CAPT. C. A. RICE TELLS OWN STORY

Interesting Facts of Recent World-Tour in Search of Big Game Revealed.

The following article is reproduced from the Minneapolis Journal of last Sunday, which devoted a page to the adventures of Capt. C. A. Rice, in his recent tour of the world, hunting big game. Accompanying the article were several pictures of the Captain taken at various places on the tour.

The following is Captain Cushman A. Rice's own story of his quest for big game in the wilds of Australia, the Malay states, New Guinea, Java, Sumatra, India, China, Manchuria and Korea. The quest at Mukden revealed that he is a battle center and not a hunter of the European war. Captain Rice is a retired army officer and is known internationally as a huntsman.

By CAPT. CUSHMAN A. RICE. Around Sydney about all the game to be found is rabbits. They usually work them with ferrets and the Australian animal steps faster by about 60 miles an hour than do our domestic pests. Snowy Baker, the boxing impresario of Sydney, got up two parties of his Australian friends among them a Mr. and Mrs. Morrison, and we went hunting in picnic style. That is about all one can get around Sydney.

From there I went up to Port Darwin, the extreme north part of Australia. The people in Port Darwin will tell you that it is the third hottest place in the world, according to official records. I think they are mistaken by two. It is the hottest. There is to be found very good shooting. The hunter can get wild buffalo, any number of them, and it is a dangerous game. There are also kangaroo and thousands of wallaby, kangaroo shooting requires good marksmanship as they are generally moving and at long range. The wallaby is easy because the hunter can get close, but the animal will carry away a lot of lead and a dog is required to get them after they have been shot.

From there I went to the cannibal part of New Guinea. There is little large game there. The hunt is a game of marked-down ostrich, the only big game, unless one cares to go after crocodiles or snakes. I didn't care for either. There is, however, absolutely no limit to the bird life. Every known species of plumage bird in the world is there and plentiful.

I went up to the Ceylon, but did little hunting there, although game is plentiful. I looked over the country, but decided to do the next real hunt in Java, where I went on the invitation of some Dutch friends. F. H. DeKop, king of the Dutch sportsmen, kidnapped me and took me for five weeks by motor through Java.

It is the most beautiful spot in the world, with perfect roads, and has what Australia lacks, a line of very fine hotels, no matter where you go. While in Java I was entertained by the sultan of Solo and the sultan of Ejoeka, the sultan of Ejoeka giving a formal reception, attended by about 1,500 of his retainers. With the oriental music, wonderful costumes and fabulous jewels, it was like a scene from the Arabian Nights.

I went from Java to Sumatra, which is a sportsman's paradise. You can set anything you want in Sumatra. There are tigers, leopards, panthers, bears and deer. There are hundreds of other smaller species. Owing to the fact these animals have not been molested, the English, the usual big game hunters, are not in evidence at all and neither are the French, German or Italians. And owing to the disturbed conditions I saw very few Americans.

The game has become, from this fact, particularly bold. I went from Sumatra to the Malay federated states. The same condition exists there, with plenty of game. The day I was leaving Singapore a planter from up country begged me to go back with him to his place.

He offered to pay all expenses incurred on the trip and to supply me with coolies if I would go out after a small herd of six elephants that had been taken after night came into his rubber plantation and amused themselves by uprooting and throwing around his 25-year-old rubber trees.

They had already destroyed over 120 acres of valuable trees. When I left there was a strong agitation in favor of placing a bounty of $50 a head on elephants to stop their depredations.

In China, my next stop, the district between Canton and Hankow abounds in leopards. Tigers are not at all rare. A week before I arrived in Hongkong a big tiger had been killed in Kowloon, the terminus of the railroad, directly across from the island of Hongkong.

This big tiger had wandered into the residence district of the city and attacked a coolie working in a garden. A native police officer shot at the tiger and the animal attacked the officer, killing him. In the meantime a white English officer had been notified and arrived with a rifle. He fired two shots into the wounded tiger, but did not stop him. The tiger leaped upon the Englishman, fracturing his skull with one blow of the paw. The animal then crawled away a few yards and died.

In the north of China around the Pekin district I got deer and pheasants, ducks and geese, but no particularly big or dangerous game is to be found there. I started into Mongolia for the Mongolian sheep and goat, but the country was so excessively cold that after two days' trip I abandoned the hunt. I got antelope but no sheep.

Having been told that the country surrounding Mukden was wonderful for game, I went to Manchuria. Early on von Meerbeck and myself arranged a shooting party in this section. On arrival at Mukden we were disappointed to find that this famous city, once the site of a great battle in the Russo-Japanese war lay in the center of a large plain. The only game to be gotten was small. We got some of the beautiful Korean pheasants.

I went up into Siberia with a view of hunting there. We had a lot of trouble about passports, carrying guns and ammunition and as the conditions both as to game and bears were almost similar to Korea and the Japanese government had extended to me the courtesy of shooting in that territory where I pleased, I left for Seoul, the ancient capital of Korea, where I met several of the finest American sportsmen I had met on my trip.

W. H. Morris and W. W. Taylor were particularly well posted on the location of game. Both these men gave me a great deal of good advice, which, contrary to usual experience, I found to be based on facts and knowledge of the country.

Mr. Morris arranged for a wild boar hunt. We left Seoul early one morning, and going only 17 miles from town, took firetrails into the mountains, a distance of about three miles, where a bull pack train and guides waited. All day we proceeded thru the mountains into rougher country. That night we stopped at a Korean native home which we had a little room 10 by 10 square. It was very comfortable as the Korean heating methods are the finest I have ever seen. The houses are built long and narrow—one room after another. The floors are made of thin slabs of stone covered with oiled paper. At one end of a house is a fireplace and the flues run under the mountains, and then go out through the other side of the house. It was one of the best effects in heating I have ever seen.

Mr. Morris, who is a hunter of experience, had a complete outfit, including stoves, food and refreshments. As far as comforts are concerned, we might have been in Minneapolis. The next morning we started long before daylight with a large escort of Korean bearers, who went to the tops of the mountains. We were stationed at the lower ravines. This is the first time in my experience as a big game hunter that I ever saw big game drives down the mountains. I think this was because the Korean guides were not particularly experienced in the business. In later drives I reversed this system.

In every drive, deer and other small game were plentiful and a few of their tremendously large wild boars were driven down. The Korean wild boar often goes as high as 600 pounds in weight and has tusks 18 inches long. He is a particularly nasty specimen when wounded. In fact, two weeks before at the place a coolie guide had been ripped to pieces by a wounded boar.

Korea, in my opinion, is one of the most interesting shooting trips. The north country abounds in game, tigers, bears, deer, leopards and lynx. As the Korean does little or no hunting himself, the game is not disturbed to any extent. It is a trip next summer to British East Africa and come back next September, and to stop in Korea and southern Siberia on my way back to the states.

Alexandria high school team defeated Glenwood 58 to 16 the other evening, formally opening the new gym in the Alexandria high school. The room is 45x58 with a 20 foot ceiling. A gallery seating over 300 persons encircles the playing floor, thus taking care of the spectators in comfort, and removing all obstructions from the floor.

The Seminary basket ball team will play the team from Windom Institute, Montevideo, at the Seminary gym, on Saturday evening of this week. Judging from the excellent work done by the local team in their first game of the season, they are in for a very successful campaign and expect to use the game Saturday evening as a means of gaining their end.

With the first spike in the district championship driven home the high school basket ball team will go to Litchfield Saturday of this week for a game with the high school team of that place. The memory of two football defeats last fall still rankles in the breasts of local high school students, and the basket ball team will attempt to avenge the ill-fated football team. It is probable the girls' team will take the trip also, and play a preliminary game.

The Willmar and Granite Falls girls teams played a preliminary game Saturday evening, resulting in a 15 to 3 victory for Granite. History repeated itself in this case, as Granite is noted for their girls' basket ball team. The local team was no match for their bigger and more experienced opponents. Mabel Moe and Lydia Dillingham at forwards for the visitors played well.

The guarding of Ethel McKee of the Willmar team was worthy of mention.

The North and East End basket ball teams played at the Seminary on Monday evening. The score was 31-21 in favor of the Northists. The teams put up a good game. Bill Goring and Earl Frye leading in the scoring line for the respective teams. The lineup:

East End: Erickson, F.; Johnson, C.; Lundquist, G.; Kleva, G.; Larson, G. Baskets: Goring, 6; Galliford, 2; Gorchamer, 2; Larson, 2; Frye, 4; Johnson, 2; Lundquist, 3; Fouis, Johnson, 3; Gorchamer, 3.

The Granite Falls high school basket ball team fell before the vicious onslaught of the local team last Saturday evening, at the local gym. Outweighed by their opponents, the visitors fought like tigers for every point, but were unable to make much headway against the defense put up by the Willmar team. On the other hand, the winners, once they started to score, had things pretty much their own way. The first half ended 28 to 2.

The game served as a good tryout for the Willmar team, showing the weaknesses, and strength of the team. The glaring weakness still seems to be an inability to shoot pot shots with any degree of consistency, altho it was a greatly improved team over the one which defeated them the week before. The strength of the team is in their absolute unity of purpose, to score. No one man sacrifices team work for individual ambitions, but on the contrary they work together in fine shape, and their team work Saturday evening was at times, a revelation.

Nelson, Erickson and Severinson were the heavy scorers for Willmar, while the guards did yeoman service in breaking up the visitor's offense.

Interment was made in the nearby cemetery by the side of her husband, who died six years ago. The pall bearers were Otto Holmgren, L. E. Peterson, P. M. Johnson, Ferd Johnson, Gust Ryden and Eddie Lindgren. The floral offerings were many and beautiful.
