

When Anybody Finds a Cure He Is Generally Willing To Tell His Neighbor

The willingness of one neighbor to tell another neighbor in a private way of the benefit received from Peruna, explains the popularity of Peruna more than all the advertising that has been done.

The fear of the publicity undoubtedly prevents the majority of such people from writing a testimonial to be used in the newspaper. But in spite of that we are receiving fine testimonials continually.

ANEMIA—Mrs. F. A. DeWitt, Marengo, Ohio, says: "I believe Peruna to be the best tonic. I recommend it for any run-down condition of the system."

SPRING COLDS—Mrs. Rhoda Stuflemberg, Bunch, Iowa: "A cold in spring cold I took settled on my lungs. Coughed. Could not sleep. We feared consumption. Thanks to Peruna, I am a well woman today."

CATARH—Mrs. Sadie Allen, Joseph, Oregon: "My little boy is entirely cured of catarrh of the ears by Peruna. Am thankful for your good advice."

SPRING TONIC—Mrs. Wm. McRoberts, Brown Valley, Minn.: "Taken in spring Peruna tones up the system, acts as a tonic, I consider Peruna a whole family medicine chest."

How did they hear of Peruna? Simply because one neighbor is always willing to tell another one he has found a cure. Neighborly conversation of grateful patients has done more for Peruna than advertising. Much more.

SYNOPSIS.

Frank O'Connell, young Irish patriot, is shot and wounded by British soldiers while making a home rule speech. He is aided by Angela Kingsnorth, an English society girl, who defends him. Angela takes O'Connell to her brother's home and helps to nurse him. He recovers, and she and the girl become fast friends. O'Connell when he is sent to jail for disturbing the peace. He finally writes Angela that he has finished his sentence. O'Connell and Angela wed. She has espoused the Irish cause. Her brother, a member of parliament, is very angry. The happy couple come to America to live. A daughter is born to them. Angela's brother refuses to help the couple in any way. Angela dies. O'Connell names his daughter Margaret and calls her "Peg." O'Connell receives a most important letter from England, which perplexes him. O'Connell allows Peg to visit England at her uncle's request. The sister Kingsnorth's heart had finally softened toward his dead sister's little girl. Peg goes to the home of the Chechster family in England at the direction of Mr. Hawkes, Kingsnorth's attorney, as Kingsnorth suddenly dies.

CHAPTER XI. The Chechsters.

ALRIC sat on the edge of her chair and put his arm around her shoulder and tried to comfort her.

"Don't you worry, mater," he said. "Don't worry. I'll go down and tell 'em what I think of 'em—exactly what I think of 'em. They can't play the fool with me. I should think not, indeed. Listen, mater. You've got a son, thank God, and one no bank can take any liberties with. What we put in there we've got to have out. That's all I can say. We're simply got to have it out. There! I've said it."

Alric rose and, drawing himself up to his full five feet six inches of manhood, glared malignantly at some imaginary bank officials. His whole nature was roused. The future of the family depended on him. They would not depend on vain. He looked at Ethel, who was trying to make the best of the business by smiling agreeably on them both.

"It's bankrupt!" wailed Mrs. Chechster.

"Failed!" suggested Ethel cheerfully. "We're beggars," continued the mother. "I must live on charity for the rest of my life, the guest of relations I've hated the sight of and who have hated me. It's dreadful—dreadful!"

All Alric's first glow of manly enthusiasm began to cool.

"Don't you think we'll get anything?" By accident he turned to Ethel. She smiled meaninglessly and said for the first time with any note of conviction:

"Nothing!"

Alric sat down gloomily beside his mother.

"I always thought bank directors were blighters. Good heavens, what a mess!" He looked the picture of misery. "What's to become of Ethel, mater?"

"Whoever shelters me must shelter Ethel as well, driving me mother sadly. 'But it's hard—on my age—to be sheltered.'"

Alric looked at Ethel, and a feeling of pity came over him. It was distinctly to his credit since his own wrongs occupied most of his attention. But, after all, he could buffet the world and write a living out of it. All he had to do was to make up his mind which walk in life to choose. He was fortunate.

But Ethel, reared from infancy in the environment of independence—it would come very hard and bitter on her. Alric just touched Ethel's hand, and with as much feeling as he could muster he said:

"Shocking, tough, old girl!" Ethel shook her head almost determinedly and said somewhat enigmatically and for her headily:

"No?" "No?" asked Alric. "No—what?" "Charity," said Ethel.

"Cold blooded words," and Alric shuddered. "What will you do, Ethel?" "Work."

"At what?" "Teach."

"Teach? Who in the wide world can you teach?" "Children."

Alric laughed mirthlessly. "Oh, come, that's rich! Eh, mater? Fancy Ethel teaching grubby little brats their A B C's? Teach."

"Must," said Ethel, quite unmoved. "A Chechster teach?" said Alric, in disgust.

"Settled!" from Ethel, and she swept her fingers slowly across the piano.

"Very well," said Alric determinedly. "I'll work too."

Mrs. Chechster looked up pleadingly. Alric went on: "I'll put my hand to the plow. The more I think of it the keener I am to begin. From today I'll be a workman."

At this Ethel laughed a queer, little, odd, snarling note, summed up in a single word, "Ha!" There was nothing mirthful in it. There was no approach in it. It was just an expression of her honest feeling at the bare suggestion of her brother working.

Alric turned quickly to her. "And may I ask you that 'Ha'?" "Why, I ask you? There's nothing I couldn't do if I were really put to it—no! a single thing. Is there, mater?"

His mother looked up proudly at him. "I know that, dear. But it's dreadful to think of you—working!"

"Not at all," said Alric. "I'm just fingling all over at the thought of it. The only reason I haven't so far is because I've never had to. But now that I have I'll just buckle on my armor, so to speak, and astonish you all."

Again came that deadly, cold unsympathetic "Ha!" from Ethel.

"Please don't laugh in that cheerless way, Ethel. It goes all down my spine. Jerry's always telling me I ought to do something—that the world is for the worker—and all that. He's right, and I'm going to show it. He suddenly picked up the paper and looked at the date. "What's today—the 1st? Yes, so it is—June the 1st. Jerry's coming today—all his family too. They've taken 'Noel's Folly,' on the hill. He's sure to look in here.

Couldn't be better. He's the cove to turn to in a case like this."

Jarvis, a white haired, dignified butler, who had served the family man and boy, came in at this juncture with a visiting card on a salver.

Alric picked it up and glanced at it. He gave an expression of disgust and flung the card back on the salver. "Christian Brent."

For the first time Ethel showed more than a passing gleam of interest. She stopped strumming the piano and stood up, very erect and very still.

Mrs. Chechster rose too. "I can't see any one," she said imperatively. "Nor I," added Alric. "I'm all strung up." He turned to Jarvis. "Tell Mr. Brent we're very sorry, but—"

"I'll see him," interrupted Ethel, almost animatedly. "Bring Mr. Brent here, Jarvis."

As Jarvis went in search of Mr. Brent Mrs. Chechster went up the great stairs. "My head is throbbing. I'll go to my room."

"Don't you worry, mater," consoled Alric. "Leave everything to me. I'll thrash the whole thing out."

As Mrs. Chechster disappeared Alric turned to his calm sister, who, strangely enough, was showing some signs of life and interest.

"Really going to teach?" "Yes."

"Right! I'll find something, too—very likely a doctor. We'll pull through somehow."

Ethel made a motion toward the door as though to stop any further conversation.

"Mr. Brent's coming," she said, almost impatiently.

Alric started for the window leading into the garden.

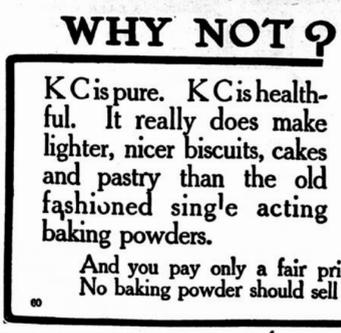

"Jolly good of you to let him bore you. I hate the sight of the beggar myself. Always looks to me like the first conspirator at a play."

The door opened, and Jarvis entered with a card. "Mr. Brent," Alric hurried into the garden.

A few words of description of Christian Brent might be of interest since he represents a type that society always has with it.

They begin by deceiving others; they end by deceiving themselves.

Why Not? KC is pure. KC is healthful. It really does make lighter, nicer biscuits, cakes and pastry than the old fashioned single acting baking powders. And you pay only a fair price for it. No baking powder should sell for more.

A WONDERFUL HEALING INFLUENCE IN KIDNEY TROUBLES. A year and a half ago I was taken with a severe attack of Kidney trouble that pained me to such an extent that morphine had to be given me. I attended by a doctor who pronounced it as Stone in the Bladder and prescribed Lithia Water. I took Lithia Water and Tablets for some time and received no relief from them. I stopped taking medicines for some time, later having some Swamp-Root in the house I decided to try it and felt much relieved. While taking the second bottle commenced to pass Gravel in urine until I had passed in all at least a half dozen or more and have not suffered the slightest since—and in all have taken one bottle and a half and feel very grateful to Swamp-Root.
