

Such tobacco enjoyment

as you never thought could be yours to command quick as you buy some Prince Albert and fire-up a pipe or a home-made cigarette!

PRINCE ALBERT

has a flavor as different as it is delightful. You never tasted the like of it! And that isn't strange, either.

Men who think they can't smoke a pipe or roll a cigarette can smoke and will smoke if they use Prince Albert. And smokers who have not yet given P. A. a try-out certainly have a big surprise and a lot of enjoyment coming their way as soon as they invest in a supply.

SUDDEN DEATH

Dr. S. J. Froshaug Died Suddenly on Sunday Morning at His Home in This City.

Dr. Saxe J. Froshaug died at his residence in this city Sunday morning at 2:30, after a short illness from peritonitis. He was taken sick at his office at about 5:30 Friday afternoon and was moved from there to his residence where he suffered intensely until relieved by death.

The funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon with services at the home at one o'clock and at two o'clock at the Synod church.

Saxe J. Froshaug was born in Lee county, Ill., December 13, 1867, a son of Dr. John O. and Caroline (Hanson) Froshaug. He was the youngest of five children of his parents who were natives of Norway, and his father died in 1889. They were married in Norway, came to America in 1862, lived in Illinois several years, then returned to Norway but only for a temporary residence and did not get here until a few minutes after his father passed away.

Dr. Saxe J. Froshaug was educated in the common schools at Albert Lea, Minn., Lake Park, Minn., and took his medical degree at Chicago in 1895. The following four years were spent in the practice of medicine in the State of Texas, after which he was located in Iowa, where he was in the practice of medicine in the city of Des Moines, Iowa, for several years.

He came among us unobtrusively and entered upon the practice of his profession quietly with no special advertising, but soon was the devoted friend of many of the people in the lower walks of life of a friend whose place no one can fill. Aside from his profession his rugged honesty and friendliness made him well-liked by all who knew him.

In 1895 the Doctor was married to Miss Clara Malmstead, and to this union four children were born—John A., Wendell, Margaret and Helen—Swift County Review.

Card of Thanks. We wish to extend our thanks to all friends of the late Andrea Jeppson for kindness shown him during his illness and for the beautiful flowers contributed for his remembrance at the funeral.

Practical Health Hint. Hemorrhage. In treating hemorrhage the first thing is to find its cause and then try to stop it by local means. What these means are must depend on the state the patient is in and the site of the bleeding.

Lightning Rods. There were no lightning rods in ancient times. The first one that the world ever saw was set up by our own illustrious countryman Benjamin Franklin shortly after the year 1752. He had just had his celebrated experiment with the kite, in which he demonstrated the identity of lightning with electricity, and was therefore prepared for the construction of the rods for which the world had waited so long.

PAYNEVILLE MAY BECOME THE DIVISION POINT

Should Eight Hour Law Be Constitutional? Soo Road May Shorten Division.

Payneville people are indulging in dreams. The inhabitants thereof see bright prospects of the thriving town becoming a division point for the Soo railroad. All this will come about should the eight hour law prove constitutional. Payneville is situated about 85 miles from St. Paul, and should the Soo line decide to shorten the division which would be imperative, Payneville would be the logical point for a division headquarters.

Speaking of that city as a division point the Payneville Press says: As matters now stand Payneville is the best town on the line between the Twin Cities and Glenwood. The North American Creamery Co. ships an immense amount of cream from distant points as well as butter to the Eastern market. In addition to the creamery, we have a most excellent mill, whose wheels are turning night and day, producing the best kind of flour.

Our hospital also cares for patients from the surrounding towns and from long distances. Then we have one of the finest lakes for miles around—an ideal place for the tired and hungry railroad men to spend their leisure hours.

The article last week from the City News stating that the Electric Street, north of the city, would be built through the Marshall and Fairmont before striking Clara City caused Chris Ahlfs to write to the company and find out to the truth of the matter. The company promptly responded stating that the line would be built first towards Clara City and would be pushed as fast as the means and material would be available.—Clara City Herald.

"GINGLES JINGLES"

PUTTING IT OVER.

The Guy that puts it over is the fellow whom we like. He's an earnest, cheerful worker and is bound to make a strike. Things for him are always moving in the way that they should be. He has confidence and hustles; times for him are never slow. He believes in keeping busy; duty calls, he does not shrink, knowing better things will follow if he's faithful to his work. He's the Guy that beats it over, he's the one that wins the prize. He has learned the game and plays it. Plays it hard and plays it wise. His success makes people wonder. Many say it's his good luck. But the one who puts it over, knows it's all hard work and pluck. He has gained success by inches—He has fought hard all the way. Burning midnight oil and planning, while his pals sleep in the hay. You can land the same as he has. You can also get a place, if you care to fight the battles. Winning out will make you face. Get your forces all together. Hit the line and hit it hard. Go on through and put it over. Make your own winning card. Gingles Jingles.

No Danger of That. Mrs. Stubbs—John, no true man will smoke up his wife's curtains. Mr. Stubbs—I should say not. Anybody that smokes curtains would be a freak. I prefer cigars.—Chicago News.

Settling the Score.

Was it envy that caused the elderly spinster to criticize so severely the home and furniture of her newly married friend?

"Well, anyway," she said presently as she pointed to a pretty little china clock, "if you don't like my furniture you must surely like that?"

"Yes; it is rather nice," said the visitor grudgingly. "Who gave it to you?" "Oh, it wasn't a present," explained the bride. "I won it in a raffle."

"A raffle!" The spinster drew her angular figure rigidly up. "I never lend my face to such things!" "Perhaps that's just as well," retorted the younger woman as she gazed meaningfully at the other's sour features, "because if you did I'm afraid nobody would buy the tickets!"—London Globe.

Man.

As a general thing, taken by and large, men are honest—except with themselves. A man will cheat himself or his score at golf, when he knows that falling to set down the full number of strokes does not make him a better golfer.

If he is a fat man and is dieting to reduce he will shove the weight back a pound or two on the scales when he knows in his heart he is heavier than that.

Then he will tell his friends about "going around yesterday in 92" and "taking off a pound and a half in three days" by his diet.

With these two exceptions almost every man is honest. Therefore all you need to do is discount what he says about golf or reducing.—Judge.

Not a Question of Etiquette.

Mrs. Hendricks (the landlady)—Can I help you to some more soup, Mr. Dumley? Mr. Dumley—No, thanks. Mrs. Hendricks (engagingly)—Don't refuse, Mr. Dumley, because it isn't considered good form to be helped twice to soup. We're not particular people here.

He Explains.

"What did you call your silver mine?" "The American Boy." "Any particular reason for calling it by that name?" "Well, it had plenty of pockets, but nothing in them except rubbish."—Kansas City Journal.

By Degrees.

"My dear, isn't that dress a trifle extreme?" "Extreme! Why, I put this on in order that you may become accustomed to the one I am having made."—Judge.

Or'Connell as an Orator.

Few orators have been so fortunate as Daniel O'Connell in their physical appeal to the senses. Grattan, Curran, Emmet, Shell and Meagher were small men, not the least impressive to the eye. O'Connell was a man of royal aspect. His voice was seductively musical—the most musical, according to Disraeli, ever heard in the house of commons.

It was soft, of great compass, capable of expressing every imaginable emotion. His eyes, light in color and full, flashed or beamed or burned, according to the sentiment expressed. His contemporaries all mention the expressibility of his mouth. His gestures were free and bold, not in the least suggestive of elocution and yet infinitely graceful and apt. There was nothing in his manner indicative of preparation. His manner was easy and without effort. Wendell Phillips, who heard him, says in his lecture: "We used to say of Webster, 'This is a great effort,' of Everett, 'It is a beautiful effort,' but you never used the word 'effort' in speaking of O'Connell. It provoked you that he would not make an effort."—"The Irish Orators," by Claude G. Bowers.

The Evil Eye.

It is probable that the "evil eye," for which many hapless old women were hurried to their death on the suspicion of witchcraft in "the good old days," was no more than a common squint, a "cast" in the eye, or "bossing," as it is called in many parts of the country. To this day, writes Dr. N. Bishop Hart, man in the British Journal of Children's Diseases. Not only was the squint thought to be of evil significance, but the defect itself was considered to be the work of evil spirits. In "King Lear" we find the following in the scene on the beach at night: "This is the foul fiend Filibegit; he begins at curfew and walks till the first cock; he gives the wren and the plover, squints the eye and makes the harelip, midwinters the white meat and the burlet, preens the creature of earth."

Know His Man.

George Bubb, better known as Bubb Doodington, one of the wits of the eighteenth century, always dined well and always liked to doze after the repast. Failing asleep one day after dinner with Sir Richard Temple and Lord Cobham, the latter reproached Doodington with his drowsiness. Doodington denied having been asleep and to prove he had not offered to repeat all Lord Cobham had been saying. Cobham challenged him to do so. Doodington repeated a story, and Lord Cobham owned he had been telling it.

"Well," said Doodington, "and yet I did not hear a word of it, but I went to sleep because I knew that about this time of the day you would tell that story."

Lightning Rods.

There were no lightning rods
