Royal Court.
This game of royal court will afford amusement for the children at Christ- mas. Arrange two rows of chairs back to back and seat the children.
At each end of the double row place a table on which is a cardboard pack containing one pack of cards. Two children in turn are selected from among those seated.
They go, one to each table, and when the signal is given race in opposite di- rections round the chairs till they re- turn to their original starting point at the tables. The cards are hastily placed in the box, and a hurried search is made by each of the two children for picture cards.
The four kings, queens and knaves must, when collected, be deposited on a tray that has been placed in another part of the room as a winning post. The first to accomplish this wins. The successful competitor returns to his seat; the loser vacates his and is then out of the competition.
The last two to remain in the game are proclaimed king and queen of Christmas and receive prizes, while the third is Jack the knave. He gains a funny booby prize. It is amusing to dress the royal pair in regal robes, crown them and present scepters. They may march at the head of the guests and sit together on draped and gilded thrones.
Crowns of cardboard covered with gold paper may be prepared for king and queen. A very grand scepter may be made by fixing an old tennis ball by means of sealing wax on to a bam- boo cane and covering the whole with silver or gold paper or going over it with gilt paint.
Christmas After Dinner Trick.
Many a boy has had an immense lot of fun from the use of what he terms a "sucker," generally made from a piece of leather, to which, through a hole in the center, he attaches a string, and with this bit of leather, when wet, he is enabled to lift stones and other heavy materials. But here is a suc- ker or never dreamed of. Take an ordi- nary winter radish (if you can get a large one so much the better), cut it away at the bottom, leaving a flat sur- face; apply this to a dinner plate and you will find they will become attach- ed friends.
