercle bacillus is very widely disseminated throughout the inhabited parts of the earth, yet who of us knows when he is harboring the germ? And yet there are certain facts that we must recognize as being established, even though they may not be capable as yet of scientific demonstration. We should not be bound down by scientific fetiches."

"We shall admit that as yet the 'why' of the benefits of open air treatment, from a scientific standpoint, have not been demonstrated. We know the oxygen is ever present in our homes, that is, upon the inside of them, but just whether the known beneficial results of the open air are due to a better oxygen, to the humidity, the movement, or to just what property of the outside air, is as yet not proven."

"We do know that the Indian, since he has been taken from his open air habits of life in the tepee, and housed in frame shacks, has died in frightful numbers from the disease. We also know that the inoculated rabbits that Trudeau turned loose to roam the forests lived out their allotted time, while those that were housed up died very promptly from the disease. We have read that the early fathers of medicine, who were careful observers, advised their consumptive patients: 'Quit your job—go to the mountains, rest and live on milk and honey.'"

"These may not be scientific demonstrations, but they are well established facts. 'Just why an individual will resist an invasion of the tubercle bacillus at one time, and not at another, is as yet an unsolved problem. We do know that the largest numbers of the victims of the disease are the underfed, poorly clothed, miserably housed, dissipated mortals who have persistently disregarded the teachings of improved personal hygiene."

"Overwork, overstudy, too much worrying, debilitation from long lasting sickness, are also factors in the causation of the disease. We do not say that these are the causes of the disease, but that they permit of the rapid development of the germ after an implantation there can be no reasonable doubt. And these all mean lowered resistance. Is it not fair, then, to say that by improved habits of living we are more apt to resist the invasions of the germ because our vital resistance is improved?"

"We know that the seasonal rise of pneumonia, an acute disease of the lungs, corresponds with the season of closed windows and storm sash. Just because we do not know why this is so shall we ignore the facts?"

"Despite lack of scientific proof it is still wise to teach and practice hygienic living. This is the best guard against tuberculosis. We admit that the tubercle bacillus is the cause of the disease, but we can't live in the germ-free glass case and make our living."

"Therefore, the best advice is to live hygienic lives, confident in the belief that by so doing we are best prepared to ward off and defeat any invasion of the disease. Get the open air habit, keep up the vital resistance, and you need not fear tuberculosis. It is largely a personal matter. Will you do your part?"

Respectfully submitted, DR. CHRISTIAN JOHNSON.
